The attractive stage arrangement with a colorful display of stoves, ranges, kitchen equipment and utensils made a splendid setting for the demonstration.

The purpose of the cookery classes, it was explained, was not only to bring to women in Belleville and the district ideas in this important phase of home life but also to demonstrate the value and efficiency of cooking done in the modern way.

Mrs. McLean expressed the pleasure at being in Belleville again and asked that she make herself as classes as informal as possible. She invited the large audience to ask any questions or make any comments if they so desired.

Supt.'s Report

Superintendent Thos. D. Ruston presented his report which was adopted. The report read—

"To the 33rd annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society of Belleville and District, Trenton, I am exceedingly happy in presenting my 21st consecutive report to this Society. We are reminded how the years are mounting on, and we are reverently acknowledge the goodness of God in His care and guidance in the many and varied problems which come to our desk.

"The office of this Society might well be described as the Social Service, Child Welfare, and Family Relations Bureau for this district. All classes of people call seeking advise and assistance in regard to social problems of all kinds and we render whatever assistance we can, not when the problem is beyond our jurisdiction, we refer them to those whom we think can aid them.

"There have been some discouragements in the work but in the main the children under our care have made progress and are showing good development.

"We are now entering upon the third year since the Board definitely adopted the policy of boarding children out, and we have no reason to regret the step taken. It has been somewhat trying at times as placed have benefited beyond our expectations, which is fully confirmed by the appearance, health and self-reliance of the children which is manifested in discerning eyes, and it has not been any more costly to the municipalities.

"The visits to foster homes and parents throughout the year are of benefit to the children concerned and an encouragement to the foster parents in their efforts. We appreciate the co-operative spirit of the foster parents and their efforts to study and understand the child they have in their charge. They are in fact, co-workers with us in this great work. May I here express my personal appreciation to the ladies who undertook to visit the homes in which our children are placed, and we trust they will continue in this laudable piece of work. We are also grateful to report that we are able to secure free foster homes for many of the children committed to the Society's care.

Happy Normal Home' Setting

"To place a homeless child in a happy, normal home where it will have the devoted and guidance of good foster parents, and a prospect of later adoption, indeed appeals to both mind and heart as a service of great value.

"The mental deficiencies of a number of children taken into care is a very perplexing problem. While provision is made for the care of subnormal children it will never cease to present difficulty and we will be able to do more and better work for the normal child. At present we have approximately twenty-six (26) school age children who are mentally retarded and in urgent need of this special training.

"Investigation is primarily dealing with prevention and our efforts are always directed towards retaining for children the natural relationships and relationship of life in their own homes. To not only save children from a debased life but to give them opportunity to grow into worthy citizenship has always been our aim in all our contacts.

Social Ills

"We would be able to deal more devastating blow to social ills in our community if we had more time and assistance—we have only been able to attend to deal adequately with the problem of keeping families together rather than remove them. While there are some instances where removal is the best for some of the children removed from their parents, we feel that in the majority of cases more whose case we believe could be efficiently dealt with in their own homes. I leave this thought with you and the public in general as constructive preventive services in this community.

"Perhaps the most difficult problem of being asked to take children into our care when it is not in the best interests of the child, the sole question is one of relief. It should be clearly understood that this society is strictly not a relief organization, but rather an agency for relief authorities, in the municipality in which they reside.

Make Loans Possible

"During the year we have investigated 154 major cases, of which 102 court attendances, 366 office interviews regarding this section of the work. 312 children were involved, and out of this number 26 were placed temporary wards, and 10 permanent wards of the society. Eight wardships were extended for a further period.

"UNMARRIED PARENTS ACT—This Statute has made it possible for the expenditure of a great deal of time and money, and to take the responsibility for tracing, interviewing, and trying to obtain a settlement with the putative father of children born out of wedlock. Unless he is willing to enter an agreement, this means court action, and where this succeeds, we assist in the collection for maintenance for such children, and the money is transferred to the Ontario Department of Public Welfare, Toronto, for administration. During the year there were 24 new cases, entailing 107 visits. There were 260 office interviews, and 26 supervisory visits to mothers and children. Nine (9) settlements were made and three (3) court orders obtained. We may point out that it is not our policy to relieve the mother of her own responsibility, but to help her retain custody and care for her own child.

Adoptions

"ADOPTION—Under the Adoption Act there is the gathering together and issuing of all legal documents and presenting the application for the court-for ratification. During the year we have completed 14 adoptions and we derive great satisfaction from having a share in this beneficial legislation. The child must reside in the home for two years before adoption can be fully consummated. When we think of the homes made happy by these children it gives one an added opportunity of thanking God for opening the hearts of men and women to receive these little children into their homes.

"OFFICE—We have been and are re-arranging our files to come up to the requirements of the new regulations in respect to how records must be kept and you can visualize what this means when we have gone back to the first record in the year 1908. Here I would like to express my sincere appreciation of the service rendered by Miss Bird my assistant, who has co-operated with me in the most and efficiently carried out the duties allotted to her. There were approximately 936 office interviews and 1460 telephone calls during the year—also approximately 1460 letters received and 1580 sent out. Your superintendent can correct approximately 15,000 miles in the dispatch of his duties.

"In conclusion we wish to express our sincere thanks to Mr. R. R. McBride, the President, to Mr. Howard Frost, the Treasurer, and Mrs. J. A. McPee, Recording Secretary, also the Executive Committee and Board of Directors for their splendid co-operation and assistance without which we would not have been able to carry on so successfully.

"We mention particularly the work of Dr. Bird who has given a great deal of his time to safeguard the health of the children. Also the Child Welfare Committee who have unfailingly assisted in the selection of homes for our wards. And to the clothing Committee who duties have been greatly increased these past two years, rendering the society aid in the kindliest assistance. To the Matron who have rendered such excellent service during the past year would take too long, but in closing we assure a cordial welcome and ask the co-operation of all in their organizations, Women's Institutes, etc., in the giving of practical assistance to families where children are involved, to help raise the standard of living and keep parents from becoming discouraged, being ever inspired by Him who said: 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto Me'."

Ruston presented the following statistics the year's activities: No. complaints investigated 154; No. visits 200; No. court attendances 102; No. children involved 312; No. children made permanent wards 10; No. children made temporary wards 32, No. wardships extended 8; No. wards in Shelter (beginning of year) 10; No. wards in Shelter (end of year) 8; No. days care in Shelter 1990; No. wards in boarding homes (beginning of year) 65; No. wards in boarding homes end of year) 70; No. days care in boarding homes 26,946; No. wards in free homes (beginning of year) 90; No. wards in free homes (end of year) 86; No. wards sent to training schools (wards) 1 girl, 3 boys, (non-wards) 2 girls, 1 boy. Merle Oberon, Brian Aherne in "Beloved Enemy," Ruby Keeler in "Ready, Willing and Able"

Merle Oberon and David Niven whose real-life romance has thrilled their countless fans, are cast together on the silver screen for the first time in Samuel Goldwyn's "Beloved Enemy," which begins a two day engagement at the Belle tomorrow (Thursday) matinee daily.

Brian Aherne is starred opposite Merle as the successful lover of the film story, however, while Niven is cast as the romantic man who loves her but for whom she feels only a sisterly affection.

The thrilling romance is carried on under fire, with both risking their lives to snatch a few hours together.

Karen Morley, Henry Stephenson and Jerome Cowan are featured with Niven in the supporting cast, while others prominently cast are Donald Crisp, Ray Mould the promising child actor, Granville Bates, Tef O'Malley, Jack Mulhall, Tom Moore, Wyndham Standing, David Torrence and Colin Kenny Elke.

"Ready, Willing and Able"

Delightfully tuneful with a gorgeous dash of lilting melody, a romantic story with an unusual twist, and with musical numbers, "Ready, Willing and Able," is another sparkling entertainment feature at the Belle tomorrow and Friday.

With a cast headed by the charming Ruby Keeler and ebullient Lee Dixon, supported by such well known players as Chester Conklin, Winifred Shaw, Allen Jenkins, Louise Fazenda, and a bevy of beautiful Bobbe Connelly girls, "Ready, Willing and Able" is bound to be one of the most critical theatre goer and prove a highly profitable investment in entertainment.

Miss Keeler has never appeared lovelier, nor has she shown to better advantage in the two dancing numbers in which she appears. With her dancing partner, is Lee Dixon, raggy, young eccentric hoofer a combination of fine dancing and screwball "find."

The typewriter number, staged by Bobby Connolly and danced by Miss Keeler and Dixon, assisted by a chorus of typewriters, is perhaps the most spectacular ever filmed and sets a new high in originality.

Louise Fazenda, Hugh O'Connell, and Allen Jenkins in the chief comedy roles strike a new high in laugh records.

Richard Whiting and Johnny Mercer have contributed a delightful score, with half a dozen hits in the hit class. The best of these is "Too Marvelous for Words," which you are certain to hear played and sung in theatres and dance halls all over the air for the next weeks to come. Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.00, the last performance starts 9.30. "Where's My Beloved Enemy" starts at 2.30 and 8.30 p.m. "Ready, Willing and Able" at 4.45, 7.00 and 9.50.

"Seventh Heaven," Starring Simone Simon

Another of the new screen star who rose to fame in her first American picture, "Seventh Heaven," featuring Jean Hersholt, Gregory Ratoff and Gale Sondergaard (Academy Award winner), Henry King, recently represented by "Lloyds of London," directed the film, which is based on the famous stage play by Austin Strong. A very interesting Metrotone Newsreel and one of the funniest Comedies of the month titled "Record of Education," completes a splendid program that should not be missed.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Head Over Heels in Love"

Dark-eyed Jessie Matthews, the Dancing Divinity of "It's Love Again" and "Evergreen," produces one of the most talked about artists of the year in her new song and dance comedy, "Head Over Heels in Love," now playing the Capitol as his No. 1. The piquant actress gets under way as the temperamental prima donna of the Paris Ballet. But she always manages to pull a whole raft of unfavorable publicity because of her weakness for having sensational scandals on the boulevards of the exciting capital.

It is from that she loses both her impecunious sweetheart and a prize fat radio contract. Then she is befriended and involved with an international movie enchantress by the name of Lili Damita, and a dynamic-about-town admirer. With complications seething, the audience pulls a disappearing act. When she finally turns up again she is married to Sebastian, is all set for a peaceful and happy end-of-picture, but manages to get another furore by getting two men jailed and a third one wondering if it really pays to be in love with a lady who is always in the headlines.

It is, of course, the glamorous and show-stopping Jessie who is the centre of all this merry melange which unwinds its fast-moving action in the streets of Montparnasse, along the famous Boulevard de Boulogne and against the glittering splendiferous of one night Paris night clubs. And it's Jessie with her usual gaiety, verve and charm who puts over the Gordon and Revel song hits and the knock-out new dance routines.

From which you can gather that it's a sparkling story about sparkling people.

"Paradise Express"

Sharp-witted Maud Eburne and squeaky-voiced Arthur Hoyt, the well-known "hen-pecked husband" of the screen make a hilarious comedy pair in "Paradise Express," super-drama of railroad life which now is presenting Grant Withers, Dorothy Appleby and other players at the Capitol Theatre at 8pt No. 2 on this grand double bill. Miss Eburne, real name Mrs. Fred "Ma Pettingill" screen roles, plays the Irish owner of a small hotel in Winchester, while Hoyt, soon as a mousy little office clerk, assays the role of her suitor. Between their fighting, wordy sparring, and attempted romancing provides endless laughs throughout this gripping picture.

"Paradise Express" is the down-to-earth and absorbing story of human struggle between the operators of a nearly bankrupt old railroad line and those building an opposing line and those building an opposing line. It is filled with the pulse of life, the adventure of railroading, the fascinating sounds of shrieking express whistles and screaming steel brakes, and the strong spirit of community battling to save its industries and its existence.

Four Hurlers Make Comeback After Lay Down For Two Years

Weaver And Al Simmons Had Too Much on Ball For Yankees

(By Scotty Reston)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, April 21—(AP)—Eight pitchers, all of whom had more or less fallen from glory in the past two years, were back on top today as the result of yesterday's opening games of the 1937 baseball season.

These four, Darrell Elijah (Cy) Blanton of Pittsburgh, Hal Schumacher of the New York Giants, Elden Auker of the Detroit Tigers and Monte Weaver of the Washington Senators, turned in some of the most sparkling feats on the first game program which attracted a total of 115,000 cash customers.

The seventh game on the general opening slate, which followed Monday's postponed tilts, was rained out. Chicago's White Sox and the St. Louis Browns, weather permitting, will make their debuts today.

Has Tricky Sinker

Blanton came up from Albany two years ago with a tricky sinker and a lot of confidence. He won 18 and lost 13 that year and had the boys talking about what he'd do with a little experience. He suffered last season from the second-armitis breakdown, that afflicts many star Rookies and his earned run average bopped from 3.59 to 3.51.

In spite of that, Manager Pie Traynor shot Blanton into the opener against the Chicago Cubs yesterday, and Cy pitched a five-hit shutout to win 5-0 and send Pirate hopes soaring.

Schumacher, another sinker ball expert, won 19 and lost 9 two seasons back. But he started with a sore arm out of joint on every pitch and last year the trouble, the boys and the dinners had predicted from him came along. Although "Prince Hal" couldn't remember the last time his arm, he complained that his right elbow bothered him and the Giant medical doctors busy tinkering with it.

Holds Dodgers Safe

Even during the 1935 World Series, Schumacher didn't have his old control. Rod Is was there for the 1937 opener and Hal limited the Dodgers to four hits. The Brooklyn-Giant rivalry was renewed before 31,391 fans. In addition he drove in the winning run that beat brought the Giants a 4 to 3 victory.

Auker, 28, is the big fan, also was at his best in 1935, when he won 18 and lost only 7, but slumped last year when the Detroit club "submarine" delivery had taken its toll on his arm. He got the second chance because both Schoolboy Rowe and Tommy Bridges were ill, limited Cleveland to nine hits and won 4-3, when Gerald Walker thrilled 38,000 customers with a wild clouting show.

Weaver, a star in 1932, slid clear back to Albany three years later. He returned to the Senators last year and showed so much improvement he was named to oppose the Yankees before the 45,850 crowd that turned out for New York's opener. It subdued the World Champions in all but one inning and came through with a 3-2 decision when Al Simmons contributed something of a comeback himself, nicked Lefty Gomez for three hits, including a home run.

Blanton Blanks Reds

One of the largest crowds in the history of Cincinnati's Crosley Field 24,371, set by Reds' pitchers, ed for 13 hits, blank the Reds for 10 innings and emerge with a 1 to 0 decision, when Joe Medwick and Johnny Mize connected for successive doubles off Ray (Peaches) Davis. Lippy Leo Durocher singled and Gabbett scored. Ogrodowski dropped a long fly into the outfield.

The Philadelphia Athletics, who led the American League for whole day, came back to normal. when three pitchers failed to check the attack of the Boston Red Sox and the gold-platters won 11 to 5.

EDMONTON GRADS HOLD GAME LEAD

Cleveland Fisher Foods Defeated 50-24 For Title

Edmonton, April 23—(CP)—Edmonton Grads held a game lead over Cleveland Fisher Foods today in their best-of-five series for the International Women's Basketball Championship and the Underwood Trophy held by Percy Page's famous Edmonton team since 1923.

Although somewhat below shooting form, Grads clobbered the beaver Cleveland team 50—24 in the series opener here last night. They meet again tomorrow.

Cleveland was outscored 14—6 in the first quarter and were never in contention after that as the midget Canadians raced around and under the arms of their slower opponents.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE ARIETY

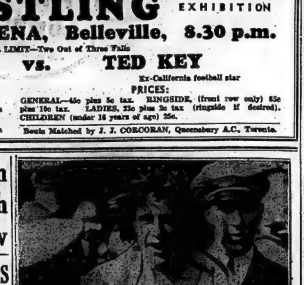
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, April 21—(AP)—Hey, still tops. Babe Ruth visited the Yankee Stadium yesterday and stole the show right away from the Yanks and Senators. He got the biggest hand of the day, when he walked into his box.

In the fourth inning, the great man crashed across the railing and snagged a foul off Frank Crosetti's bat. He chuckled as he stowed it away in his hip pocket, just like any other Yankee fan.

o—o—o

Opening day notes: Frank Hogan, Washington catcher and Wilson Brown, Yankee pitcher, the biggest men in baseball, posed for pictures together. Something Hogan would never do before because he was so bashful. Brown, however, likes to show you how he has reduced.



Bill Dickey, Yankee catcher hinting Willard Mullins, crack cartoonist of the World Telegram, said: "The official attendance was 67,850." In the seventh it was announced as 45,850. Willard must be slipping.

o—o—o

When the parade to the flagpole passed the right field bleachers, 3,000 fans began to chant: "We want Ruffing." Col. Rupert's blood "bristled," as they say in Brooklyn.

C.A.H.A. "A Great Power" in Hockey Delegates Told

Toronto, April 21.—(CP)—Smooth waters that have run under the bridge so far seemed unlikely to become stormed-tossed today as the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association moved into the last day of its three-day annual meeting.

A few constitution and by-law changes remain to be voted on and delegates will hold election of officers but these articles on business promised to be run off as smoothly as other proposals adopted in the last two days.

A bulging bank account, barring its foundation in the financial success of the just completed Allan and Memorial Cup Series helped put members of the nine C.A.H.A. branches in the right frame of mind. A banner year in playdowns and cup finals stuffed $34,623 more dollars into a reserve fund, which dwindled to $6,566 during the past few years.

President Cecil Duncan of Ottawa said yesterday that the C.A.H.A. was considered "a great power" in International Hockey and he considered a delegate from the Association would be sent each year to the annual meeting of the International Ice Hockey League, with which the C.A.H.A. now is affiliated.

C.A.H.A. A Real Power

Duncan said I.I.H.L. officials had admitted if Canada was better situated geographically it probably would have greater power in the International Federation, headed by President Loicq of Paris and looked on as amateur hockey's head body.

For the most part it was financial routine that occupied the time of delegates yesterday afternoon. One point that mingled finance with direct Association with the sport was adopted, however, when the President was given power, according to where he thought financial returns would most benefit the C.A.H.A., to designate the date Allan Cup games will be held.

Present slate of C.A.H.A. officers are Cecil Duncan, Ottawa, president; W. G. Hardy, Edmonton, first vice-president; George Dudley, Midland, Ont., second vice-president; H. Marples, Toronto, Secretary; W. A. Hewitt, Toronto, registrar-treasurer. Post of Chairman of the Finance Committee, held for the past year by Claude Robinson, Winnipeg, was abolished at the present meeting with the place to be filled by the President.

SUDBURY TIGERS DEFEAT HERSHEY IN TITLE SERIES

Senior Champions Show Form in Downing U. S. Squad

Charlie Teno Injured But Comes Back to Star

Toronto, April 21—(CP)—Hershey Bears' chances of winning Toronto's international amateur hockey tourney may go out the window tonight, when the United States champions play their third game of the round-robin series, Bears tackle Winnipeg Monarchs, Canadian junior champions, and they're already lost to Wembley Lions of England to Sudbury Tigers.

Sudbury, just back from winning the Dominion senior title over North Battleford, showed championship form last night in defeating Hershey 5-2. The Bears led 1-0 at the end of the first period but Tigers went ahead 2-1 in the second and the eventual losers didn't score again until nearly 14 minutes of the third period had passed.

The crowd, numbering less than 1,000 was the worst of the poorly-attended series. The game, however, was the best and Bears made the Allan Cup winners play top-notch hockey to win. Diving about in his net, Sudbury's goalie, Charlie Teno, was injured when his game back to smother nearly everything that came his way.

Pit Ace Score First

Matt Kelly, former Guelph junior put the United States team ahead five times ahead after six minutes of the first period, combining with Bill Price, forward-line mates, Mancuso and Hill, assisted by Cowan and Hastie, gave Sudbury the lead it never relinquished.

Price and Dewey, assisted by Dewey and Gross respectively, increased Sudbury's lead to 4-1 in the third period. Kelly got his second goal of the night when nearly three-quarters of the Tigers' final game but Tigers came right back and Chollet, who scored an unassisted goal to complete proceedings.

JERSEY GIANTS EXPECT 35,000

Toronto Maple Leafs Open At Baltimore on Thursday

New York, April 21—(AP)—The second-oldest baseball league is set for the opening of its 54th and perhaps its most successful season tomorrow.

Only the National League antedates the International, oldest of the minors in continuous operation since 1884. This year, with Jersey City's Giants the only newcomers, five clubs working hard to keep a big step in front.

The return of minor baseball to Jersey City, one of the most enthusiastic of baseball towns with a new stadium to take care of the customers and the New York Giants to provide support and playing talent, is the main factor in the prosperity that is expected.

With fair weather tomorrow, a crowd of 35,000 is expected to turn out at Roosevelt Stadium to see the Jersey Giants open against the Rochester Red Wings. The present league attendance record is 19,304, when the Giants and Dodgers played a double-header at Newark while Ebbets Field was being remodelled the opening day record of 19,006.

Another 19,000 throng is expected at Revere Park, Providence, when the Montreal Royals start the season. The Buffalo Bisons and Syracuse Chiefs, neighborly rivals, look for 10,000 customers at Syracuse while the Baltimore Orioles expect at Baltimore when the orioles, premature pennant favorites because of their power, try their bludgeons against the Toronto Maple Leafs.

KATAN TAKES ON TOUGH BOY IN KEY

Fans Will Enjoy Rough Tactics of Strack Also on Card

John Katan, former Canadian wrestling champion, is still opposed Ted Key of California in the main bout of tomorrow night's show at the Belleville Arena, according to the last main event provided here by Promoter Jack Corbin. Charlie Strack, that was last July, when Katan opposed Hal Rumbourg. After losing the first fall, Rumbourg refused to come back and Katan was declared the winner by default in the one-hour time limit.

Ted Key, the present champ will be meeting a wrestler noted for his speed and dynamic aggressiveness. Some of the latter have never pressed Key to Joe Savoldi because of his aggressiveness, while others refer to him as another Londos, the reason being that he is built very much on the lines of the famous Greek.

Charlie Strack of Boston, who is in the semi-final against Henry Graber, German champion, has twice met Dan O'Mahony during his European tour last fall. The first was a draw in Dublin, while 40,000 saw them in a return bout in Belfast, Ireland when the fans incensed at Strack's rough tactics, stormed the ring and carried it out of position.

Jim Coffield, a beautifully-built athlete who is a newcomer any place, meets Henri Piers, Holland, to open the show.

Who said there were signs of a depression? Not the C.A.H.A., we'll gamble. C. O. Robinson, Winnipeg, secretary of finance of the C.A.H.A., announced yesterday that a record net profit of $34,421.00 had been handed to the Dominion hockey body during the current play-downs in the Allan and Memorial Cup series, leaving the C.A.H.A. with a nice little bank balance of $40,423.00, not a bad nest egg, what? Eastern Canada contributed $18,471.00 in Allan and Memorial Cup play-downs, while the east's contribution was $15,-952.00. The largest individual amount was taken in the Winnipeg-Copper Cliff junior series, when $9,750.00 was given the C.A.H.A. for their share. Calgary produced $8,192.00 net profit in the Sudbury-North Battleford series, however. We understand the C.A.H.A. made a good deal for the finalists in the two major Dominion series.

Lacrosse clubs from Oshawa, Peterboro, Port Hope, R.C.A.F., Norwood and Belleville have been invited to convene in Port Hope on Friday night next to form a Central Ontario Intermediate O.A. L.A. group. The invitations to the clubs named above were issued through Peterboro but seemingly they forgot to include Cobourg in the set-up. We wonder why? After Belleville's form a group, Cobourg might include Trenton, the Littlest City lacrosse moguls were happy that it took such a "big village class," as the Peterboro pessimists describe Belleville, to get a club. The local gutted-stick artists will be represented at Port Hope by F. Pressland, Jim Coffield, Bill Fry and Coach Harry Moore will be playing for a six-team club if a game to sponsor a harness race meet in Belleville this summer?

Harness racing used to be a popular sport around this neck of the woods, we wonder if there are those sufficiently interested in the game to sponsor a harness race meet in Belleville this summer?

Jackie Forbes, Canada's well known and popular wrestling referee, has been engaged as the third man in the wrestling at Queensbury A.C. wrestling show at the Toronto Maple Leafs Arena. Promoter J. J. Corcoran announced that Forbes was always a welcomed official in Belleville as he stands for no "monkey-shines" and takes no back talk from the more pugnacious type wrestlers. Forbes has become nearly, if he was, middleweight champion of Canada, and was always good at seeing a wicked right, especially when arguing with some of these rough wrestling heathens.

Henry Graber, who meets Charlie Strack, the Boston villain here in the arena, is called by many as the best German wrestler ever produced. When Dick Shikat was recognized as the champion of the world, Graber claims he ran Shikat out of Hilerland. Graber being the German titleholder and clamoring for a bout with Shikat to go Shikat toured Europe, but evaded a bout with Graber, he strongly contends. In Strack, however, Graber faces one of the best men in the business. The former Boston grappler being a wrestler of the old school.

With increased interest being shown in game fishing around these parts and the extensive development of restocking being done throughout district waters, local anglers naturally will take to plug and fly casting for their outside diversion this summer. In order to prepare for the fast approaching and appealing fishing season, the Quinte Anglers Association is conducting a casting school for beginners and boys commencing this evening at the armouries. All are welcome and those needed is a rod, reel and plug. Proficient instructors will assist those attending.

On Monday night a delegation of Quinte Anglers will journey to Picton, where they will attend a meeting with the providing of an adequate diamond upon which to play that popular summer time pastime. A certain parcel of land has been donated by Mr. W. McCreary, but it will be need of repair. If the local lacrosse fraternity would bend together with the sportsmen and present their wants and desires for a city playing field, undoubtedly the powers that would could provide weight. It has long been a known fact that Belleville baseball diamond is just about the worst in Eastern Ontario. A real baseball playing field is slightly north of Bird Coleman Field. It would be an ideal baseball stadium site.

The old dope bucket received a severe jolt yesterday when the two teams, favorites really strong into action, the Detroit Tigers being the choice of many, were forced down smiling in victory. Every home club disappointed the home crowd by losing. Even the vocalized Brooklyn New York Yankees losing to Washington where Al Simmons, ex-Athletic-Tiger slugger smashed out a home run. Now to drive in two runs and account for Lefty Gomez's first loss of the season. Across the river in Platsburgh, however, Bill Terry's Giants plastered Van Mungo and the Dodgers, despite the pre-season bulphoo of a new and better Brooklyn team. Of course one swallow does not make a summer, so nasally one need not expect a pennant does not win, so say them all.

Instead of the numerical 2 which was formerly worn on his uniform, Manager Bill Terry of the New York Giants has taken the figure five. As in newspaper and photographers' parlance, means "the works" "the last, all" and so on, it may be appropriate in view of Bill's long-awaited intention to seek a post on the bench this season.

It looks like curtains for the Kennedy Twins in the world's baseball series here. Herbie Mitchell's crowd losing to the Allan Cup holding Sudbury Tigers by the score of 5-3 last night. Incidentally Jake Tyrrell, former member of baseball clubs in Picton saw the Sudbury Tigers in action at Winnipeg Monarchs the other evening. The smoothest amateur hockey team I ever saw was Mr. Yanovey's comment after the game. "Why they could have scored twice as many had they been pressed hard. Unless the Sudbury Tigers are an outstanding senior club it looks like the Lions for the honors, really the most classy informed hockey speaker and we can readily visualize Mr. Yanovey's predictions.

POLICE PREPARE FOR CORONATION WARN SUSPECTS

London to Have 20,000 Men on Duty Tagging Undesirables And Directing Traffic in Merry and Hectic May

By THOMAS T. CHAMPION

Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—The thousands thronging to London from all parts of the world for the Coronation of King George and Queen Elizabeth next month will undoubtedly include many questionable characters. Police have long been making careful preparations for their reception.

Sir Philip Game, chief commissioner of the metropolitan police force and his staff officers at Scotland Yard have been busy with traffic and other preparations for at least twelve months. All holiday leave for the police will be stopped for practically the whole of May. Every fit man of the 20,000 comprising the great police-keeping army will be on duty in his particular capacity.

Control of the traffic and crowds is the biggest job. The force will be guided to a great extent by experiences at the funeral of George V last year. The Coronation procession will traverse a good part of the route taken on that occasion so the police already know where the greatest density of spectators may be expected. At the funeral of King George, for instance, the press at Hyde Park corner was so immense the gravest apprehensions were felt the cortege would be overwhelmed.

Out of the most intricate among police preparations for the Coronation is concerned with the supervision of questionable characters of all classes, who might attempt to enrich themselves at the expense of the sightseers. These characters range from the common pickpocket to the slick international crook known to the police in every capital of Europe.

Within the last few months many of these spotted in London have been informed it will be better for their health and liberty if they keep away from London during May. If they appear and are discovered in circumstances approaching the compromising they will be arrested under a useful clause as "suspected persons." Incidentally the dossiers at Scotland Yard are perfectly encyclopaedic concerning the criminals of the world at large.

Little Fear of Trouble.

Members of foreign royal houses visiting London will be accompanied by their personal detectives, and all the larger countries will send in addition experienced officers well versed in the ways of the European underworld.

In London there is never any great fear of a distinguished personage meeting injury or death as the result of an assault on the occasion of a national pageant. The immensity of the crowd is in itself a safeguard against such a happening. Every man, or woman too, for that matter, is a potential special constable, and any malignant or ill-balanced person daring to disturb the peace would be dealt with promptly by his nearest neighbors.

Proof of this was furnished when last summer a feeble attempt was made to present a revolver at the former King Edward on Coronation Day following the trooping of the colors. The most thought possible in the direction of that lone lunatic, otherwise harmless, may break loose—which may result merely in jeopardizing his own life at the hands of indignant beholders.

N. Y. State Proposes To Assume Partial Childbirth Expenses

Albany, N.Y., April 20.—(AP) —A Bill by which New York would defray $75 of the cost of each childbirth in the state had passed the Assembly today and awaited action by the Senate after approval by Governor Lehman. The payments would be made to doctors and hospitals.

The Bill survived a hot debate last night by a vote of 81 to 65. Its leading defendant was Dr. Emerson D. Fite professor of Political Science at Vassar College for Women and Assemblyman for Dutchess County, the home of President Roosevelt.

Criticism was aimed chiefly at the inclusion of all births—to king, queen or alien, and unmarried mothers—under the terms of the measure.

By the terms of the Bill, the $75 would be paid only if mothers make application before the fourth month of pregnancy and receive medical care thereafter. Payments would be made by cities and towns. The State later would reimburse them for half of the expenses.

Deep sea fishing in the Bay of Islands, 1937; the prize is a shark.

Both before and after the tour of Australia which was rescinded not last article, the duke showed his ability and enjoyment in the sport of deep sea fishing. Mainland waters dislike at home were hardly conducive to making him an ardent disciple of Izaak Walton even had the opportunity in his native land offered, but once afloat with rod and line time on his hands between the well-planned routine that was necessary even aboard ship for the royal prince to adequately cope with the fish that made upon him, he tried his hand at fishing like most other red-blooded ocean lovers.

The waters around New Zealand abound in fighting fish, and that his majesty was not entirely unsuccessful in seeking these denizens of the deep deep today's picture proves. His prize of a shark is being pulled in while deep-sea fishing in the Bay of Islands. It is also recorded in the story of the Renown's passage to and from the island dominions that the royal party or its leaders had any spectacular fish in their fishing vocation, but the duke enjoyed the sport to the full.

In Australia he had hunted, fishing with great gusto in a kangaroo hunt staged for his benefit and had enjoyed riding and roping with the cowboys in Queensland. Both he and the Duchess were naturally anxious to get back to England where their infant daughter awaited them. Even the return journey was not without notable incidents.

The Renown ran into a terrific tempest in the Australian Bight and for hours the sturdy warship battled her way slowly through mountainous seas. Then a fire broke out in her oil bunkers with the nearest land a thousand miles behind her. Battle cruiser as she was her magazines were kept loaded and it was a trying ordeal until the fire was placed under control and the danger of a tragic explosion averted. The royal couple shared both the excitement and the relief.

Hitler is Hailed By Massed Might Of German Army

Berlin, Apr. 20 (AP)—Chancellor Hitler, hailed on his 48th birthday by the massed might of the German army he has revealed, was believed today to be ready to join in calling a halt to the crushing world armaments race.

Foreign observers considered the German army finally had reached a strength satisfactory to Der Fuehrer, as demonstrated today by the greatest military review ever staged in the German capital.

They drew their conclusions from two things:

Hitler's statement yesterday that "Germany would be very willing to partake of a United Effort to revive, spent Tuesday in Tweed.

Mrs. (Dr.) Fergus O'Connor, of Kingston, spent the past week with her son, Dr. Maurice O'Connor and family here.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Houston of Belleville, were in town on Saturday.

Mr. Alfred La Valley has accepted a position with the Johnston Outboard Motor Company of Peterborough.

Miss Rebecca Porritt visited Mr. Reginald Hagerman's family who is a motor accident. Mr. Leworthy's condition is showing steady improvement.

Rev. Louis Pickering, B.A., of Bayside United Church, was the special preacher at Tweed United Church on Sunday. Rev. R. H. Nicholson occupied the Barrie United Church pulpit.

tree planting to be held on Coronation Day—S. H. Connor, C. H. Kerr and Dr. Paul. An effort is being made to plant trees generally to plant trees on that day as well as any suitable time during the year.

"But, we're married," stammered the groom-to-be.

"Tell it to the Judge," was Nollmann's reply. Mr. and Mrs. Nollmann reside in Orillia, Ont. And just that. They reminded County Judge Boyce Carscallen in the early last March 27 he gave them a "talking to" and then dismissed them.

"We were only admiring the view," Mrs. Thurston explained.

Buffalo, N.Y., April 20 (CP)—Emergency hospital reported it was treating a gunshot victim. Patrolman raced in. The fatally William Gilbert, 43, had a bowed thumb, no more. He had been demonstrating a pistol to his son, Gilbert.

It hung for a watch fob and was 1 1-4 inches long.

100 YEAR NEGRESS BURIED AT SIMCOE

Son Who Fought Against Eviction of Mother At tends Funeral

Simcoe, Ont., Apr.19 (CP)—Mrs. Mahala Grandason, 100-year-old negro woman, at one time a slave in the south, was buried today in Woodwood Cemetery. Her son, Charles, who fought against eviction of his mother from their home, stood silently by the grave as the body of his aged mother was lowered.

Death of Mrs. Grandason halted a supreme court case surrounding Grandason's struggle to maintain his mother's home. The case was halted as the son attended the funeral with Mrs. F. Cox of Detroit, his only sister.

With his mother's death, Grandason announced he was ready to abide by authorities' rulings and leave the home. He maintained during the fight that he was not in condition to be moved. Now he has waited for $125 with the plaintiff, D. E. Kelly, Simcoe.

Indianapolis, April 20 (CP) — Neighbors complained that Homer H. French, 47, made too much noise when he awakened his son every morning. The judge imposed a fine and advised him to try to awaken his son if the young man was so hard to rouse. French's technique was sounding his car's horn.

DAILY SHORT STORY

The Old People's Dance

By Jane Osborn

Larry Minton of the class of 1930, heaved a deep sigh as he sprawled on a divan in the fraternity lounge and told Jed McGee of the class of 1931 that he could count him out of the dance that night at the Dawson girls' that night.

"But Allen Dawson told me to bring a couple of fellows along with me, and I thought you sorta liked Daphne," said Jed McGee.

Larry replied to the latter sentiment with a monosyllabic "Huh-huh" and in answer to the former objection told Jed he had to go to an "old people's dance" at the country club. Professor Kellogg's with whom Larry was limping through a course of geology, had asked Larry and a number of other members of his classes to attend.

"I'm getting through Geology 4, said Larry, "or at least I'm improving my chance. Old, Kellogg and Professor Smith are giving a dance. I got a little inside dope on the subject—Kellogg's rather taken with some old Jane that teaches geology in a girls' college somewhere—and asked down visiting one of the prof's wives and old Kellogg and this other bird Smith are giving the dance. Some dance! Oh boy! And he wants me to go because he said some of the prof's bad sisters and profs sometimes have dancing there."

"Gee whiz," said Jed McGee, and then, "Oh boy. What gets me is how when a man gets as old as Kellogg he can get any kick out of dancing with an old girl that teached geology in a woman's college?"

"Same here," said Larry, "I suppose Kellogg is anyway thirty-eight —and I don't suppose the girl is a spring chicken thirty."

Larry had somehow expected that the arrival of himself and the five other extras would cause more commotion in the ranks of the old folks assembled at the country club for Professor Kellogg's dance. At least he thought that eyes would turn furtively in their direction and that he would feel the undercurrent of approval of their faultless evening clothes in contrast to the rather "denoted" attire of the gentlemen of the faculty. But unfortunately these gentlemen looked rather spruce and no one even noticed the arrival of the faultless-attired young men. The women most of them—were what Larry had described as "old women in a low-cut, casting wide gown backed against him as he entered the reception room and made him feel entirely hatch-faced. But perspiring and too-ample shoulder he observed a really glorious appetizer. And too wore a gleaming low-cut gown, but she was proportioned like a goddess she was radiantly fair.

Larry worked his way up to Professor Kellogg, followed by the other extras, and when "Old Kellogg" turned to him, Larry asked, "Where do we begin?"

Old Kellogg laughed, "Don't tred to begin till the music starts," he said—"that is unless you want to begin. I'd appreciate it enormously if you'd glance around and if there are any ladies who aren't dancing —ask them. I'll introduce you if I am at liberty but they'll probably find you are students."

Larry danced valiantly with leftovers until the fifth intermission and then bravely he walked over to where the beautiful blond girl was standing and boldly started in talking to one of the younger professors whose name he did not know. Even more boldly he suggested to the young professor that he would like to be presented "to the—h-young girl in white." And having mustered his nerve he was duly presented. Then Larry did something still more bold: he asked the lovely girl for the next dance and was rewarded with the news that she would "try to split the dance after next."

At last he had her in his arms and had the chance to tell her that he had never expected to meet her like at this "old people's dance."

"I suppose you're visiting one of the profs," he suggested. "Maybe you'd come over to the frat house for tea?" he ventured, and then, "I've simply got to know more about you, young lady. Do you go to college or anything? We've just got to get you down for the next day."

The last half of the last dance Larry spooned at her side. "You've got to give me just half of this last half," he implored. "Old Kellogg's appointed and the lovely girl smiled adorably at Larry, told him she was sorry and glided off with the old professor. Larry, filled with jealous rage, stood where the girl had left him. Later when the girl and her partner stopped dancing next to sit beside a potted palm tree, Larry—wicked eavesdropper—walked slowly between the palm trees and the wall.

"And you really are willing to give up your work—and marry me?"

"Silly old dear," said the lovely girl, "Of course I am."

TABERNACLE CHOIR PRESENTS PAGEANT IN NAPANEE HALL

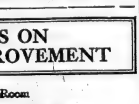
Napanee, April 20.— A musical event, very unique in character, which consisted of the presentation of a "Musical Pageant of Nations" was exceptionally well received by a capacity audience in the town hall, last week and was given by the choir of the Tabernacle United Church of Belleville of which Mrs. F. J. Bradley is the leader and Mrs. M. P. Daly is the organist, the latter proving an ideal accompanist for the presentation.

The event was sponsored by the Women's Association of Trinity United Church, of which Mrs. H. H. Henderson is the president and the members of the committee who had in charge the arrangements were delighted with the splendid response to the sale of tickets and the very fine patronage.

This was the fifth time that the choir has been presented and Mrs. Bradley who arranged the music and costumes also directed the acting.

In addition to her duties as accompanist, Mrs. Daff took part in several of the scenes as did Mrs. Bradley, who is well-known in Napanee having been choir leader of Grace United Church several years ago.

SECOND THEFT FROM SAME SIDNEY FARM



Too much of one thing sometimes becomes, not only monotonous, but, perhaps agravating, at least that is what Harry Ketcheson, Sidney Township farmer, has reason to believe.

Yesterday Mr. Ketcheson reported the theft of 1,700 pounds of metal, that had been subsequently recovered, to the Provincial Police. While Mr. Ketcheson was in the conference of the Provincial Police, Mrs. Ketcheson, who was at home, informed him over the telephone thes that, in the meantime Mr. Ketcheson's barrow had been also from the barn.

"Go out to the barn and see if the shoes are still on the horses' hoofs," the exasperated Sidney Township farmer replied to his wife. Police are again investigating.

HINTS ON HOME IMPROVEMENT

Child's Room

It is perhaps more fun to decorate a little child's nursery than any other room in the house. Everything is so dainty, so colorful and bright that it's fun to work with it. And that's the way it should be.

The last ten years have been very kind to small humans. Their clothes have gone sensible, their toys have been made to last, and parents don't buy it without spending a small fortune.

If I were going to fashion a nursery for a small room I'd do it this way. I think. I'd get some old-fashioned chair with cutout backs like the one in the picture, while that of course, is not important for health's sake and for appearance's sake, and the floor is the thing. The linoleum would be fine—for I'd do it myself—it's such a delight to watch the paint flow off the brush and to see the real beauty of the linoleum come to life —and that, too, would be white with solid tiles. Then I'd paint the baseboard around the room—some for those and some for the walls. They'd be painted white, with the inside of the room and, I have should be a wash-able colorful rug on the floor and the ruffled curtains and the tiny bed-spread would be white. And the lamp-shade on the top of the spread just plain white also.

Of course, that's just one color scheme. It is a pleasing one, of course, but paint and color that really do the trick in giving it the beauty of the modern come in the children love. And they do love it, and rightly so. Last child which he or she call take, the time half or the room for one—it's the blue one, every time.

TARZAN'S QUEST

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Seeing that Tarzan paid no attention to him, Nkima lost interest in the game and started to descend. Now, again, Jane's vital note was about to fall under Tarzan's eyes, but again fate intervened, this time in the form of a fledgling bird trying its wings.

Nkima spied it and gave chase, following deep into the forest. And with him he carried the momentous message. Perhaps he would lose it, as he had lost that other piece of paper, and so Tarzan would lose his chance to save Jane from the menace of the jungle . . .

So near, and yet so far away, Jane made it final inspection of the camp, then lay down to rest for the next day's journey. Brown took the first tour of duty as sentry near the blazing beast-fire, and for a while his beloved Annette kept him company.

As they sat with arms about each other, they had much to speak of, and they were happy to be alone. They felt that they had the night and the world to themselves, but that was because they were unaware of the silent, savage watcher in the tree above them.

Taxation, Subject of Address Given by Fred Chamberlain

Kiwanis Club Most Interested in Fine Discourse

MANY PRESENT

Taxation was the subject of an address delivered by Fred G. Chamberlain, City Auditor, at the weekly meeting of the Kiwanis Club on Tuesday at the Queens Hotel. Eddie Logan, president of the Club, was in the chair with a large number of the members present and the Club is well on their way to retain the shield for the best attendance. The shield is now being held by the local Club. The boys were in rare form at the luncheon and the community singing was the best in some time.

The Ki-Y softball loop will be continued this year according to an announcement and the officers have been chosen and it is expected more than 200 boys will take part in the several groupings. Announcement was made of the fine evening in prospect for the members, when "Ladies Night" will be held at the Quinte Hotel on Monday night. The four service clubs in the city will combine to honor the Belleville Rechmen, the Ki-Y A.B.C. Athletics team and Ki-Y Juvenile hockey champions. A splendid program is being arranged with P. J. Mulqueen as the principal speaker.

Mr. Chamberlain, the guest speaker, needed no introduction to a Belleville audience and his fine address on taxation was most interesting. So many points were brought out in the address, it was decided to report same verbatim and it follows:

When requested to give a little talk on the finances of the City, I hardly knew on what to base my remarks. However, after some thought I came to the conclusion that, perhaps a consideration of the present high tax rate and the causes of it might be an interesting subject. To begin with our methods of financing in the past were more expensive than they are at present. It was the habit at one time of issuing sinking fund debentures for all debts and a debenture issue of 5% over a period of 20 years would double itself in interest, in other words, if it cost $5,000.00 to put down a sidewalk by the time the debt was paid off the citizens would have paid $10,000.00. This, of course, would be offset some by the re-investment of the principal that was placed to the credits of the sinking fund, but sinking fund investments were always more or less of a gamble, for while at the time it might be considered an investment was being made in a first class security over a period of time, there was what might colleges, as we know has occurred in late years in the case of defaulting municipalities.

We have at the present time a sinking fund investment account of $907,923.39, and in these investments we have $66,000.00 of sinking municipalities, and just what value to us these securities will eventually is not known except that there is no doubt but that something will be realized.

Pay As You Go

The modern method of handling the debenture debt is more on a "pay as you go" principle, that is by issuing serial or equal annual instalment debentures providing a certain amount of principal off each year, thereby saving a great deal of interest and a debenture issue at 5% paying off annual principal each year would take about 40 years to double itself as against 20 years by the sinking fund method. The last sinking fund debenture for the City of Belleville was about 9 years ago and since that time all Debentures have been issued on the serial, or equal instalment plan. So much for the method of financing.

I would now like to take you back to one of the contributing causes of high taxation for the present generation, in the early years of the City's history, the financing seemed to be the last worry of the City Fathers as apparently they thought we will spend and give our money away and let our children and grandchildren pay the shot as they will demonstrate to you. During the period of from 1800 to 1889 the taxes were very low and no wonder as during this time they issued the following debentures, but made no provision for the payment of them.

1860 To Repairs of Sidewalks & Pay Salaries	$ 8,000.00
1864 To Enlarge Market Grounds	800.40
1868 To Pay off Current Overdraft	30,000.00
1870 For bonus to Grand Junction Railway	100,000.00
1871 To Purchase Property & Build City Hall	2,000.00
1872 To Improvements to Water Loss and Restore Money Borrowed from Sinking Fund and Build High School	18,000.00
1873 To Build Front Bridge	2,000.00
1874 To Build High School	3,000.00
1874 To Bonus Grand Trunk Railway	50,000.00
1876 To Construct Low-Level Bridge; Buy Merry Weather Fire Engine and Build Ferry Slip	17,000.00
1874 To Pay Off Current Overdraft	30,000.00
1879 To Bonus Grand Junction Railway	50,000.00
1879 To R. C. School	3,000.00
1880 To Cover O. D. Debentures	90,000.00
1889 For Stock in Bay Bridge	30,000.00

Handed a Legacy

Some $66,000.00 of this you will note was to cover current expenditure or in other words they had not been collecting at a tax rate high enough to meet running expenses and so far as the rest of the debt was concerned they might have met their interest, but whether or not the City Fathers thought the holders would be perfectly satisfied if they got interest on their money was from 6 to 8%, most of it though was 7% and when the principal came due they would just hand the Debentures back and say nothing about them. I do not know, however, they must have got a rude shock about 1890 when the first laid fell due for they found they had no money to meet them and that is when they said well we'll just pass this on as memorial to the coming generation so that they can appreciate what a lot we did for them. Consequently in 1890 to 1900 Debentures had to be issued to cover $366,000.00 of these old debts. These Debentures were over a period of 40 years and they are now all paid off with the exception of $90,000.00, which is due in 1940. The interest on the $366,000.00 amounted to the huge sum of $690,850.00, or a total cost to this generation of $1,056,850.00 or the equivalent of the full amount of 2 years' taxes. The debt of the city increased very little from the period of 1900 to 1936, but from then on occurred the period of spending and keeping up with the Jones'.

Had To Build Pavements

The advent of the motor car necessitated the building of the present sidewalks and sewers and from 1900 to 1936 inclusive there was incurring to $258,852.00 for Sewers $54.52, and Pavements $595,300.00, making a total on these local improvements of $1,841,841.08, as mentioned before. The original cost of these improvements is one thing, but the cost of paying for them is another, for the interest on the expenditure of $1,841,841.09 amounts to $1,839,706.80. So when one considers that to lay a pavement to cost a certain amount that is not the only cost to be considered. Not content with Local City Improvements, County Suburban Roads and Highways were built and the Provincial Government said these will be built and the municipalities must pay their share of cost of so many miles, the cost of which amounted to $162,070.00, with interest of $133,937.75, a total of $299,007.75, with the greatly increased number of motors and heavy traffic it was next found necessary to build new bridges at a cost of $153,300.00, interest $74,038.50 total $224,338.50. The grand total of these improvements amounted to $2,163,211.00 principal, $2,042,692.26 interest, which equals $4,205,903.34. This of course has made our city an up-to-date place to live in, but we must pay for the privilege and the only hope we can have is that the improvements will last for some considerable time yet without requiring renewement and that further capital expenditures are kept at a minimum until a good portion of the debt is paid off and the taxes are brought down. During this period the system of Educational requirements advanced also and it was found necessary to build new schools costing $994,986.84, interest thereon $85,414.07, a total of $2,080,412.91. The cost of paying these debentures and maintaining the schools is a great drain on the ratepayers of all other charges for the year.

Consequently it is necessary to give some idea of the costs of operating a City Government and how they are divided up. In the first place the cost for operation, including Debenture charges $650,000.00 a year, 33% of this goes to Public and Separate Schools Debentures, 30% for school debt and maintenance, 11% for charity and welfare, which includes relief, hospitalization for indigent patients, Old Age pensions, Mothers' Allowance, etc., 3% for uncollectable taxes which includes taxes have been charged to city owned property and therefore not paid, this being 77% of all expenditures leaving a balance of 23% to be expended as follows: Police and Fire Departments, upkeep of streets, sidewalks and sewers and general administration, about 19% of which or only $65,000.00 of the total is controllable and any savings to be made on administration would come out of this amount.

The present debenture debt of the city amounts to $3,013,640.00, with Sinking Fund investments of $907,923.39, leaving net debt of $2,105,848.40. Within the next four years Debentures will be maturing amounting to $563,779.98, and with the serials reducing from year to year the debt will be reduced by almost $1,000,000.00, and with careful expenditures of a capital nature there should be by that time a considerable reduction in the tax rate. One point I would like to make clear that when a capital expenditure is to be made, consideration should be given to the fact that the cost of carrying out the work is only the initial cost and when the same has been finally paid for the interest has generally about doubled the cost.

Set Up Reserve

In this connection I would like to point out that if the day ever comes when a depreciation charge can be made on capital expenditures and a one mill rate added to the taxes each year as a reserve for renewal of pavements, sidewalks, etc., then if it is necessary to replace any of these improvements you have the money to pay for it outright instead of having to issue a debenture and pay the interest charges as well, that time will place our City in a very different conditions of any municipality in the Province. Of course reserves of any kind are a nice thing for any council to get their hands on but they find the tax rate for any one year is going to climb, but if a reserve in this kind was set up it would have to be protected in such a way that it could not be used for anything but the specific purpose for which it was created.

The amount spent on social service items last year was as follows:

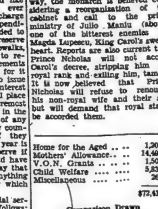
Unemployment Relief	$ 26,671.72
Hospitalization	14,202.84
Old Age Pensions	5,060.00
Home for the Aged	1,200.00
Mothers' Allowance	14,466.00
V.O.N. Grants	1,500.00
Child Welfare	5,832.25
Miscellaneous	262.86
	$72,417.43

Comparison Drawn

These are items that in my opinion should not have to be met out of municipal funds, as real estate and personal property will be saddled with such items as the only revenue to be derived from the unfairness of this might be illustrated as follows: Two men go out in life, one gets $30.00 a week, the other $26.00. The one getting $26.00 has been thrifty and manages to put enough aside to buy a home, but the one getting $30.00 has lived up to his full income and when they are both out of work neither one has any cash to fall back on, but the one stands to lose his home through having taxes due to these social service charges and is penalized for his thrift and forced to pay to help keep the man that got more money than he did. The Provincial and Federal Governments have other means of taxing and should look into such a device, thereby reducing land taxes which would be a great help in restoring the building industry by making it once again profitable to invest in home building. It is a conceded fact that relief is here to stay and a loss of revenue facilities have to meet the charges out of land taxes, but so long will the building industry remain dormant. If some such stimulant could be given a start of idle labor would be absorbed.

Father Divine's 'Teacher'

Weather-beaten and furrowed is the face of Samuel Morris, shown at work blistering a wall at Port Murray, N.J. He was toured the country as a workingman's "Father Jehovah" and his star pupil was George Baker. "We spoke of times made as much as $2.25 a day" he says Morris. The star pupil has fared better than the teacher for he is known today as "Father Divine," regarded as god by thousands.



Coronation Representative

Miss Nora Gladstone (ABOVE), 17-year-old Indian maiden of the Blood tribe, near Cardston, Alta., has been chosen by the National Council of Education to attend the coronation. Miss Gladstone, whose Indian name is "Otsik-a-Punsit", meaning "Bright Eyes" is a clever and attractive student at St. Paul's Residential school, one of the west's famous Indian schools. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Gladstone, and granddaughter of the late Chief Joe Healy, famous Indian scout and interpreter for the mounted police.

MAY HEAD CABINET

With Fascist plans to oust King Carol of Roumania gaining headway, the monarch is believed considering a reorganization of his cabinet and call to the prime ministry of Julio Manin (above) one of the bitterest enemies of Magda Lupescu, King Carol's sweetheart. Reports are also current that Prince Nicholas will not accept Carol's decree, stripping him of royal rank and exiling him, tamely. It is now believed that Prince Nicholas will refuse to renounce his non-royal wife and their son, but will demand that royal status be accorded them.

PAINS ALL OVER HIS BODY

Kruschen Made Him Feel a New Man

Read the experience of this man who had rheumatism so badly that at times he was prevented from working:—

"About 10 months ago," he writes, "I suffered terribly with rheumatism and neuritis. The pains were all over my body and some days I could not even get up from bed to go to work. A friend visited me and suggested that I should try Kruschen Salts. I did so, the result being that the pains seemed to gradually disappear. I've been going to work ever since without a break, thanks to Kruschen Salts, and I feel a new man."—A.R.

Rheumatic conditions are frequently the result of an excess of uric acid in the body. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts are notable for their work in dissolving uric acid. Other ingredients assist Nature to expel the dissolved acid from the system.

MOTHER AND EIGHT CHILDREN KILLED WHEN EXPLOSION WRECKS HOME

A mother and her eight children were instantly killed at Muskego, Wis., when a powerful explosion in the cellar of their two-storey home exploded. The charge was thought to have been set off by a three-year-old baby who found the explosive where it had been placed for safe keeping. Previously it had been the powder exploded and was unable to give an explanation for the detonation which was heard for miles around. The wreckage of the home in which the nine persons were killed is shown at the LEFT.

TELEPHONE CALL DISRUPTS STRIKE PEACE PARLEY

The meeting between Premier Hepburn of Ontario, representatives of the striking General Motors employees and General Motors executives, received a setback when Premier Hepburn called the conference off after he found Attorney J. L. Cohen, Toronto lawyer for the United Automobile Workers of America, making a telephone call to Homer Martin, in Detroit from his private vault in the parliament buildings. While he had previously allowed the lawyer to telephone Detroit, using his office telephone, the Ontario premier objected to telephone calls from his private vault where he claimed important government documents were stored. He also objected to what he termed "remote control" of the conference, reiterating his refusal to deal with American organizers for the C.I.O. Cohen after the sudden ending of the conference explained he had been directed to the telephone by newspapermen. Hugh Thompson, C.I.O. organizer, over whom several conferences had been called off, did not sit on the discussion, but waited outside the premier's office. The upper left photograph shows Premier Mitchell Hepburn seated at his desk during the conference. Below is seen Hugh Thompson, surrounded by members of the strikers' delegation, as he waited the outcome of the peace talk. At the right is J. L. Cohen, as he appeared when making the telephone call which brought about the sudden ending of the strike parley.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

The public trading in stocks has often been blamed for "bucks" but the reason that a lamb follows a leader or to the slaughter. In the event of a break in the mining market, no thought has been given to the intrinsic value of securities that as a few months ago, mining stocks, in opinion of leaders, were headed for very much higher prices, today the same leaders express the opinion that these same securities will disappear from the board. At least it will serve from the action of the market.

One of the most important factors to take into consideration in the study of mining securities, particularly those where the properties have not been fully developed, is the source of financing. Irrespective of what the market does, those properties with ample cash will be able to continue their development programme unhindered by weak or strong markets.

In the present type of market it is useless to analyze particular securities. Speculators will liquidate holdings with no regard to values. When one is unable to meet a margin call, he cannot do anything but sell and the action of the market fully attests to the situation.

Those fortunate enough to have ready cash at the present time are being presented with very attractive bargains. It should be borne in mind that our mining industry is not folding up, and that mining and allied industries are more than essential for economic welfare of the Dominion.

Although lovely prices have been slipping rapidly, the New York market has been acting fairly well. The Trader in Barron's states that rumblings of an impending recrimination were continued to emanate from Washington. How seriously they will be taken will be clear within the week, after the transmission of the Presidential budget message to Congress. Whether the Roches insistence upon a balanced budget is to be realized through a drastic curtailment of appropriations, or by taxation, or both, ought to be determined. Highly doubtful is it that the threat of inflation, which was the cause of a vast amount of the March buying of well-find much support in the governmental fiscal planning for the next fiscal year.

Change in speculative psychology wrought by the April break is little short of surprising. The most pessimistic expect no more than reaction until the opening of summer. A dismal midsummer period which has declared against a boom is being taken more seriously.

WALL STREET

New York, April 21.—(AP)—The selective buying appetite sharpened in today's stock market and many of the leaders were lifted fractions to 2 or more points.

Dealings were mostly on the quiet side, however, and brokers said many of their customers still executed the sidelines. Favored issues were carried well past the noon fourth hour.

In quiet dealings Hiram Walker and Distillers-Corp. Seagrams tended slightly lower. Canadian Pacific rallied a point. Canadian Government issues were inactive while Canadian funds advanced 1-32 of a cent to 100.15 5-8 cents, on the curb. Lake Shore Mines improved moderately.

Consolidated stock gainers included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic Steel, Montgomery Ward and Co., Woolworth, Kennecott, American Smelting, International Nickel, Howe Sound, Homestake Mines, Reuben Copper, St. Joseph Lead, and Intercontinent. Silver.

Sir Robert Horne, Former Chancellor Fears For British Industry

'PUBLIC PERTURBED'

Income Tax And National Defence Share Impose High Taxes

London, April 21—(CP)—Criticism of the excess profits provisions of the budget was voiced in the House of Commons today by Sir Robert Horne, former Conservative Chancellor of the Exchequer.

"Taking both the income tax and the national defence contributions together," he declared, "many companies will have to pay as high as 45 per cent. In some cases there would be a surtax and the sum might be 75 per cent.

"I've talked with many people today and there are great perturbations. Industry is very much in some way I fear some check upon the enterprise of our country."

SPECIAL SERVICE ENDS CONVENTION

Missionary Gathering at Alliance Tabernacle Well Attended

The service on Sunday evening brought to a most successful conclusion the three days' convention of the United Missionary Conventions which have been meeting in Knox Presbyterian Church and Missionary Alliance Tabernacle has ever known.

Every available seat in the building was brought into use and even then many had to stand. The seats on tables used to display literature or the like stand. Seating was at first Knox, Kingston and Alliance, but later in the various nearby centres.

The service opened with a stirring song service led by Mr. Chas. N. Washington colored Gospel soloist, from Mount Hope, Akron, Ohio. Mrs. Washington assisted at the piano. Mr. Washington sang during the week of meetings, have sung and won their way into the hearts of the people inspired the audiences as they used their consecrated talents to bring honor to their Master, Jesus Christ.

Rev. Dr. Stuart conducted the service. Rev. David Mason, District Superintendent and a former Presbyterian missionary to Belgian Congo, came to the platform accompanied by Rev. Dr. Houston, Rev. Dr. Houston, French West Africa. Mr. Houston spoke in the place of Dr. Tuarez Nobleman, including the proverbial veil, peculiar customs and habits of the Sahara desert. Following his introduction by Rev. Dr. Stuart, Mr. Houston told in a most fascinating manner of the work of the Lord among the Fulah people. He told of how God on three occasions had miraculously spared his life, twice from wild animals and then from cannibals, and concluded by having all who were willing to consecrate their all to God and to do as He willed, stand to their feet. A goodly number responded and remained standing, while prayer was offered in their behalf.

The closing missionary pledge of the local congregation was then taken, the amounts pledged read, read and totaled. The total offering amounted to $1,000 and is nearly one hundred dollars and there are yet some pledges to be made. Following the reading of the total amount pledged, the pastor, Rev. Dr. Stuart, led the happy congregation stand and sing the Doxology. "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow."

The Rev. Mr. Mason then made a few remarks after which the Benediction was pronounced, thus bringing to a close the most successful missionary convention in the history of the local church.

The Missionary party consisted of Rev. David Mason, Toronto, Secretary for French West Africa, Mrs. Mary Shanta, Central China Alliance Mission, Miss Ruth Livingston, Manitou Ferry, Ohio, left yesterday for Toronto, where the missionary convention is being conducted this week.

Letters to the Editor

CORRECTION

Belleville, 21st April, 1937.

The Editor of
The Ontario Intelligencer:
Dear Sir:—

In reading the proceedings of the City Council of last Monday, as published in your paper of yesterday, I see that a Government Inspector of Weights and Measures was supposed to have send a report to the Council suggesting certain repairs to be effected to the scale on our local market and guaranteeing if these repairs were made that the scale would be good for five years.

Your reporter was evidently misinformed as no such report was made to the City Council, nor myself, nor do we know whose report this was.

My reason for asking for a correction is, that should these repairs be made to this scale, and it did not stand up for the five years, the blame would be placed upon the Weights and Measures Office, and we might have some difficulty in defending our position.

Thanking you for making this correction, I am,

Yours truly,
F. DAVEY DIAMOND,
District Inspector of the Belleville Division of Weights and Measures.

Note—When this matter was before the Council Alderman Keeling, Chairman of Market and City Property, announced to the effect that he had secured information if certain repairs were made, about $100, the scales would be good for at least five years. In the report there was no intention of casting any reflection on the Weights and Measures Department.

CLARK GABLE

The government charged Mrs. Norton with aiding Cable information on his real name was "Frank Billings" and he was the father of Gwendoline, born in 1923.

Huge crowds, composed almost entirely of women, jammed the court room and the corridors yesterday waiting for him to appear. Then, when Gable arrived, a heavy cordon of marshalls who were prepared for the incident—he had been in 1923 to 1924, when, Mrs. Norton contended, he was living with her in accordance with "Frank Billings", forced a path for him through the throng.

Gable denied the allegations made by Mrs. Norton, or her representatives; if he took her letters, he added, "I did not pay her any money; if he ever had seen Gwendoline.

"Do you get the father of Gwendoline," asked Assistant U. S. Attorney Dennis Sullivan.

"No," said Gable.

Jim Tully, movie commentator, identified letters Mrs. Norton wrote to him, as well as other people, telling of the affair.

The most significant one equalled 18 pages when read by a typewriter, it said "Frank Billings" discovered in England that he was the father of Gwendoline. It was signed by Clarence O.I.T. girls. Reading—"Sing My Paddle Sing," Edna V. Aug. 1937.

The main event of the evening was the presentation of the play "The Lost Church." This play written by Miss Edna Demuld, is to be presented at the annual Rally of the Women's Institutes of the United Church. As Madoc was the only entrant from this district, the play will be staged here and not at the southern district.

The story deals with a man of faith and his opinion of the church. He believes that the world would be better if there were no church. However he sees life as it would be without it. The play received honors of its most faithful members. A beautiful pageant closes the play. The characters for the play are:

Man of the World — Brydea Hall.

His wife—Miss Hamlyn.

His son—Gordon Moon.

His son's daughter—Peg Fleming.

Her Sunday School teacher—Betty Wellman.

A neighbor—Murray Irwin.

A poor woman—Betty Demuresk.

Why doesn't he stop coming to see me, Irene, if he doesn't think I'm good enough to meet the people he knows? He doesn't think I'm good enough, he doesn't!"

She laid her head on the neat careful figure and wept, pride forgotten, everything forgotten except the growing pain in her heart.

"Maybe he's just not got around to it yet."

"And he never will," said Anne listlessly. "I wish I'd never seen him, never heard of him."

Irene wished the same thing.

"Do you think there's another girl?" she asked in an uncertain way.

"No—yes, that's exactly what I think", Anne admitted decisively. "He's not even competing us; I'm not fit to be compared with his kind of girl. I'm just somebody he comes to spend the time on, until change, cute, maybe, to pass an evening with, or for anything else—I'm simply not in it."

"Why, don't you forget him!"

"Yes, why don't I?" Anne echoed ironically. How often and how futilely she had sought to do that. Instantly eyes were guarded, her voice careful.

"Are you sure he doesn't imagine there's something between you and Richard Graeme?"

"I've seen Richard Graeme exactly once in the last three weeks, four times in my life, and he knows it. I almost wish it was that. If I could think he were jealous or had some other reason I might have something to go on, but as it haven't a thing. You can't make a man like you more than he does."

She brooded silently, her eyes dark, her mouth drooping and sober. In her nostrils was the sharp, stinging sensation of tears withheld.

"The worst of it is," she continued thickly after a while, "that I've got to go to Richard Graeme for a favor. If he'll take me on next at the Topaze Club we can pay the rent and if he won't we can't."

"I couldn't do that!"

"There's nothing else to do." In spite of herself Anne's tone sharpened. "I can manage to keep going, but how I despise asking him for anything. It makes me sick the way some girls stoop through life being dignified and gracious and unapproachable because they're unfavorable to be anything else.

"Why don't you call up David? He would help," Irene suggested. She hesitated. "Do you know, I sort of miss David."

Anne was too plunged in her own problem to observe anything in the other girl, or to notice the slight tremble that accompanied the mention of the name.

"Well, I don't," she had begun when the door bell gave forth a sharp imperative ring. Snatched back to the realities the two started at each other. "It sounded a second time in the tense silence of the kitchen.

"Another bill collector," Anne mouned.

"Don't answer," Irene whispered.

Anne shook her head, stood up, forced pounding feet into pained, hateful pumps, and, head high, walked through the studio. She crossed it a long breath and dramatically opened the door. Richard Graeme stood, with indolent grace, leaning on his stick, looking bored and natural.

"Why I—I—" Anne stammered.

"May I come in?" He grinned at the rapid change of expression at her face.

She was on the point of saying that he might not when she remembered the row of figures in the kitchen and irrationally refrained. She admitted him but she was distinctly ungracious; she found it impossible to be otherwise. The fact that she must ask a favor of him, a man she detested, added to her constraint.

He answered, his air of perfect ease amount her. Without invitation he had dropped to the most comfortable chair in the room and was calmly surveying his surroundings. Anne suffered the chair to be set removed from his, tightened her lips, folded her hands and waited for him to begin.

"You do yourself pretty well", he commented, still examining the studio which with its worn, scrupulously polished furniture, its pictures, its many bright pillows was a pleasant place. On the mantel over the big fireplace he was surprised to see a group of Bristol figures, gayly colored, highly glazed and really valuable. They belonged to Anne's mother and she had decorated corner to part with them. His eyes returned to the girl.

"Did you come here to say that?" she asked coldly.

"Not entirely, perhaps."

He showed no disposition to be hurried. He produced his cigarette case, helped himself, offered her one to Anne. She refused. He rolled a banner of smoke toward the ceiling.

It was then that the girl suspected that her original estimation had been wrong. Richard was not entirely at ease; he seemed indeed oddly changed and different. His imposient smile was missing, the twinkling mirth of humour, the accidental manner. Whatever had brought him here it was not the hope of a flirtation. Somehow that gave her courage. Here was her opportunity to get what she had.

"Do you remember, Mr. Graeme, once asking me if I'd like to work at the Topaze Club?"

"Yes—"

"Is the offer still open?"

To her humiliation and embarrassment the shock his head. To her still further embarrassment he began to hum the words of a hit popular song, one of his favorites:

"Goodbye girls I'm through
I say goodbye to you
Can't stay here with you
Without the least regret.
I'm though with all flirtation
You've no more fascination
There's one to whom I'm true
Goodbye girls, Glad blues you, goodbye girls, I'm through."

He reached the last word and broke it off as if to explain everything. "I'm going to be married, you see. And I am really through."

"I didn't mean—" she commenced, her face flaming.

"I know you didn't mean anything, my dear." Richard conceded generously. "I admire you a lot, you understand. I hate to refuse you anything, but I must. It seems only fair to tell you that I am not in a position to offer you a job at the Topaze Club simply because I'm going to be married, you see. And my girl gives them a pretty deal. She would notice a new hostess, there would have to be explanations—and I can't do that. She is jealous as the devil."

His complacent expression infuriated Anne.

"Let me congratulate you," she forced herself to say.

"You should congratulate me!" A flash of jubilance broke through his manner. He added with frank pride, "The old town will open its eyes when I step off. My girl's got everything. Social register, swell background, looks and brains and beauty."

"That makes it nice for you."

Richard looked up quickly. Anne's tone had been contemptuous. Still her face was bland. For a moment he hesitated, then he said candidly, "I wish you hadn't made me refuse you a favor. I would like awfully to be obliging because I want you to oblige me."

"How?" asked Anne boldly.

"I want you to do something for me," he replied uncertainly, sensing

In the first of a group of clinics presented for members of the American College of Physicians Dr. Louis H. Behrens of Barnes Hospital, St. Louis, where young Wadlow has been examined frequently, termed him an ideal subject for study of the growth hormone secreted by the pituitary, which in his case apparently got out of control.

BRITAIN WILLING TO JOIN WORLD PARLEY

Conference on Strike Issue to Resume Today

Adequate Preparation Is Urged by Baldwin As Essence of Success

Neville Chamberlain States Britain Ready to Discuss Debts to U. S. When Satisfactory Results Appear Likely

NO OPINION AS TO METHOD OF SETTLEMENT

Tremendous Effort For Peace' Through Concessions And Sacrifice Urged by George Lansbury, Socialist

London, April 22—(AP)— Prime Minister Baldwin told the House of Commons today Great Britain is willing to participate in a new world economic conference "provided a comprehensive investigation showed it was likely to succeed and provided there had been adequate preparation."

Baldwin was asked by Arthur Henderson, Labor, whether he was "aware of the declaration of Herr Hitler that the German government was willing to participate in a new world conference.

British Position Clear

"Yes, sir," the Prime Minister replied. "The government has seen Herr Hitler's statement. The position of the government on this matter has been made clear from time to time.

"I may perhaps repeat it. Great Britain will participate, provided a comprehensive investigation showed it was likely to succeed provided there had been adequate preparation."

Chancellor Hitler Monday told George Lansbury in Berlin the Reich would be "very willing" to attend an international conference for "economic co-operation and mutual understanding" if President Roosevelt or the head of another major power would call it.

Hypothetical Questions.

"Will the government take notice of this statement that statement just made by the prime minister by getting in touch with the German government on this matter?" Henderson asked.

Baldwin answered: "I am not prepared to answer hypothetical questions on this matter."

Answering a question on the war, the war department to the United States, Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said:

"As stated in the note addressed to the United States on Oct. 13, 1936, his Majesty's government would be ready to reopen discussions on the question of settlement of the British war debt whenever circumstances are such as to warrant the hope that such discussions would lead to a satisfactory result."

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen Science Service Meteorologist

Walking and weather! The gentle exercise of walking may be indulged in and interestingly and instructively combined with the study of weather. Outdoors is the place to study the weather at first hand. Walkers like to climb hills and mountains. There are better places to view the entire canopy of heaven and the clouds in all four quarters. A very casual observation will disclose that there are different speeds and directions. These observations are the beginnings of a realization that the atmosphere is composed of different masses having different temperatures and humidities, and have come from widely separated regions, tropical or polar.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, April 22 (CP)—A disturbance of decreasing intensity, centred this morning over Lake Huron, has caused gales with rain or snow in eastern districts. Elsewhere southern districts like in Manitoba, though it has been fair and cool in nearly all other parts of Northern Canada, light to moderate falls of rain and snow have occurred in the Maritimes. It continues becoming quite cool over the Prairies where the wind velocity is high in places with low temperatures as far as a large portion of the western provinces and Ontario.

Lake Superior—Fresh northerly winds, cloudy and two with some rain or snow in east portion. Friday, northerly winds and moderate; mostly cloudy and cool with scattered showers or rain in morning or night snow.

Manitoba—Mostly cloudy with occasional showers, probably some snow in north portion. Friday, mostly cloudy and becoming cooler with local showers or snow.

Saskatchewan—Fresh northerly winds, mostly cloudy and cool today and on Friday, with some rain or part snow.

Alberta—Northerly winds; cloudy and cool today and on Friday, with some rain or snow.

DUKE OF WINDSOR MAY SOON TRAVEL

Possible He May Spend His Honeymoon in Africa

London, Apr. 22 (AP) — Legal doubt of the validity of Mrs. Wallis Simpson's first divorce was raised again today after friends had disclosed plans that would make her the June bride of the Duke of Windsor.

A. Berriedale Keith, constitutional lawyer, wrote in the Edinburgh Scotsman expressing his doubt that Mrs. Simpson was prepared to wait from her first husband in the eyes of British law. He again raised the question that the decree "a dale for the wedding has been fixed."

Keith urged the government last month to remove all doubt of the marital status of Mrs. Simpson, divorced from Lieut.-Commander E. W. Spencer, United States navy, in Ipswich, England, on the first conditional divorce from Ernest Aldrich Simpson was granted at Ipswich, Oct. 27, and is expected to be made final soon after April 27.

The only divorce which English law certainly recognizes as dissolving marriage validly for purposes of stating in England are those granted in the court of the husband's domicile, Keith continued, adding that Mrs. Simpson first husband was not domiciled in Virginia.

Remedy Is Suggested.

To that Mrs. Simpson is unmarried when her English Decree Nisi becomes absolute.

The date of the wedding was expected to be Prime Minister Baldwin to be asked categorically and to state whether letters consider that proposed marriage is valid.

If Mackey says yes, Keith declared, there would be no objection to the wedding. If he says such action would be unsafe, the law lawyer urged a special act of parliament, to say that Mrs. Simpson is unmarried when her English Decree Nisi becomes absolute.

Millard Meets Hepburn To Arrange Conference

Goes as Representative of Oshawa Workers, Not of C.I.O.

COMMITTEE ATTENDS

Oshawa, Apr. 22 (CP)—Bargaining committee of General Motors strikers will accompany Charles Millard, workers' representative, to Toronto for the Queen's Park conference with Premier Hepburn and company officials this afternoon.

The committee will be on hand in case a conference is arranged to present formally the strikers demands, Millard and Hans McIntyre, union official, said. Those accompanying Millard are George Day, George Price, Pat Murphy, Bill Walker, Frank Rowe, E. B. Basha and Miss Gertrude Gillard.

Union Dissension Denied.

When attention was drawn to absence of Ollie Dean and Harry Grosse, Millard said these two men had acted as employees' representatives but that they were acting in an advisory capacity." It was suggested the two men were removed from the committee after they had severed acceptance of settlement proposals extended by the General Motors at Monday night's mass meeting.

"There is no dissension in the union, no discension in the executive of the union," said McIntyre.

Mayor Suggests Return.

The mayor suggested a return to work with increased pay, a five-day, 40-hour week with time-and-a-half for overtime with recognition of the local union but not the International.

Langemarck is Recalled Twenty - Two Years After

First Gas in Warfare Used in Second Battle of Ypres—Canadians' Heroic Stand Saves Day

Twenty-two years ago today near the villages of Langemarck and St. Julien, a Belgian sun shone in spring brilliance on those thin khaki lines, which stood between the German hordes and the objective of the German High Command, the Channel ports. It was one of those ordinary days which marked that particular stage of a war, when the thunderous roar of artillery was driving Addied the slippery pavement and and occasional crump of an enemy gun "searching and sweeping."

But at five o'clock that night, hell broke loose. Practically every enemy gun within that sector, and the neighboring ones cut loose with a hail of steel which demolished everything within range. From the regions of the villages to the north and northeast of Ypres, a stream of refugees pitiful in their suffering, carrying their meagre belongings, old men, boys, old women and young carrying their infants in a frenzy to get away from the death which hurtled through the air.

Appalling Designs of Fire

Enemy howitzers of all field guns concentrated an appalling deluge of heavy fire upon a four-mile front. Then suddenly the French 75's opened up with their spiteful coughs. Then the artillery's pitiful force in that particular sector spat its venom with the sharp cracks of 18 pounders mingled with the staccato of the heavier pieces.

Crouched in what was left of their trenches were the men of the immortal First Canadian Division. Flanked on the right were the black Colonials of the French army. Waiting, waiting, with rifles clenched in grimy fists, the rays of a slowly descending sun glinting on the dull sheen of their bayonets, the wearers of the Maple Leaf hugged the earth prepared for the inevitable attack which must surely come.

The First Gas

A man stood up. He sniffed the air. His face wrinkled in what appeared to be a humorous contortion. Slowly he slid his shoulders into a ditch and crashed into a tree, where it turned over, pinning Mr. Koff beneath the wreckage. The car was a total wreck. Traffic Officer Jillings stated he was unable to procure the initials of the injured man, stating his name and address only. He was removed to the Kingston hospital in Dr. Blackwell's personal car and in a serious condition.

WORKERS ASSURED NO 'QUIT SLIPS' IN PAY ENVELOPES

Mark Time While Representatives Meet Premier in Office

THOMPSON LEAVES

Mayor Afraid Many Skilled Workers Would Leave Oshawa

Oshawa, Ont., April 22 (CP) — General Motors strikers marked time today, while their representatives began new negotiations with company officials in Premier Hepburn's Toronto office.

The sudden swing toward a new conference came yesterday when Union heads agreed to the company's intimation, that settlement terms must be talked over with the Premier, or the men return to work before an agreement was reached, continuing negotiations after they were back.

Hopes of early settlement seemed much brighter, with Union heads agreed to the former course. Hugh Thompson, the C.I.O. organizer whose presence at that point was protested by Premier Hepburn, left last night for Washington. C. H. Millard, President of the Oshawa Union, announced he himself would represent the men. He would, he said, attend the conference "in the capacity agreed upon by Premier Hepburn."

What that capacity was, Millard declined to say, but in the past the Premier had insisted on meeting him not as an official of the International Union, but as a representative of General Motors employees.

Men Arrange Parley

Arrangements for the "Toronto negotiations were made when Millard was informed by Harry Carmichael, General Motors Vice-president, it was the men's job to arrange the parley. Union heads sent a list, Union counsel, and he completed arrangements in Toronto. The company stood firmly on its demand the workers return to work before settlement terms were discussed. Mr. Hepburn must be taken into negotiations.

Before leaving Oshawa, Thompson said he would return with Homer Martin, President of the United Automobile Workers of America, International Union.

Mayor Alex Hall's only contribution to yesterday's developments was the warning, that if the strike were not soon settled many skilled workers would leave Oshawa for good, getting jobs elsewhere. They would not be forced to "quit slips" in their envelopes.

No C.I.O. Recognition

The statement said Mr. Cohen had told the Premier "neither he nor Mr. Millard was instructed by the Committee presented the committee known as the C.I.O." The Premier was asked "will Mr. Cohen represent the U.A.W.A." His reply was: "He will not represent the C.I.O."

Mr. Hepburn said Mr. Cohen had assured him he had definite word from Homer Martin, International president of the U.A.W.A., that Martin was not the union's bargaining organizer for the C.I.O. would be in Toronto during the negotiations. Martin, it was believed is in Washington.

The first meeting called almost two weeks ago to arrive at a basis for negotiations was called off when the Premier refused to deal with Mr. Thompson. The second one last Saturday collapsed when Mr. Hepburn found Mr. Cohen and Mr. Millard talking by long distance with Mr. Martin.

Ministers May Attend

Mr. Hepburn's conference bringing some of his Cabinet Ministers in Ontario's discussion, included Peter, Ontario Labor Department mediator, also was to have a part in the negotiations. Apparently the strikers' original negotiating committee were not asked to attend.

The conference announcement came after an ultimatum was issued by General Motors, that Premier Hepburn would have to be present at any negotiations or the strikers would first have to return to work.

MAN IS INJURED NEAR DESERONTO

Mr. Koff, Ottawa, Sustains Internal Injuries in Crash

A man, who police state is a Mr. Koff, of Ottawa, was badly injured several miles west of Deseronto when his car skidded into a ditch and crashed into a tree on highway No. 2, two miles east of Deseronto at noon today. The injured man was attended by Dr. Blackwell of Deseronto, and subsequently rushed to the Kingston General Hospital, suffering from a fractured collar bone, several fractured ribs and internal injuries. Provincial Police Constable Jillings, Napanee, reported this afternoon.

According to eye witnesses Mr. Koff was proceeding easterly and when approaching the crest of the hill his car, a light sedan, suddenly left the highway on the north side, and

Negotiations in Strike Issue Get Underway This Afternoon

CABINET MAY ATTEND

Possible They Might Not Even Represent U.A.W.A.

Toronto, April 22—(CP)—Representatives of 3,700 General Motors' strikers and company executives prepared today to meet with Premier Hepburn in a conference pointed at settlement of the strike, that has tied up the automobile company's Oshawa plant for 18 days.

Negotiations were scheduled to start at one o'clock in the office of Premier Queen's Park office. Two other conferences have collapsed before they were properly started on the issue of recognition of the United Automobile Workers of America, an affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

J. L. Cohen, Toronto lawyer, and C. H. Millard, representatives of the Oshawa Union Local, today were to represent "the employees of General Motors at Oshawa" according to a statement issued last night by Premier Hepburn. H. J. Carmichael, vice-president and general manager, and J. H. Highfield, Oshawa plant manager, were company spokesmen.

Mr. Hepburn's statement, issued after preliminary conferences yesterday which led to today's gathering, left in doubt whether Mr. Cohen and Mr. Millard will be recognized as representatives of the U.A.W.A.

The statement said Mr. Cohen had told the Premier "neither he nor Mr. Millard was instructed by the Committee presented the committee known as the C.I.O." The Premier was asked "will Mr. Cohen represent the U.A.W.A." His reply was: "He will not represent the C.I.O."

Mr. Hepburn said Mr. Cohen had assured him he had definite word from Homer Martin, International president of the U.A.W.A., that Martin was not the Union's bargaining organizer for the C.I.O. would be in Toronto during the negotiations. Martin, it was believed is in Washington.

CLOTH WORKERS STRIKE NEAR END

Agreement to be Signed Today Provides 44 Hour Week and More Pay

Montreal, April 22 (CP)—Final ratification of an agreement between 2,000 of Montreal's 5,000 striking dressmakers back to work was expected as officials of the International Ladies' Garments Workers' Union signed details of the settlement before its members.

The agreement, announced last night as the industry-paralyzing strike neared the end of its first week, will send workers back into the shops of 40 manufacturers, and the Montreal Dress Manufacturers' Guild today and sign with the I.L.G.W.U.

The agreement provides for recognition of the International Union; a 10 per cent wage hike pending impartial arbitration to fix permanent wage schedules; a 44-hour week, except in overtime and 16 lesser concessions.

GAUZE MAY BE LEFT IN WOUND STATES DR. GALLIE

Could be Left in For Drainage Purposes Noted Surgeon Testifies at Trial

Kingston, Ont., Apr. 22 (CP) — Highlight yesterday in the action of Gertrude McCumber and Byard McCumber of Millhaven in their suit against Dr. I. O. Bogart and the Hotel Dieu Hospital, charging malpractice, was evidence of Dr. W. E. Gallie, surgeon-in-chief of the Toronto General Hospital. He took the witness stand for the defence.

Dr. Gallie said it was a common practice to leave gauze in a wound after an operation for as much as seven weeks and also to remove gauze from the abdomen after the administration of his anesthetic.

The case for the prosecution was concluded with the cross examination of Mrs. McCumber. At the evidence of Miss Sadie Knox, a cousin of Mrs. McCumber.

Condition Described.

Miss Knox told of Mrs. McCumber's condition at the taking of four inches of sponge from the incision, after which she said Mrs. McCumber improved.

Dr. Gallie gave evidence on the accepted practices in the use of gauze sponges. He told the court it was usual for the sponges to be counted before the operation and after. He explained that in some operations the sponges are all removed after the operation but that in operations where there was pus, sponges were often left in the patient from a week to three weeks.

The reason for this was to prevent the spread of the pus in the abdomen, he explained, and to assist in the discharge of pus to clean up the affected area.

Removal of Sponges.

He also explained that usually the sponges were removed without the patient's knowledge. He admitted the removal of sponges was painful but gave it as his opinion that the pain was not severe. He was in some cases preferable to the administering of an anaesthetic.

Dr. W. T. Connell, Professor of Medicine at Queen's University for the past twenty years and chief of the medical staff of Kingston General Hospital, told the court he had examined the plaintiff at the Hotel Dieu Hospital and said that her general condition was reasonably good and although she now walks with a slight limp, she appears to be in good health.

FIREHALL SIDEWALK ENTRANCE ALTERED

Eliminating the sudden "dip" at the point where the sidewalk meets the highway at the entrance to the Fire Station No. 1, on lower Front street, and which it is claimed is too sharp an incline for the heavy fire trucks to negotiate when in a hurry, the City Works Department, will bring this point to a level with the sidewalk and highway. A new catch basin at the north side of the driveway has already been installed, and is now in operation. The basin at the south end will remain in its original position.

HIGH WINDS MAY CAUSE MUCH DAMAGE TO NETS

Thousands of dollars worth of nets may be lost to district fishermen now working on Lake Ontario as the result of today's heavy "blow" on the lake, it was indicated by one local member of the craft this morning. One of the heaviest windstorms reported in some time was raking the lake today, kicking mountainous waves, and resulting in a complete cessation of fishing activities.

LARGE PLANTING OF POTATOES THIS YEAR

"Potatoes will be a big crop this year, and several local and district agriculturists are already busy planting them," declared one seed and grain supply house owner today, basing their statement on the number of orders that have already been taken for registered seed. Last year was a slim year for the lowly spud and prices were correspondingly high this spring. "Consequently everyone will want to grow potatoes this year. I've never seen it so fall," remarked one dealer.

GEESE AND DUCKS SEARCH FOR HAVEN

Evidently driven in from the rough waters of the lake this morning, the sky was never more overcast circling the bay today in search of safe haven until the present storm subsides. Large flights of wild ducks were also observed trailing the geese back and forth.

WIND PILES UP WATER IN BAY

Water of the Bay of Quinte and harbor reached one of the highest levels ever recorded on local records, this morning, as a forty mile gale piled up the water from the lake into the bay a full two and one half feet above the high mark recorded this year. Today the water was registered by waterfront engineers at about four feet higher in the harbor than last summer's levels. Considerable of the bay shore were well submerged, while beached boats were forced further and being washed into open water until secured by their owners.

PRAISES ROBIN FOR CHEERY SONG

"People who may have been tempted today to grouch a bit about the weather might well have taken a lesson from the robin," declared a prominent businessman this morning.

"I don't think I've seen a finer or braver sight than a thoroughly wet and bedraggled robin sitting in the rain on a swaying branch of a tree as I came down to work this morning, singing as though on top of his voice in spite of it all.

"He did try to stay out in the rain all night, too."

RAIN CAUSES LAY-OFF

Rain today caused a temporary lay off of some twenty-five men employed on various outside projects in the city, it is indicated by figures in the department of public works. A complete shut down of the city stone quarry also resulted.

KNOCKED FROM BIKE WHEN HIT BY CAR

Knocked from his bicycle when struck by a motor car, Roy Conon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Conon 314 Sleeker Avenue, sustained severe bruises and slight lacerations at the intersection of Lingham Street and Victoria Avenue, early last the intersection of Lingham Street and Victoria Avenue, early last evening. The injured lad was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital by X-ray examination revealed no fractured bones. He was struck by a motor car driven by C. G. Dafoe, local taximan. Police revealed today, that the lad's wheel, driven by young Conon was not equipped with the necessary lights, as provided by the Highway Traffic Act. The lad was later permitted to return to his home by Dr. R. W. Tennent. Dafoe stopped at the scene of the accident and rendered what assistance possible, no blame being attached him by police. The collision was purely accidental, say the police also.

WHO TOOK BOOTS OF CITY FIREMAN?
After Fire Jack Darvell Finds His Footwear Missing

"Bring back, oh bring back my booties to me" is the lamenting song Fireman Jack Darvell is singing today after having his shoes taken by someone during the progress of the fire yesterday, when Ritson's garage was ablaze on lower Front street.

Fireman Darvell had removed his shoes and placed them in a safe place at the rear of the centre of activities, to don the conventional fireman's rubber boots for the fight. After the flames had been subdued and the fire extinguished, Fireman Darvell returned to find his shoes gone.

The firemen have to purchase their own foot wear and at their own expense, hastens Fireman Darvell would appreciate the return of his "kicks". After all they are assisting in the service of the city to protect lives and property, so please return the shoes, fellow.

PRINCE EDWARD NATIVE IS AUTHOR
Harry Earl Stafford, Noted Consulting Engineer Writes on 'Troubles'

Harry Earl Stafford, native of Prince Edward County and graduate of Belleville Collegiate, has joined the ranks of authors with the publication this month of a 200 page book entitled, "Troubles of Electrical Equipment", by McGraw, Hill Book Company, New York.

Mr. Stafford has been visiting in Prince Edward County with his mother, now 80 years of age and his brother, Mr. Ralph G. Stafford.

A well known consulting electrical engineer who has been engaged on the 3rd Parallel to the Mexican border and, thoroughly knows the Canadian and United States, Mr. Stafford was early attracted to the project of electrical power high school at Belleville he apprenticed with George H. Thomson, electrical engineer at Belleville, who later became the consulting engineer of the City of Winnipeg, Manitoba.

For a short time, Mr. Stafford was a sub-station operator in Belleville for the Trent Electric Company, the plant being in the stone building well-known to those who pass it every day crossing the footbridge. After that he went west and was called to all parts of the Continent in consultation on electrical installations. At present he is with John Stadler of Montreal, a great engineering consulting firm. Mr. Stafford being consulting electrical engineer.

Mr. Stafford has done a bit of prospecting in his time as his duties in installation of electrical equipment has often called him into the mining areas and is thus familiar with a number of the mineral fields and the great untold wealth of Canada in her north.

His book "Troubles of Electrical Equipment" covers in 200 pages the whole field of electrical troubles and is for the practical operating engineer or constructing engineer.

"The book discusses troubles of all classes of electrical equipment, much the same as a physician would diagnose and treat the sick body of patient. It carries 267 illustrations and 22 tables. The author charts the trouble under the following headings—symptoms, troubles, cause and remedy.

Debts Settlement.

"I am not prepared to express an opinion at the present time with regard to the methods of settlement."

Rupert De La Bere, Conservative, asked "is the chancellor not compelled to admit responsibility for what has been done in this budget during the last few weeks," but Chamberlain did not reply.

Coparently he referred to the recent visit to Washington of Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, and the presence in London of Norman Davis (United States Ambassador-at-large).

"On Edge of Precipice"

London, Apr. 21 (CP) — George Lansbury, Socialist Parliamentarian, returned from Germany today and reiterated his statement regarding the Reich's willingness to participate in a world economic conference was made public with the full knowledge of Chancellor Hitler.

"We are all living on the edge of a precipice," Lansbury said. "And I have not met anyone during the last five days not wanting peace. I ask my countrymen to consider the situation and do their utmost to persuade the government to let it be known they will join in a tremendous effort for peace, though this means concessions and sacrifice of some kind."

SPILLED GASOLINE CAUSE OF FIRE

Leggett's Repair Shop Destroyed When Gas Spills Near Stove

PALL OF SMOKE

Fire striking swiftly and dramatically shortly after four o'clock yesterday afternoon completely gutted Leggetts Taxi and Repair Shop, on Lower Front Street, when gasoline accidentally spilled became ignited when it contacted a stove located in the centre of the building.

Passersby were alarmed when the dull thud of an explosion sounded inside the building while dense clouds of thick black smoke which hung over the street like a pall emanated from the building. Lurid flames shot through the roof in a dozen places, swiftly the flames enveloped the tinder-like structure and soon the building was a blazing inferno before fire apparatus arrived from the station across the street.

Gordon Hilton an employee, it is stated, was working on an automobile, pouring gasoline into the tank of the car, when the unfortunate accident happened, the flow of gas falling from the tank and the inflammable liquid streaming in the general direction of the stove. Before he could take any preventive measures, there came a terrific explosion. Burning gasoline sprayed the interior of the building with the result that in the space of a few seconds the entire interior of the building was a mass of flames and black smoke. Ritson was hurried a distance of ten feet, escaping serious injury in the collapse of the building.

Fire squads rushed to the scene and confined the flames to the burning building. The car on which Ritson was working was hauled to safety and with the exception of some damage to the car no serious was otherwise alright.

Clarence Cornish, who was sleeping in the small taxi office at the front of the building, awakened to find himself in a mass of flames and smoke. Dashing out of the building he succeeded in retrieving the car parked in the opposite side of the garage.

Practically all of the contents of the building with the exception of some acetylene tanks and a few automobile were destroyed by the flames. Lines of fence were placed around surrounding buildings which were in imminant danger of falling prey to the flames, but vigilance on the part of firemen prevented what might have been a dangerous conflagration. Buildings and contents were covered by insurance, it was stated today.

Chief Wm. Lynch directed Public Police.

"The fire which occurred at the Leggett garage last night through the medium of burning gasoline should be sufficient warning to the general public", Fire Chief Wm. Lynch stated today, in reiterating a warning to the general public regarding the exercising of extreme care while using gasoline.

"While the majority of people are careful as a rule, there are some who apparently do not realize the danger of this fluid. It should be kept in small containers, preferably those with a safety device on the spout which prevents spilling."

Regarding the theft of a pair of fireman's boots from the scene of the fire yesterday, Chief Lynch stated that he would pay a reward of $5.00 for information leading to the arrest of the person or persons implicated in the theft.

MATERIAL NEEDED TO FILL MARSH

Beaches Officials Anxious to Have "Fill" Material Delivered

The fill committee of the Bay of Quinte Beaches Association Incorp., of which Mr. Hendershot is the chairman, is anxious that as soon as possible, the marsh at the west end of the city be filled in and requests everyone who has ashes, stones or any other material which can be used as fill for the marsh to communicate with the chairman or other officials.

The stones and such like are of no use for this purpose and are not wanted.

The committee believes that there is in the city a large amount of waste material which can be used in this work in connection with the beach and park project which is getting away to such a fine start with the unrelenting efforts of the officers of the association.

Coronation Play At Albert College

On Friday evening April 23rd the Albert College Dramatic Society will present its annual play. This year the play chosen is "Marigold" and due to King being crowned this year there is a certain appropriateness about this production. The play deals with Marigold, Victoria's first visit to Edinburgh after her coronation. As the title suggests Marigold is the name of the heroine, and the period of the play has about it of a touch of quaint old-world romance. This play recently enjoyed successful performances both in Toronto and New York, and the college production is under the capable direction of Miss Jessie B. Tulle.

POLICE BLOTTER

Complaining a valuable hound dog had been shot, Mr. W. McCambridge, Marysville, notified Provincial Police today that he had found his dog dead at the rear of his premises recently. Investigation subsequently revealed the canine had been shot with a .22 calibre bullet, that the police found in the carcass. Mr. McCambridge informed the authorities the dog had not been undoubtedly shot by jealous neighbours over repeated action.

Provincial Constable William Eldridge, yesterday investigated the theft of two 100-pound steel shafts, reported stolen from the premises of the old Deseronto Match Factory. Mystery surrounds the theft, the means of entrance to the old building was found possible, all doors and windows being securely fastened and barred. The steel shafts were five inches in diameter and were used for the manufacture of steel gears by the company when it was in operation. A small vice was also stolen, the owners stated.

Late this morning a tramp was seen in possession of a lady's purse in the vicinity of the Coleman Plate. Later it was discovered that the purse in question was the property of Mrs. Jack Madden, Front Street, and had been stolen from Mrs. Madden's residence. It contained two dollars and some valuable papers. Mrs. Madden is exceedingly anxious to recover an address book that was in the purse and may have been abandoned by the neighbourhood where the transient was seen tossing the contents of the purse away.

Twenty-three transients were afforded dry sleeping quarters at the police station last night.

FIRST TROUBLE CAUSES CHARGES

Two Men Fined For Obstructing Workmen at Hamilton

Hamilton, Ont., April 22 (CP) — First trouble at the Longshoremen's strike, which occurred last night, resulted in Harry Campbell, a Scot, and Michael Kiselak, a native of Czechoslovakia, being convinced of vagrancy charges when they appeared before Magistrate H. A. Burbidge.

Inspector T. A. Kay, in charge of the officers at the strike, told the court the two men were obstructing the sidewalk at the International Harvester Company's gate when stevedores were leaving the docks after loading a ship and were causing a considerable row by shouting obscene names at the workmen. Kiselak was holding a large stone in his hand when the officers apprehended him.

"Your record shows you are given to crimes of violence, and that's what you were doing in a lesser way" the magistrate told Campbell. Both fined $25 or 30 days in jail, while Campbell will serve an additional 14 days.

ENGLISH YOUTH VERY PERSISTENT

Wants Strip-Tease Dancer to Marry Him

Detroit, April 22 (CP)—Last summer at his home in Alcombe Manor, Willshire, England, 20 year old John R. Norley, saw the picture of a show girl in a magazine. Yesterday in Detroit the youth, one of the heirs to a family fortune, is attempting to persuade Miss Marion Martin, Gaiety Follies strip-tease dancer, to marry him.

He's been trying since he first met the girl in New York last July. He sat for 37 consecutive nights at a restaurant where Marion was featured, before he found someone who introduced him.

He has made three trips across the Atlantic and has followed the 22 year old "stripper" across the country, popping the question in Indianapolis, Columbus, Detroit, and every other city where the Follies has played.

But Marion's answer is always the same as it was the first time in New York—she has her career to think of.

SOCIETIES

ST. PAUL'S W.M.S.

The W.M.S. meeting was held in St. Paul's Church, Stirling on Tuesday with a fair attendance. Everyone was pleased to have the secretary, Mrs. E. G. Bailey back again after taking her trip for three months south to a warmer climate. A duet was given by Mrs. F. McKee and Mrs. R. Lucey "Someone is looking to you". The report from the Presbytery was given and was worthy of praise, Mrs. Earl Lucey took charge of the program. A playlet was given on Temperance by Mrs. Pitman, Mrs. for Donnan, Mrs. J. J. Wilson and Mrs. Lucey. Mrs. C. Lansing also gave pictures and a talk on the effects of liquor on a home and family. The meeting concluded by the use of the hymn "I need thee every hour." Mrs. J. J. Wilson taking the piano in the absence of Miss Cournyle. Prayer closed a very inspiring meeting.

AIKEN'S CHURCH W.M.S.

The opening exercises of the Easter Thank Offering Service at Aiken's was in charge of the Mission Band with little Miss Marion Allan, the President, in the chair. The Scripture lesson was read very well given orally by another member, Miss Jewel Bailey. A duet was sung by two very young members the Misses Evelyn and Dorothy May. A pageant "The Challenge of the Cross" was presented by the Associate Helpers, nine members of playing several crosses with a challenge to the world to help bear them. The first one that came forward made so many inquiries she was told she was too worldly to be given a cross. The next was willing but refused the cross that was given her—didn't think it suited to her, in her position in life and tried to exchange it. The third one was given a small, very beautiful cross, and it was found she was worshipping it for its beauty.

The next one wanted to bear a cross for her Master, but was not pleased with one given her, and tried to hide it from her friends. The next one was boastful and proud of her cross, but was told the Master seeks a contrite heart. The last one came with humility, and lovingly accepted a cross, but found it to be burdensome, and decided to lay it aside for awhile, and was told she must accept her cross for conflict, not for idle rest, and she must ask God for strength. After the cross would come the crown. Appropriate hymns were sung behind a curtain after each one had been rejected, and beautiful solos were given and the Grammar of this pageant was most impressive, giving all present a feeling of humility in the work of Master.

Mrs. W. C. Haggarty, Cherry Valley, President of Belleville Presbyterial was then introduced and her remarks were very attentively listened to by all present.

She very strongly urged that all have a strong desire to know their Bibles better, and read a beautiful poem, that was in the inside cover of her mother's Bible "My Bible and I". Her favorite hymn "Hunger for the word and work." Mrs. Haggarty is a very pleasing speaker and her message was bright and inspiring, with many good thoughts to be taken home.

The Thank Offering was $19.21.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

The thank offering meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian W.M.S. was held in the church parlors on Monday afternoon, Mrs. Morden acting president in the absence of Mrs. Fargey.

The minutes of a previous meeting were adopted and reports from the various secretaries were given. Arrangements were made for a tea at a later date. Mrs. Bell gave a solo dedicated in memory of Mrs. Edgar Rutherford, who was First Vice President. An inspiring paper was read by Mrs. Diamond the theme being "Thanks Giving". Thanks giving" prepared by Mrs. George Glenn. Mrs. Hamilton's prayer followed by refreshments and a social half hour was spent.

Painful Piles Can be Quickly Relieved

If you think there is no way to relieve the misery of piles, it's because you don't know of HEM-ROID, an internal medicine, from a prescription formula by Dr. Leonhardt, a western physician.

The real cause of piles is on the inside—clogged veins of blood in the lower bowel. With the tiny rectal vessel full of stagnant, impure blood.

Dr. Leonhardt's doctor formula relieves this misery, usually, with a medicine which would cause the congestion of blood in the veins of the lower bowel to shrink and help to heal and restore the sore, tender spots. After many tests he wrote the prescription which has proved so successful in giving relief to sufferers from piles. He wanted to you with our promise that you may have HEM-ROID must show you the quickest way to get relief, or your druggist will refund your money back. If you are not entirely satisfied after using one bottle. No matter what kind of piles you have or how long you have had them,

PRINCESS HAS BIRTHDAY

Princess Elizabeth will never forget her eleventh birthday, for it brings in the year when her father and mother will be crowned. This is important also as she herself stands next in line for that throne. The little princess is still the typical child, and yesterday her eleventh birthday there were no studies for this little miss. Hese is a serious enough outlook as she looks through the lessons which daily she receives in reading, writing, French, Scripture, arithmetic and English history, besiders her lessons in deportment and court etiquette. But she has also her play to lighten the load of study.

A kindly touch in yesterday's anniversary, showing the love of her uncle David, former King Edward VIII was the gift from him in far-off Austria. Princess Elizabeth has always been a favorite of the new duke of Windsor.

Big days are ahead of Princess Elizabeth. Slowly the full import of her great position will down on her. The little Princess Elizabeth and her little sister Princess Margaret Rose will wear special imperial colors at the coronation. The crowns will not rest heavily on the little heads as they are of light structure. They will be of silver gilt, with jewel-like chasing and mounted with the cross-plate and fleur-de-lis.

HOBBLED WORLD TRADE

The international atmosphere these days is full of whisperings about a world economic conference that may be born some time in the not too far distant future. A move in such a direction is known to be under way, although so far nothing definite has developed. Many statesmen have plainly come to realize that it is vital to cut away some of the entanglements of quotas, exchange regulations and tariffs that are choking international trade.

It is clear that if peace and prosperity are to come and remain, commerce between nations must be freed from some of the obstacles that at present hinder its flow. Governments are becoming more and more convinced that they cannot hope to have flourishing conditions in their own national gardens and still keep only a thin trickle of commercial intercourse with the outside world. And with the question of armaments trade are tied up the most serious problems that face the nations of the world. The whole question of currency relations is involved. Most important of all, perhaps, are the political relations between States, so closely bound up with economic policies.

The main impulse in the so far gentle move toward an economic conference seems to have come from the British Government. It commissioned Premier Van Zeeland to sound out the views of other nations, and already helpful responses have been received from several quarters. Yvon Delbos, the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, said that France would be glad to participate in the trade negotiations, and a number of the smaller countries, particularly in northern Europe, are known to be anxious to take part.

The most hopeful signs, however, have been coming from Germany, thought to be the greatest stumbling-block in the path of international economic reconstruction. This week Dr. Hjalmar Schacht said plainly that Germany is ready to discuss lowering her restrictions on imports. His statement comes on the heels of Hitler's announcement to George Lansbury the other day that Germany is in favor of a world conference.—Montreal Star.

I read the newspapers to see how God governs the world.—John Newton.

When ill news comes too late to be serviceable to your neighbor, keep it to yourself.—Zimmermann.

I am of opinion that there are no proverbial sayings, which are not true, because they are all sentences drawn from experience itself, who is the mother of all sciences.—Cervantes.

Books and proverbs receive their chief value from the stamp and esteem of ages through which they passed.—Sir William Temple.

Know the true value of time; snatch, seize and enjoy every minute of it. No idleness, no delay, no procrastination; never put off till tomorrow what you can do today.—Chesterfield.

A SURE SIGN

Up sprang the daffodilly,
The primrose did its stuff,
The air became less chilly—
But these were not enough;
Though Nature was revealing
Spring tints on frond and fern,
I somehow had a feeling.
That Winter would return.

The roses wanted pruning,
The lawn required a mow,
The pigeons started crooning,
The sun began to show,
Their promises I flouted,
And, resolutely glum,
I never, never doubted
More cold was still to come.

But now my gloom has faded,
My doubts all disappear,
I'm thoroughly persuaded
That Spring is really here,
Without one word of warning,
Her cleaning to begin,
My Marion this morning
Has called the painters in.

SPRING WILL BE FORMALLY USHERED IN NEXT WEEK when the Kinsmen Club, of Belleville, will hold a monster Motor Show and Fashion Festival in Belleville Armouries. This club of hustling young business men believes in doing things, as witness the Kiddie Kar Derby of last Labor Day, the first of the kind in Canada, but very popular in the United States where a recent International Soap Box Derby attracted entries from as far distant as South Africa, and spectators by the hundred thousand. The Kinsmen Automobile Show opens next Tuesday and will be a grand display of the newest models and the latest in automobile accessories. This alone would be enough attraction for all the motor minded men and women of this district, but the Kinsmen go farther and as an added attraction have arranged a Fashion Festival in which all the various latest styles in garments for the fair sex as decreed by the fashion centres of New York and Paris will be displayed on beautiful living mannequins. Spring is here and the show is on. Folks have been more or less cooped up all winter—now the great open spaces are calling and the Spring Automobile Show and Fashion Festival will be an appropriate opening for the spring activities.

OH! BOY! COME ON OVER AND PLAY IN OUR ATTIC! Such a salutation may be expected to become current ere long when most of the plans for home improvement inspired by the government's home improvement plan takes shape, for Mother is insisting that any home improvement must consider Junior and his need for exercise rainy days and in winter. Dad has a hankering, too, for a billiard and pool table in the attic or basement, and Mother has ideas of her own not ready for publication yet. All in all, this is going to be a great summer for the whole darn family, and a happier and more comfortable home for all concerned, as well as a deeper pride of possession of a home which anyone might well be proud of.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 22nd., 1917.

The Rev. A. M. Hubly of Emmanuel Church is visiting Bishop Willard Brewing and Mrs. Brewing at Toronto.

Dr. Harry Hopkins was home on his last leave today. He will leave Kingston shortly for overseas service.

The Y.M.C.A. team defeated a team from the O.S.D. in a game of indoor baseball in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium yesterday afternoon; the score was 18 to 12. The following composed the Y.M.C.A. team: Woodley, Van Allen, Taylor, Hargrave, Yeomans, Reston, Chute and Ellis.

Court Moira No. 33, I.O.F. held a successful and enjoyable "welcome home" in the court rooms, West Bridge Block, last evening.

The 254th Battalion will parade to St. Thomas' Church for service next Sunday morning.

30 YEARS AGO

April 22nd., 1907.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Crockett, resident on Pinnacle Street, who today are celebrating their golden wedding anniversary. On the 22nd. day of April, 1857 they were married in this city of Belleville by the Rev. Dr. Gregg, a Presbyterian minister who was stationed here at that time and who at present resides at Toronto. Both some members of the family and a few intimate friends the worthy couple will enjoy a social gathering at their home this evening. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Crockett will unite with the Intelligencer in wishing them many more years of happy wedded life.

The 15th regiment will parade to the hospital tot tomorrow evening. It will be the first parade this season.

40 YEARS AGO

April 22nd., 1897.

The roof is being put on Mr. Watkin's new cold storage building for cheese at the G.T.R. station.

Wheelmen see the new bicycle cage price 50 cents, at J. Brasier's store. (Advt).

The hare and hounds race held for the Y.M.C.A. juniors yesterday afternoon was a grand success. The two hares, Claud Pairman and Sid Pairman left the rooms at 2.30 o'clock running in a northerly direction and leaving the usual trail of small pieces of paper as they ran. Five minutes later the first hounds were started by the scent with Alex. Andrews and Abel Pinkie leading, but the former was overshadowed for them and in an hour's time had returned to the building eight minutes before any of the hounds.

Mr. George Bennett of Vandervoort's grocery is the winner in the guessing contest conducted by Charlie Schuster, men's furnisher. His guess was that 113 shirts had been sold at the store from April 10th. to the closing date of the contest. Geo's is highlighted with the fine silk umbrella which he received as a prize.

April 22nd., 1887.

The ruins of the old store building on Front Street, formerly used as the Farmers' Union Hotel and which was burned some years ago, have been removed. It was built some 50 years ago. John Forrin will build a modern store on the site which he has purchased from the McCurdy estate. The new building will be in keeping in appearance with the surrounding buildings.

Mr. Samuel McCloskey has opened a neat shaving and hair dressing parlor in a store on Front Street, opposite Campbell Street. In the front of the shop is a well selected stock of pipes, tobaccos and cigars. Mr. McCullough, who was formerly a member of the Intelligencer staff, is well known in the city and is already drawing a liberal patronage.

Telephones have been placed recently in the following places: Walter Aylsworth's planing factory office; Flint & Sherry's law office, and the office of the Ashley Carriage Company.

The ice passed out of the bay yesterday under the heavy west wind. The bay is said to be free now of ice from the Murray Canal to Big Bay. Navigation should open soon.

Will You Live to be 100?

Health statistics, now almost universally kept, and widely exchanged, are agreed upon the extension of what is called the "expectation of life" in most countries. With more careful conservation of health and better organization of health services it is expected that every day the expectation of life at birth may extend to seventy years, according to the Health League of Canada. The latest statistics available (1921) places the average expectation of life at birth in this country at fifty-nine and one-third years for men and sixty-one and one-half years for women, and this figure change only quite slowly. It will be some years before the seventy-year average is reached.

This Canadian record compares quite well with that of other countries, as the following figures show. It must be noted however that these are not all for the same years:

	Years
New Zealand (1931)	66½
Holland (1921-30)	nearly 63
Sweden (1926-30)	nearly 63
Denmark (1926-30)	nearly 62
Australia (1920-22)	61
United States (1933)	61
Germany (1924-26)	57
Italy (1930-32)	51
U.S.S.R. (European area 1926-27)	44
Japan (1921-25)	42

While we are thus becoming literally an older nation, this does not mean that, individually, our chances of living to be over seventy are much greater than they ever were. Our fathers, once they had got past the dangerous years, had a good a chance of long life as we have. What we are doing, however, is to a greater degree than they did is surviving those acute, dangerous years of babihood, childhood and early youth. In the sixteenth century, for instance, in Geneva, where records were kept even then, the expectation of life at birth was only twenty-one years.

We have no figures at hand to show the vast improvement in the infantile mortality rate in England, but the rise in the expectation of life in that country has been from forty-one years in the period 1838-54 to fifty-nine in 1930-32. It is altogether likely that there were as many centenarians in proportion to population in the earlier years as there are today; the difference comes from the number of babies and children who now reach maturity, in comparison with an age when less well educated in matters of public health.

Coming nearer home, in Toronto in 1900, 830 babies died before they had reached their first year. Had they been born in 1934, about 600 of them would have been saved, thanks to the greater and more intelligent care we should have known how to give them. In this Province the same thing—unfortunately to not so striking a degree—is also true. With regard to the treatment of disease an equally marked improvement is shown. In the neighboring Province. In 1883 typhoid fever caused 648 deaths; in 1933, 38. Diphtheria's death toll in 1888 was 1,006; in 1933 it was reduced by 33 for the whole Province, a wonderful record. Tuberculosis has been cut to less than half in the same period, from 2,313 to 1,096. And there is this further and impressive fact to consider, that these striking reductions in mortality took place during a period when the population of Ontario doubled.

These are remarkable records. They show what can be done by general public in health measures. We can be equally well in this Province and throughout Canada in the same way.

Stray Bits

THE COUNTRY CORRESPONDENT—

Pity the country correspondent!

At a season when all the questions are answered before they are asked and when the small-town weekly paper correspondent as a just award for humiliation suffered as a result of our sins of omission, declares one of them in a sparkling article in the current issue of the Northern News.

From the lofty position of a real, honest-to-goodness city reporter we have descended to the humble indeed; but Mr. and Mrs. Average Resident seem to think that we should be infallible and possess just as keen a sense of news as the conscientious, over varied country correspondent. That each of us has one (at least) faithful friend and ally, who may be relied on to aid and abet us in our search for news, one whom we know is loyal to us and to our columns we bear without envy and now. May their days be long in the land.

x x x

To be a successful small-town correspondent, one requires a superabundance of tact, discretion, patience and news-sense, to say nothing of a certain quality which permits one to bear unflinchingly the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune. Also one requires nothings to those who say them we mean—retailed in the market place regarding our paper. Anyway, those days such a one live and have their being, you and I, are over. Such a suffice to say that our own seems to have been passed by.

x x x

Even to be an ordinary, average variety of the genus small-town correspondent, one requires a never failing memory for such minutiae as dates of events, big and little; a sixth, yea, verily, a seventh and eighth sense to ferret out news; to be aware in some mysterious manner of the many events now with in our gates, where they hail from, and why. For in fact how we might be grateful for such information will never enter the minds of these folks. These things are definitely up to us, so why should we worry.

x x x

But fail to have that information in the next week's column, and there will be no need of burning incense to a sweet that ultimately not conducive to our peace of mind are being knocked.

x x x

There are occasions, too, when we meet scowls kindly disposed neighbor with news to relate, and how is it, we have no pencil with a scrap of paper or the stub of a pencil. Oh, well, we shall try and remember the several items, so we trust to hard and a not-too reliable memory. Arriving home we snatch up pad and pencil only to discover we've not been home since Sisters Green was elected president of the club when which was made the night train for the east.... We must make a point of asking the first Club member we meet. As for that last item—what was it? We cudgel our brain in vain.... It's gone, completely vanished.

x x x

There are Mr. and Mrs. Average Resident who simply detest seeing their name in print. We know them by the cold and baleful look they give us, if, in our naivety, we print their glad tidings after we have failed to do our duty by our paper. On the other side of the fence live Mr. and Mrs. Average Resident who are just as indignant when their names fail to appear. On occasions such as either of these it behooves the small-town correspondent to be wary and steadfast, except to out of the line of vision of these, at any other time, delightful neighbors.

x x x

And the account of last night's game, or perhaps it was a whist drive which we didn't attend, it was such miserable weather.... Well it's the deadline now and we accept the story on faith, trusting to the special guardian angel who hovers over even average correspondents on rare occasions when the guardian angel was hovering elsewhere, someone has blundered. Further we learn that the prizes were donated. Shall we ever be forgiven the omission?

x x x

Again something like this is said very sweetly: "I was disappointed in not seeing you at the XYZ doctrine's meeting.... You didn't get quite the right line on that resolution.... an unbiased report." We jump wildly and murmur something supposed to be intelligent. Of course, we're nothing to say to ourselves, though to ourselves we fale a little proud over the way we had worded that awkward little episode.

...sorry we weren't mistaken? Besides, wasn't that the week we were convalescing from the 'flu, or the mumps or something? Maybe we'd been delirious when we wrote it.

Then there are those monthly meetings of the XYZ Guild, which some kind person faithfully reports for us. It is no longer their duty, silence follows, and we make a request which is graciously acceded to, or a little while.... To sigh and wonder whether they would rather not have their meetings reported....we don't know what to do, but we decide to wait a while before mentioning it again. We recall that incident, oh, ages ago, when a certain matter, the responsibility of which rested on one department, was, well, dumb things are bound to happen sometimes, and the following report, as given, caused a minor upheaval at the next meeting—though, of course it was no fault of ours," we were informed. However, reports were few and far between, and decidedly brief, for quite some time afterwards.

Anyhow, we wait, until the inevitable ..... our activities so seldom appear in the press now, we thought you liked to get news of this sort.....

"Like? Of course we do, in fact that is what we are here for," we reply, aloud. To ourselves, we ask in despair, "Why, oh why, won't they see that this is all grist that comes to our mill.... that we are but the hook.... minus the headline. If they would only realize how much we'd rather make that hook a mile."

'YOU'VE BEEN DUPED; YOU'VE BEEN FOOLED'

When Mayor Alex Hall, of Oshawa, appeared to address a mass meeting of striking General Motors employees, as shown above, he was howled down by the strikers after he had asked them to return to work prior to beginning negotiations with the company. Mayor Hall had previously stated that should the United Automobile Workers of America fail to call a strike at all Oshawa plants, he would advise the General Motors plants in the United States he would advise the Canadian workers to go back to work. During the mass meeting Mayor Hall was continually booed and laughed at and in exasperation he cried: "You've been duped; you've been fooled; you've been hoodwinked." The meeting unanimously voting against the plan to return to work.

Presentation

A very pleasant time was spent at Mr. Herbert Burke's home on Friday evening when the stockholders and employees families of the Glen Cheese Manufacturing Co. gathered to spend a social evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Palmer and Beverley who are leaving the community in the near future to their new home at Ivanhoe where Mr. Palmer has been engaged as cheesemaker.

Mr. Herbert Burke, president of the company, was master of ceremonies for the evening's entertainment which consisted of community singing, speeches and selections by the Fuller Quartette. Mrs. Gordon Mills read the following address:

Fuller, April 16, 1937.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Palmer and Beverley,

Dear Friends,—

We realize with many regrets that you are soon to leave this community and we are taking this opportunity of spending a social time with you. Words fail us to express our sense of loss, which we feel, at your departure as a family from our midst. You have always been ready to help and have given us many gay and talents which we appreciate. It is indeed hard for us to express our appreciation of all you have meant to our Sunday School and Church, and we shall cry how that our loss will be others' gain. Our best wishes for your happiness and prosperity follow you to your new home. We feel your place will be hard to fill but we trust that health and happiness may be your lot. We can not words to express our loss in your sterling qualities and as a slight token of our esteem we ask you to accept this gift and may it ever remind you of the sincerest interest of your Fuller associates.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors,

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Irvine
Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Mills
Miss Mary Dowson
Mr. George Brough.

Mr. and Mrs. Palmer were presented with a lovely occasional chair and both made suitable replies.

Reduces Varicose or Swollen Veins

Simple Home Treatment Proves it At Small Cost

The world progresses. Today many minor ailments that took weeks to conquer, yield in a few days, much more quickly. If you have varicose veins or swollen glands get busy to bring them back to normal size and if you are wise you will do so.

Just get from any druggist or Moone's Emerald Oil at Doyle's Drug Store. Add a little to water as directed and apply it night and morning to the enlarged veins. In a short time the veins should begin to grow smaller and by regular use soon appear normal.

People who want to reduce varicose veins or simple swellings, without having to operate or injections should not hesitate to try a bottle at once. It is so penetrating and powerful that a small bottle lasts a long time.

Brief addresses were given by Messrs. Donald McIntyre, Thomas McMullen, H. V. Hoover, John Farrell and Alex Gibson.

Mr. Wesley Farrell rendered two violin solos, including "Home Sweet Home". The Misses Blanche and Eda McMullen sang a vocal number.

Miss Betty Sine read the following address:

"Bethel, April 19th, 1937.

"Dear Dorothy and Clarence—

"As your Bethel friends and neighbours have taken unlimited possession of your home tonight to wish you "Bon Voyage" on the sea of Matrimony.

The gift from the neighbours was a lovely silver flower basket and from her associates in business a silver bread tray.

Dear Evelyn:

A poet has written, "Loving is a painful thrill"

And, not to love, more painful still.

And also, though to refresh our memories,

Concerning recent events.

'Twas in the summer time so sweet When hearts and flowers are both in season

That who, of all the world should meet

One early dawn but love and reason?

Love told his dreams of yesternight While reason talked about the weather.

The moon in sooth, was fair and bright

And they took their way together.

Having learned of your approaching marriage, Your Front Street friends are invading your home this evening to participate in extending to you their expression of affection, esteem and good will. They ask you to accept this flower basket, and tread tray from the Bell Telephone staff and the fact that in presenting the one, that in the days that follow, you may be reminded by this tangible expression of the high regard in which you are held by your neighbours.

Our very best wishes accompany this gift that the future may bring to you and your husband, prosperity in material things, the continued high esteem of those among whom you live and as well that spiritual well being which brings life's greatest happiness.

(Signed on-behalf of your neighbors—Isobel McIntosh, Mrs. Cadement, Mrs. Wall, Bernice Rollins.

Q. V. INSPECTION IS CALLED OFF

(Weather Condition Responsible For Postponement at School

Due to the unseasonable weather no outside inspection of the cadets of King George School for their annual cadet inspection yesterday afternoon. A fine program of cadet activities featured by physical culture drill was presented in the school auditorium before examining officers Capt. Payne, Headquarters Military District No. 8, Kingston.

The full curriculum of physical drill was performed and generally commented upon by the examining officer for general efficiency of the cadets gained through Major Harrington and Lieut. Principal O. A. Brown. Forty-five uniformed cadets and 40 junior pupils in civil took part in the exhibitions, the uniformed cadets showing general marching and marching while the juniors gave physical training exercises under Miss M. E. Kells was also in attendance.

Owing to unfavorable weather conditions the cadet inspection at Queen Victoria School, scheduled for this morning, was indefinitely postponed, instructing officer Lt. Hammond has ordered. Owing to the large number of cadets under training at the R. M. C. it would also have been impossible to hold the demonstration on the same day as the girls. Captain Panet, the inspecting officer in charge, stated he would not assume any set date for his return at present. The public school cadet inspection under the city has been exceptionally early this year, owing to the forthcoming coronation ceremonies.

Stage at Cooking School is Electrically Equipped Kitchen

Mrs. E. McLean, Demonstrates How to Cook Many Delicacies

PRIZES AWARDED

The electric cooking classes being held at Christ Church Parish Hall this week under the auspices of the Parish Guild met with an enthusiastic reception as well over two hundred women of Belleville attended to hear Mrs. E. McLean, Home Service Director of Moffats Limited, bring to her audience the benefit of many years' professional experience in the art and demonstration of electric cooking and modern household science. Wednesday was the second day of the classes and the large audience was intensely interested in the many delicacies prepared.

Advantages Outlined

Mr. Everett Smith, of the local Hydro Office, told of the advantages of cooking with electricity.

The stage was arranged as a model electrically equipped kitchen with Moffat ranges, Kelvinator, fridge and other modern devices. The lighting was work in the home, and made a perfect setting for the work that was to be accomplished.

Mrs. McLean expressed pleasure at meeting so many Belleville women again and hoped they would thoroughly enjoy this year's classes.

Efficient Assistant

Mrs. W. Thomer was an efficient assistant, helping with the duties of a busy afternoon. The ladies were invited to ask questions on any problems they had trouble with.

Several simple dishes were mixed on to the women, such as, rubbing the skins of potatoes to be baked with butter to prevent them from drying out and cracking; what roasting meat, sprinkle salt on the fat and as the fat melts the seasoning is carried into the meat; how to keep cheese shortbread, bake in a hot oven on a light tin, the old cheese for baking as new makes your biscuits tough; do not let two pieces of meat touch each other or they will become dark, place paper between the layers.

Prize Winners

Yesterday the "repeat" day and the appetizing roasts and steamed dinners made one's mouth water. Mrs. Hubert was the lucky one to cast from steamer into which was placed round steak, onion, tomato, flour, salt and pepper had been sifted and then thoroughly pounded with a cup of water. Carrots and grated beets were placed around the meat with a little tomatoe sauce for seasoning; over this was poured a cup of water and a tiny bit of butter. In the top part of the steamer a wet pudding made with the following recipe was placed over the steamer:

1 cup suet 1 cup bread crumbs
1 cup flour 1 cup dates
¼ cup brown sugar ½ cup milk
2 eggs 1 tsp. soda ½ tsp. salt

Steam for two hours and serve with a favourite sauce; one flavored with nutmeg is very nice. A recipe for chicken noodles was prepared; instead of chicken, tuna fish was used. After taken from the can, it was placed under hot water to wash off any oil and the fishy taste from it. Into a buttered casserole was put alternate rows of noodles and tuna fish over which were placed the contents of a small can of mushroom soup and then topped with grated cheese.

Recipe For Biscuits

Another recipe, that for hot biscuits was given:

2 cups flour ½ tsp. salt
¼ cup butter or shortening
4 tsp. baking powder
¾ cup milk ¼ cup milk

Knead lightly 18 times and cut out. Wrap a strip of bacon around each biscuit and fasten with a toothpick and bake.

A meat loaf, stuffed hamburg roast and a casserole of corn, carrots and onions were then given by Mr. Jack Smith followed by an instrumental solo by Miss Eva Carey.

A reading was given by Miss Edith Walker and the meeting closed with a hymn and the League Benediction.

Donald, America's favorite singing boy of cooking with electricity, in his "naughty diskette" and "Rose Marie" recordings, coming to Belleville favorably for one entire week.

REPORT EXECUTION DUTCH OFFICIALS

Indignation Spreads in Netherlands Over Incident

Amsterdam, April 22 (CP) —Indignation spread in the Netherlands today against the Spanish insurgents for their reported execution of Dutch officials captured aboard the steamer Andra before it was sunk in the Bay of Biscay April 6.

The report, carried in a dispatch to the newspaper Telegraf from its St. Jean de Luz, France, correspondent, further inflamed public opinion already irritated by the insurgent fleet's seizures of neutral shipping.

The dispatch, which had not been officially confirmed, declared the Dutch officials were shot after a court martial.

"The Andra, Dutch ship under the Panamanian flag, succeeded in breaking the Bilbao blockade," the paper's correspondent reported.

"However, on its return it was caught by an insurgent cruiser en route to San Sebastian. It appears that the whites (insurgents) found three members of a Spanish governmental commission aboard who had bought munitions aboard.

"These Spaniards and all Dutch officials of the Andra were executed. The other prisoners were taken on to Salamanca instead of being shot as they had not participated in buying munitions."

The other members of the crew, all Dutch, were reported to have been imprisoned in the foreigners' camp at Salamanca, seat of the insurgent regime.

Mr. Picobac's Advice to Anglers

"I WANT you to put a piece in the paper where everybody will see it," said Mr. Picobac to his friend, Herb Smith, editor of the Essex Centre Gazette and County Advertiser (circulation guaranteed). "It'll save me a lot of time writing letters in answer to correspondents."

"Sure," said Herb, feeling for the pencil behind his ear.

"It's poetry," confessed Mr. Picobac, handing it over.

The editor read it aloud:

"Angler's Calendar for April"
"Give your good trout red a coat of shellac,
"Glue up the forceps if any be slack;
"Test all your tapers, silk, linen or cotton,
"Cut off the ends of all such as be rotten;
"Take last summer's leaders now frazzled and worn,
"All moth-eaten trout flies, tattered and torn,
"Make one last cast with them—throw them away,
"Stock up with new stuff for Trout Opening Day."

'No Disposition to Foist Privy Council Authority On Dominions' —Asquith

London, April 21 (CP)— There has never been a disposition in England to foist the authority of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on a reluctant Dominion, says Hon. Cyril Asquith, K.C., writing in the London Daily Telegraph.

Asquith, fourth son of the late Earl of Oxford and Asquith, an outstanding authority on common law, was referring to the recent debate on the Privy Council in the Canadian House of Commons. Apart from his observations little has appeared in the United Kingdom press on the criticism of the Judicial Committee's decisions affecting Canada's "New Deal" legislation.

May Abolish It

If the Dominion dislikes the appeal, Asquith says, it has only to pass an act abolishing it in civil as well as criminal matters. He proceeds:

"There is another alternative. The decisions complained of in Canada are decisions on the interpretation of the British North America Acts which enshrine the Canadian constitution. These acts could be amended so as to confer on the Dominion Parliament without ambiguity power to carry legislation of the sort which has been held invalid. It could not be done in Canada, but the parliament at Westminister can amend them with the consent of Canada.

Ready to Meet Wishes

"In the past the Imperial Parliament has been alert to meet the wishes of Canada for any change in her constitution by passing the necessary legislation. If the Dominion and Provinces can agree on a new distribution of legislative power between themselves, or some clarification of the existing distribution, it is most unlikely that they will meet with any opposition from Whitehall or Westminster, and this should satisfy them."

MOTION TO QUASH WARRANT HEARD

Counsel Claims Ann Harding Had Consent to Take Child Abroad

Quebec, April 22 (CP)—Decision on a motion to quash a warrant for the arrest of Ann Harding, stage and screen star will be handed down on Friday by Judge Lachance Roy, announced today following hearing of legal argument.

The warrant was sworn out last May on complaint of Harry Bannister, former husband of the screen star, who sought to prevent her from taking their nine-year old daughter, Jane to England, Miss Harding pleaded the warrant by making a last-minute switch in her ship reservations.

Paul Taschereau, K.C., for Quebec presented the motion to Judge Roy in behalf of Roland H. Woolley of Los Angeles, Miss Harding's lawyer. Purpose in having the warrant withdrawn, according to Woolley, is to prevent "annoyance" to Miss Harding if she decides to return from England in a ship docking here.

Judge Roy issued the original warrant nearly a year ago. According to Taschereau's argument, his Lordship was deceived by Bannister, the divorced husband, he said, told the Judge Miss Harding was kidnapping the child from the United States.

This was not the case said Taschereau, the actress had permission from California courts to take the child abroad for six months between May and December.

Bombshell is an Attempt to Hinder C. A. H. A. Delegates Told by Association Prexy

NOT CONCERNED

Quebec Association is Ready to Co-operate With Parent Body

Toronto, April 21.—(CP)— The major question in amateur hockey's double muddle today was the effect a suspension by the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada would have on members of Winnipeg Monarchs, Dominion Junior Champions.

A few hours before, Monarchs were scheduled to play Hershey Bears in an International Series game here last night and shortly after the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association had concluded its three-day annual meeting, a bombshell was tossed into the ring by a delegate to the Association's meeting.

Leo Dandurand of Montreal, Quebec Amateur Hockey Association representative and First Vice-President of the A.A.U. of C., issued a statement on behalf of the latter body that meant automatic suspension from any sports controlled by the A.A.U. of C. for players of any team playing Hershey.

Burns and Dandy, of C. had been notified by the A.A.U. of the United States Eli Asmis in the annual meeting of States Amateur Hockey League, of which Hershey was one, had been suspended in March, 1937. Burns said the Canadian body had no choice but to uphold its alliance with the U.S. Union and serve warning to Canadian teams.

Monarchs Not Worrying

After defeating Hershey 5-1, players and club officials of Monarchs hustled to the train, homeward bound. No statement was made on behalf of the players or the club but it was learned they were not worrying about the situation. It was believed few if any of the boys compete in sports under A.A.U. of C. jurisdiction.

The A.A.U. of C. directly controls track and field, boxing and wrestling, and gymnastics and basketball. Most important of its affiliated bodies are the basketball, ski and lacrosse associations.

Following the statement issued by Burns, another was released by Cecil Duncan of Ottawa, president of the C.A.H.A., in which it is handed the affair an attempt "at a take in hour to embarrass the Association in the conduct of the International series games now in progress."

Duncan went on to say authorization for the games had been given by the International Ice Hockey Federation, which the C.A.H.A. has become after breaking away with the A.A.U. of C. He said any communications from the A.A.U. of C. should have been made directly to the C.A.H.A. or to the I.I.H.F., of which the American body also is a member.

Allege Blackmail Held Up

C.A.H.A. officials alleged Burns held up the statement concerning the A.A.U. of C. suspension until a late hour, rather than bring up the matter immediately on receipt of a telegram from John Leslie, Edmonton, Secretary of the A.A.U. of C. Burns said his statement was made on authorization of the President, Jack Hamilton of Calgary.

A. H. Cox, Winnipeg, president of the Manitoba Branch of the Association and chairman of the Records' Committee of the A.A.U. of C., said last night that Burns had the telegram "at least 24 hours" before he came to release it in the form of a press statement.

Two minor matters were settled in the late afternoon just before the big fuss broke. Both involved Burns and, afterwards, pledged co-operation of the Q.A.H.A. with the parent body after being asked by George Dudley of Midland, Ont., second vice-president, what the position of the Quebec Branch would be in relation to the Association.

Trouble Is Ironed Out

Dudley's request referred to a misunderstanding last year of which the Q.A.H.A. if the C.A.H.A.'s famed "four points" were adopted. Three points were passed on the first day of the annual meeting, while a fourth was left over in spirit of believing in the principle of the fourth.

President Duncan had handled the affair satisfactorily.

The other incident was a spirited protest by Burns on behalf of the Q.A.H.A. for what he declared was an invasion of Q.A.H.A. territory by the C.A.H.A. in dealing directly with the Montreal Senior group without consulting the Quebec Branch first. This also was dropped.

SHORTEN SCHEDULE

Wembley Lions And Sudbury Tigers Playoff For Title

Toronto, April 22 (CP)—Finals in Toronto's International Amateur Hockey Tournament will start tonight, several steps ahead of schedule Sudbury Tigers and Wembley Lions, champions of Canada and of England, will meet in a best-of-three series that follows on an abbreviated schedule.

Winnipeg Monarchs and Hershey Bears, the other two participants met last night and the Canadian Junior titlists defeated the United States senior champions 6-1. Immediately afterward both clubs headed homeward, Hershey having won in three starts and Winnipeg was under suspension by the American Athletic Union of Canada for having played the Bears, who are regarded by the A.A.U. of C. and the A.H.A. of A., of the United States, as outlaws.

Wembley has played twice, bruising Hershey and Winnipeg. Sudbury has played once, getting back from Allan Cup finals at Calgary in time to administer one of the few defeats to Hershey. On that single victory the Tigers were awarded a place in the two-team finals.

Originally scheduled to go nine games before finals, the tourney has since gradually diminishing crowds. Before Hershey and Winnipeg played to an attendance of 500 last night, officials announced the rest of the preliminaries were off and Sudbury and Wembley would begin the last round immediately.

The A.A.U. of C. announced any team playing Hershey would be suspended and Monarchs automatically entered the Union's Black list, when they stepped to the ice. The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, after controlling body over the Winnipeg club, withdrew from its A.A.U. affiliation at its convention this week.

ANGLERS START PLUG CASTING

Beginners And Veterans of Rod and Reel Out in Full Force

The swish of the line and the whirl of the reel with rods clutched by casting hands were seen and heard at the Armouries last evening, when the opening plug and fly casting exercises of the Belleville Anglers' Association were the order of the evening. Some 30 disciples of Izaak Walton's famed diversion were in attendance and spent two full hours limbering up their arms and gauging distances to be sure and alert for the approaching angling season.

A goodly number of beginners and veterans took advantage of the opening exercises and practiced under the guidance of more proficient casters. President Joe Shortt was on hand to welcome all newcomers and the committee in charge of the casting practices is composed of Fred White, chairman, R. Wease, F. Croft and C. Delong. The latter sessions are expected to be dispensed with next week, but will open with added vigor the following week in September.

When the beginners and juveniles are ready to cast for keeps, the angling of the rod competitions will be the order of the night and prizes will be the winners. In various classes to be determined, competitions will be staged. Chairman White announced.

Dr. Van Blaklaize, in charge of the exhibition of fly casting for the Belleville Anglers' Association, announced that a half a million herring had been deposited in lakes and rivers of North Hastings for feed for the game fish, principally bass, streams and lakes will be stocked in this county through negotiations of the local club with the Department of Game and Fisheries, Chairman Dr. Blaklaize announces last night. Lake, speckled and brook trout, lunge, pickerel and bass, are the game fish required for replenishment of local waters.

Those in charge of the casting school for beginners and juveniles were Russ White and Ralph Wease for plug casting and R. Scollon for those interested in fly casting.

CORCORAN SETS ALL-STAR CARD

Every Wrestler to Show Wares in Main Bout Calibre

Professional wrestling returns to Belleville tonight with an all-star card to be held at the Arena, featuring a match between John Kilcan and Ted Key.

Kilcan, Winnipeg Ukrainian, who formerly held the Canadian title and now is campaigning in an effort to regain it. He has an excellent United States record as may be gathered from the fact that when he was matched with Jim Londos at Soldiers of St. Louis two ago, the gate was $40,000. However, he will have to be prepared for a bout that will be ultra-speedy as well as strenuous for Key is regarded as one of the fastest, trickiest men in the heavyweight division.

Another man on the card is of main bout calibre. Charlie Strack, former Olympic star will oppose Henry Graber, champion of Germany. Graber is noted for his good looks and his flashy wrestling but he has class and is a dangerous opponent.

Henry Piers, the Dutch champion, and Jack Coffield, speedy Omaha heavy, will complete the card.

"A prophet is without honour in his own country." Who ever predicted that phrase surely knew whereof what he spoke. Take for instance Lou Thesz who was once with the Boston marathon and brought both fame and distinction to his country. A pure case of "from rags to riches." What we have in mind is not exactly a duplication of Young's achievement, but there are undoubtedly similarities however. Around Belleville there seems to be a modest and rather selfish rumour in the air regarding George Pepper's day in the Isle of Man, as to have repeatedly stated, George Pepper is to represent Canada at Douglas and it is no way commercialism his attempts to gain further honours on the motorcycle race tracks of the Isle of Man.

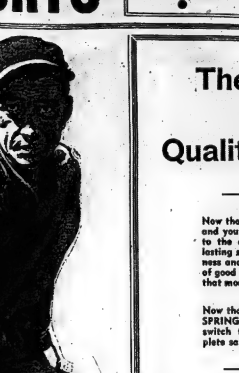
Due to unforseen circumstances George is not even riding a Norton machine, he previously had generously paid for an Excelsior bike in Toronto via Saskatoon. This machine is a racing model and was shipped to Belleville. Many Belleville people expressly to enter in the Labor Day race in Belleville, but no rider in Canada can ride a bike he purchases prior. George tried the bike out on Wednesday when he was quite satisfied with its performance. Next, what we are trying to bring before the fans is the fact, that George Pepper is riding independently and for Canada. We hope this point is clear to those, who may not have quite grasped what stood the situation before. This is purely a sporting venture, where true sportsmanship enters into the picture. Maybe that's too deep for some, but as say nay-nie, it's the cold hard truth.

Others seem to think that colonial riders cannot compete with the Old Country motorcycle riders, but Belleville proves otherwise. Alex Bennett, Belleville rider won all races on the Isle of Man before he retired in 1914 and was heralded as one of the best riders ever to compete in that race. True enough colonial riders have been rather scarce since Bennett's regime, but perhaps in George Pepper Belleville has a rider equally as good, who knows. Anyway we purchased the new machine and confidentially he placed himself under personal financial obligations to do so. His machine is a 500 c.c. machine and he proposes to enter the 350 and 500 c.c. classes with this machine and also expects to drive a lightweight Supreme machine 250 c.c. which he expects to ride in the 250 Junior class. Incidentally there are rule of Man races for 250, 350, 500 and 600 c.c. events, run of on a Monday, Wednesday and Friday. They expect over half a million people to witness these races.

Not only are Canadian hockey players invading England with great success, but London's most sensational young star in the motorcycle rider today is a Canadian, Eric Chitty of Toronto, so it is plain to be seen Pepper is not the pioneer in this field. Chitty, however, only races on dirt tracks and in what might be called bashed. This year, his initial in the Old Country, he set track records for 350 c.c. machines in all the events in London as a consequence Chitty can now get go for motorcycle racing on the Isle of Man. Chitty and Bennett are two Canadian riders who have made good on English tracks and Pepper will be the fourth Pepper make it the lucky trio? The clans fund being raised to assist George to the Isle of Man for the big race is being met nicely, only about $50.00 being needed to have Reynolds and Belleville represented by the Canadian champion rider at all the world's championship races. How about it fans?

If our memory serves us right Charlie Strack, the Boston terror who was beaten by Jim Londos, the German titleholder at the arena here, is none other than the man, who took Lionel Conacher under his wing and was training him for the wrestling ring some years ago. Strack was impressed with the 1934 Lou Marsh Hockey bosses scowled too heavily upon the ring adventures of Conacher and called an abrupt halt to the futurity of Minister Strack. Conacher, however, is a grappler of the first school, but meets a formidable opponent in Henry Graber.

Promoter Jack Corcoran, sensing the importance of the utilization of results of tonight's main and semi-windup bouts, took no chances and engaged Jackie Forbes as the third man in the squared circle, as Forbes, from the Pacific Coast, has come east highly heralded and desirous of cutting a wide swath in Eastern wrestling circles. He meets a tough hombre in John Kistan, as "Sunny" Dunlop knows after his only engagement versus the former Canadian titleholder here in Belleville.



Just how the new ruling of the C.A.H.A. pertaining to amateur hockey clubs playing versus professional clubs is going to effect the amateur status of the players is questionable. The matter of playing baseball versus hockey in amateur and pro. clubs was discussed by the C.A.H.A. annually and last body was of the opinion, that it was practically impossible to do so. However, the ruling in the matter. Personally we feel the hockey moguls made a win move as mingling with pros as opponents should not materially alter the amateur status in any fair play, whether it be baseball, hockey or basketball. Now the question arises, if a ball player, basketball player, etc., happens to play with an amateur hockey team versus a pro. club, where does he stand in the eyes of the almon purex?

With Fred Perry and Ellsworth Vines, the two rackety tennis stars of the week, pocketed at the Maple Leaf Gardens on Friday night a goodly number of local and suburbs should avail themselves of the opportunity of watching two such outstanding tennis players in action.

Well, the hockey moguls know just where they stand after the annual meeting of the C.A.H.A. and the Winnipeg Monarchs. It has gone to show who has the final say in these matters.

Do you remember when Max Schmeling, regarded then as now as the next human exciting to the stabling fists of Joe Louis, arrived in New York one year ago today to prepare for his June 18 heavyweight title bout with Jack Sharkey? The German crossed critics with a smashing win and became foremost challenger for the elderliest of all heavyweight champion Jimmy Braddock.

FATHER DIVINE TO GIVE SELF UP

Wanted by Police on Charge of Felonious Assault

New York, April 22 (AP)—A shiny-pated little Negro, known to thousands of his devout followers simply as "God," advised police through an attorney Tuesday he was ready to submit to arrest on a charge of felonious assault.

Within 24 hours, Arthur A. Madison, Harlem lawyer, said, Father Divine, patron saint of a "heaven" of his own creation and dozens of extension heavens," will surrender for questioning concerning the beating and stabbing administered Harry Green, a white contractor of Weehawken, N.J., yesterday.

The haven sought by the negro, in whose name thousands of acres of upstate farm land has been bought with nickels full of currency, was a chauffeur-driven limousine. From there he telephoned the attorney.

Early yesterday police of eight states received an order for apprehension of Father Major J. Divine.

Green was stabbed while attending one of the nightly services in his 'kingdom' headquarters here when a friend or Green, Ted Cam-, attempted to serve Father Divine with a summons in a civil suit.

A riot ensued. Negro adherents of "God"—whose legal name, police said, is George Baker—fell upon the process server, from Union City, N.J., and beat him until he managed to wriggle through the crowd and reach a taxi.

His hurts, it developed, were few.

But Green was less lucky. In Harlem Hospital his condition was described as serious. Police said the charge against Baker, or Father Divine, would be changed to homicide if the man died.

NEW RAIDS ON BRITISH IN INDIA PREDICTED

Simla, India, April 22 (CP-Havas)—New raids on British military concentrations are predicted here following a proclamation of the Fakir of Ipi calling for mobilization of all by his followers against British troops.

Rumors carried his call to the nomadic tribesmen who later assembled at a headquarters in the region of the fakir, who call himself "the Champion of Islam." In revolt for several months, the fierce Wazir and Mahsud tribesmen raided the frontier post of Takri in the Bannu district Saturday.

Reports from the Tirara military post said hostile tribes had withdrawn from miles after repeated raids on the post.

A British punitive expedition under Major-General Iris de Brugh is attempting to restore order in the region. Brigadier Francis E. Maynard, cbf Ottawa, a graduate of the Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont., is commanding a brigade at Idamu, a focal point in the punitive operations.

FASCISTS RIOT WITH CARLIST PARTY

Bayonne, France, April 22 (AP) — Three persons have been killed at the hungrod Spanish city of San Sebastian, reliable reports said today, in resistance to General Francisco Franco's decree merging Fascist and Carlist organizations among his supporters and suppressing all subversion state.

San Sebastian Fascists refused to comply with Franco's plan to create a one-party authoritarian state, and rioted with Carlists.

FASCISTS DEFEATED

New York, April 21 (CP)—Joseph R. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association declared a boycott against all Italian and White Star ships in North American ports, effective at 1 p.m. EST, as an outgrowth of the labor struggle with the National Independent Union of Longshoremen at Montreal.

Royal Road TO THE CORONATION

Her Majesty as Company Leader of the Girl Guides.

HER MAJESTY'S interest in boys and girls matches and particularly in the Boy Scouts with whom he is well known. Her Majesty the Queen is another who became a Guide in the girlhood months she was able to spend in the Scottish home of her family, which made her appreciate the love of the outdoors that is a feature of the Guide movement.

During the visits to outlying parts of the Empire now being made by the King Her Majesty has proved herself quite willing to share the rough and tumble of outdoor life along with her sterner companions. In Kenya she hunted with the then duke, and again in Australia, when the royal party spent a fly on the Queensland plains and took its meals around the open campfire. Elizabeth shared in the pleasures and the discomforts. Perhaps then her training as a Guide stood her in good stead.

Follower of Father Divine in Difficulties

Los Angeles, April 22 (AP) —17-year-old Dwight Jewett of Denver, was called yesterday to testify before the Federal Grand Jury concerning her alleged betrayal by John West Hunt, white follower of the negro cult leader. Father Divine, has been charged with transporting Miss Jewett from Colorado to his Beverly Hills home for immoral purposes.

Hunt planned to tour the United States preaching the Father Divine doctrine. Among his other ambitious plans, she told federal agents, was for her to travel to a desert island and become the mother of a new saviour. She went to New York instead.

"I really believed I was to be a new Virgin Mary," she said.

In her story to federal agents, who arranged for her to appear against Hunt, Miss Jewett related she fell under Hunt's spell last year and at Christmas left home with him. At hotels, she said, they registered as

"James the Christ and Virgin Mary."

On other occasions Hunt has claimed he was the Revelator. He now is at liberty on $10,000 bail, pending Grand Jury action.

RECKLESS OUTLAY LABOR CHARGES

Laborite Claims Government Party in Gloom Over Budget

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 22 (C.P. Cable) — "Reckless improvidence" was Labor's opening attack on the budget in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon.

It was Frederick Pethwick-Lawrence, financial secretary to the treasury in the Labor government, who led for the opposition. But his attack was conceived in moderate tones.

While raising a question of detail about the application of the new tax on business profits, he frankly welcomed it in principle. Profits made from rising activity in the nation, Pethwick-Lawrence argued, should not go to the private advantage of the few.

Evidently, he added, the proposals of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Neville Chamberlain, had been received with "utmost gloom" by his followers.

The rising cost of living was one of the greatest dangers of the present day. Under the influence of new taxation the cost of living was likely to rise still higher, with grave consequences in the life of the nation.

NEW SHIPPING COMPANY IS PLAN IN ENGLAND

London, April 22 (CP) — With the government's decision for the Bilbao policy, plans went ahead for the creation of a new shipping company for the express purpose of running foodships into Spanish government-held ports.

Initial meeting of shareholders in the firm, called on the initiative of the Independent Labor party, was to take place in the House of Commons today. Fenner Brockway, secretary of the party, said the list of shareholders would include prominent Liberals and Labor parliamentarians.

Spurred by the case with which the British freighter Stanbrook, and lumbie of outdoor life along with her sterner companions, in Kenya she hunted with the then duke, and again in Australia, when the royal party spent a fly on the Queensland plains and took its meals around the open campfire. Elizabeth shared in the pleasures and the discomforts. Perhaps then her training as a Guide stood her in good stead.

—DAILY SHORT STORY—

She Was a 1928 Model

By Edgar T. Monfort

Father and son; they sat smoking together on an old carpenter's bench behind the huge red barn in the peaceful twilight of a late June evening.

It was the first comfish they had had in many long months and now Ed Hughes, Jr., eyed his father sideview through the haze of his tobacco smoke. He noted silently the sunburnt neck a little fatter and more lined, the crows' feet that were deeper and more numerous around the good-natured blue eyes.

"Same old dad," said Ed, Jr., affectionately after a moment.

The father took his pipe out of his mouth turned and looked at his son, lithe and slender and well dressed, alert and self assured—a typical young college fellow.

"Gosh, how'd I ever come to have such a good-lookin' boy!" he laughed after a moment.

"Oh shut up, dad," said Ed pleased.

"I'm just surprised some girl hasn't caught you in her trap long ago. They must be blind down second Newton University," said Hughes continued.

"I marry!" laughed Ed derisively. "It's all right son, when the time comes, but get this half-year of college so that you have the right start in life."

He was silent a long time, as he puffed away at his pipe in the falling darkness. "I never told you about my career, Ed. It always seemed as if it would be a little disloyal to talk about it, but I've been worried about you lately. I don't want you to make any mistake. . . ."

"Your career!" exclaimed Ed. "Why I thought you'd always had a dairy."

"So I have, but when I entered A. & M. college I'd intended being a civil engineer. I always loved the work, but soon after I finished my second year I met your mother . . . and—we ran away and married. Of course I had to get out and make a living, so I took the position that offered, always hoping that after a while I'd get enough cash to go back and finish my engineer's course . . . Then you came along and afterwards the other kiddies, and it's never been possible. I don't regret it, I wouldn't swap my life for any man's, but get a running start before you marry, son."

"And you've never told me dad! What a trump you are! All these years wishing you'd been something else, yet going in for anything as if it was the only job on earth for you."

"That's all right, son. I've been darned happy with mother and you youngsters only—"

"No, I, dad. I'll keep away from the women. I'm going to get my degree, and there isn't any girl on earth can keep me from it."

Perhaps because Cupid has a sense of humor he sent Carolyn McIntyre over to the Hughes' place the very next afternoon to borrow a cake recipe from Ed's mother.

"Ed Hughes!" she exclaimed, sliding down off her mother's knee in her smart knicker suit and coming toward him with outstretched hand.

"I thought you'd all moved away for good," he answered. "The folks hadn't told me you were back."

"Yes, now that I've finished college and am going away to teach dad and mother thought thy'd rather come back here."

Ed went to see her that evening on the pretext (to himself) of calling on her parents. The next evening he went again, the next evening he went again. Sunday evening he kissed her good night, just a little friendly kiss, he thought, but somehow when he left he found himself engaged. But there was nothing to endanger his career about that, he thought even as he held her in his arms. They'd wait a year, he wouldn't tell his father; might worry him.

But as the days flew by he soon realized how utterly unbearable life would be for them apart and he fretted as the days slipped away from them. Toward the middle of September the time came for him to return to college and after a desperate leave taking he rushed back and caught her in his arms.

"I'm not going away from you," he declared fiercely. "You'll have to marry me."

They were secretly married the next day and with dreadful misgivings he took her home to his parents.

Carolyn danced over to her father-in-law, stood on tiptoe and kissed him affectionately.

"You're a darling," she said, "and I know you're going to help me. I have some news to break to Ed and there's no use in his fussing about it . . . I'm going right on with my teaching. I know I can get substitute work in Newton and I might by chance run upon a place left vacant by some other girl who married in a hurry," she laughed. "Ed's going to finish his college course. I'm a 1928 model of young American woman and there are two things about us; we don't mind supporting ourselves and we do as we please . . . I'll get a divorce if he doesn't consent. See if I don't!"

"These independent women," groused father Hughes, but he gave Carolyn a strange little hug as he spoke which only Ed was able to interpret, but which, nevertheless, quite endeared him to his new daughter-in-law.

RAWDON

Rawdon.—Mrs. Don Campbell opened her home for the April meeting of Mount Pleasant Women's Missionary Society. Seventeen members and three visitors were in attendance. The service was opened with call to worship by the president and the roll call answered with keyword Peace. Mrs. Phillips rendered solo for the first three months of the year. TARZAN'S QUEST

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service).

Through the night the guards rotated, two hours on and four off. At four o'clock Brown hesitated to awaken Jane, but he had given his word that she would be allowed to stand guard an hour. "I'll sit with you," he offered as she slowly opened her eyes.

"No, that was not the bargain," the girl laughed. "I want to watch alone.

It will soon be morning, and at five I'll awake Prince Alexis for the final tour." The aviator kissed her gently and went away to sleep.

Then quiet fell upon the camp—a quiet that was unbroken until Jane awoke after daylight. She sat up and looked about her. No one was on guard. Alexis who should have been, was fast asleep. "Time to get up," she cried. Brown sat up sleepily; then

"I thought the grand duke there was on guard," the aviator exclaimed. "There wasn't anyone on guard," Jane declared—and then she noticed Annette. Brown sprang to his feet. "Annette!" he called. There was no answer. Annette was gone.

At The Theatres

AT THE BELLE

New Film Musical and "The Beloved Enemy"

"Ready, Willing and Able," a comedy musical from the Richard Mansfield story of the same name, that ran in a weekly matinee last year, will be presented as the feature attraction of the Belle Theatre today, Friday and Saturday, matinee daily.

Co-starred are the twinkling-toed Ruby Keeler, and the famous rotund eccentric dancer Lee Dixon. The songs by Johnny Mercer and Richard Whiting, are new, especially.....Two Marvelous for Words" is considered to be a sensational hit.

The delightful Lolose Parenda has an eccentric role well fitted to her talents as a comedian and torch singer, Winifred Shaw is cast as a British musical comedy star. Other notables in the cast are Allen Jenkins, Carol Hughes, Hugh O'Connell, Teddy Hart Addison Richards, Ross Alexander, Shaw and Lee, the "piano movers" from vaudeville, E.E. Clive and Jane Wyman.

Something altogether new in the way of a "number" is a typewriter 30 feet high, on the keys of which dancing girls spell out a lovelieter dictated to them by Alexander. The girls were directed by Bobby Connolly. The story part of the picture was guided by Ray Enright.

"Ready Willing and Able" is said to have a much more substantial coherent story than most musical films have, and is one of April's most entertaining features.

New Romantic Team

Merle Oberon and Brian Aherne presents Hollywood's newest romantic team in Samuel Goldwyn's production "Beloved Enemy," a vivid drama of love under fire announced as the companion feature on the same program.

The cast finds Brian and Merle as a man and woman from two warring worlds who fall madly in love and defy their romance, carried on under fire, with bolo flashing daily, to making a few hours together.

Against shifting backgrounds the story proceeds to a thrilling climax.

Karen Morley, Henry Stephenson, Jerome Cowan and Donald Meek are featured in the supporting cast. Ray Hunt's original new musical score and Alfred Newman's direction.

Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.30. Comedy cartoon and news begins at 8.30 p.m. "Ready, Willing and Able," starts at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.30. "Beloved Enemy" starts at 3.45 and 8.30 p.m.

"Maytime," Saturday

Topping even their triumph in "Naughty Marietta" and "Rose Marie," Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddie, America's favorite singing stars, who come to the Belle screen for one entire week, starting Saturday, matinee daily, in "Maytime." Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer's great adaptation of the Rida Johnson Young operetta which was one of the memorable hits of the New York stage.

AT THE CAPITOL

Jessie Matthews in "Head Over Heels in Love"

Jessie Matthews now playing at the Capitol as hit No. 1 on a splendid double bill in "Head Over Heels in Love," a musical romance in which GB's dance-sing star plays a Parisian cabaret entertainer. Because of a screwball style vivid temperament and a penchant for causing a commotion in public, she loses both a fat radio contract and her handsome sweetheart, played by Louis Borrell. But by the whim of Holland who has been singularly popular on the London stage.

"Head Over Heels in Love," also marks the first screen appearance of Robert Flemyng, playing another romantic lead. Flemyng is young, handsome, charming and rapidly making a name for himself.

The picture also marks the return to the screen of Whitney Bourne, New York society girl who was previously in "Rhythm in Spring" and "Passion." Whitney plays an international fashion picture star who commutes between Hollywood and Paris, trailing a coterie of male admirers. She gets herself involved with Jessie when she lures Jessie's fiancee.

Jessie Matthews has 22 changes of costume for "Head Over Heels in Love," ranging from slinky and sophisticated fur trimmed evening gowns to tailored daytime dresses and perky and abbreviated dance costumes.

The music and lyrics for the picture were composed by that popular Hollywood team of Ivanenlin, Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, who have written six songs for the picture. They are the title song, "Head Over Heels in Love," "May I Have the Next Romance with You?," "Through the Courtesy of Love," "There's That Look in Your Eyes Again," "Looking Around Corners for You," and "Dont Give a Good Gosh Darn."

"Paradise Express"

"Paradise Express" with Grant Withers, shown as hit No. 2 is chiefly the absorbing comedy drama of down-to-earth struggle and achievement in a Western railroad town. Its life—the railroad—is drastically threatened by the cut-throat methods of an aggressive and modern freight trucking line. Withers, as the super boss of the bankrupt railroad, represents the flower of American youth who comes through by startling means but with magnificent force and courage.

The comedy, the laughter, and the romance of life as it is in America are tied in parallel threads excellently performed by such exceptional players as Maude Eburne, Arthur Hoyt, Harry Davenport, Donald Kirke, Lew Kelly, and a bewildering and talented newcomer, John Holland.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was sailing breakfast and pop was looking at the paper and drinking coffee at the same time, and ma was sitting there with a expression as if she was thinking of having to cook dinner herself on account of being Nora's day off, saying to pop, I've had some very good reports on that new Spicit, and dean restaurant that I was telling you about last week, Willyum. I haven't had such a good time at a resteraunt for years, pop said, and ma said, Why Willyum you've never even eaten there.

I looked through the big plais glass window the other day, pop said. There's nothing more amusing than a lot of blubbering people being fed rite out on the main street that wasn't the really comical part. It seems they serve paper napkins, he said, and ma said, O. I know you have an unreasoning prejudice against paper napkins.

wouldn't of missed these paper napkins for the world pop said. They must be made of an even more slippery substance than usual, although I didn't be lieve such a thing possible with all the resources of modern science. Anyway the way they was selling off the peoples laps onto the floor like a heavy avalanche and the waiters all ducking down like a troop of trained monkeys to pick them up and put them on the table, I'll be Willyum, really, I mean really, it was facinating.

Not at all and, and the best is yet to come, pop said. One waiter finely got so groggy ducking after napkins that he bumped his head against the bottom of a table in his way up and this made him so furious that he knocked the whole table over with everything on it, and all the waiter waiting immediately as whe bevy of the idea and knocked their tables over too. Then after a while, he said, and ma said, O, what shall we have for dinner? and pop said Liver and onions mite be a nice change.

We had liver and onions last night, so you know very well the idea is not even discussable, ma said, a nice idea mite be nice, she said.

The result being we had veel chops.

DIVERS TO FILM SALVAGE OF LUSITANIA

When Captain John D. Craig (right), intrepid adventurer and deep-sea photographer, descends this summer to the wreck of the Lusitania to fill in the schedule salvage operations, his equipment will include a battery of the most powerful lamps ever designed for that work. Capt. Craig is pictured with Max Gene Nohl, of Milwaukee, who is holding one of the new underseas lamps. Nohl is another specially-contained diving dress to be used in the venture. The lamps, of 5,000-watt rating, are built to withstand a water pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, more than five times the pressure around the hull of the Lusitania.

JOHN LEWIS AND WILLIAM GREEN POIN IN ANTI-STRIKE MEETING

MARKET COMMENT

Urgent liquidation in the market appears to have run its course for the time being and the rally is just about as sharp as Tuesday's break. Nevertheless, it should not be expected that the recovery will continue uninterrupted for the reason that many were fortunate to get in around Tuesday's low mill to do doubt accept the quick profits that developed.

It is unfortunate that unfounded rumours caused so much nervous selling with the consequent break in the mines. Although the technical position of the market has been materially improved, this does not help those who were sold out around Tuesday's low. Mining, at all times, is a hazardous industry and the ones purchasing this type of security must be prepared to assume the risks.

The most opportune time to buy stocks is during market conditions when the uninitiated speculator dumps his holdings overboard irrespective of merit. A great many of the better class mining stocks were at bargain levels early Tuesday but it was only a handful of traders who either had the courage or the stock to acquire some of the outstanding bargains.

The so-called groups or "construction" stocks are acting well and appear to be in line for higher prices over the next few months, some more stabilized. These securities are worthy of the investor's attention.

Good Buying Comes Forward

Bay Street, Toronto, reports that buying of an excellent calibre has made a brief while Dominion Funds advanced 1-16 of a cent to 90 cents, a new year's high. On the Curb, Lake Shore Mines was up a point. Stocks having upward cost of the time included Bellekeno, Dominion Tar, Gillies, Bright Mfg. Goodyear, U. S. Rubber, Goodyear Tire, Stores, Howey Sound, Westinghouse, American Telephone, Electric Power and Pacific, Great Northern, Dochie Dee Castings, Douglas Aircraft and American Agricultural Chemical.

PAINS ALL OVER HIS BODY

Kruschen Made Him Feel a New Man

Read the experience of this man who had rheumatism so badly that at times he was prevented from working:

"About 10 months ago," he writes, "I suffered terribly with rheumatism and neuritis. The pains were all over my body and some days I could not even get up from bed to go to work. A friend visited me and recommended that I should try Kruschen Salts. I did so, the result being that the pains seemed to gradually disappear. I have been going to work ever since without a break, thanks to Kruschen Salts, and I feel a new man."—A. R.

Rheumatic conditions are frequently the result of an excess of uric acid in the body. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts are notable for their work in dissolving uric acid. Other ingredients assist Nature to expel the dissolved acid from the system.

Thursday Market

Perhaps what might be termed as the lone survivor of this year's crop of maple syrup, made its last appearance on the city market today. It was positively the last to be had, the owner stated, and for which he was $2.00 per gallon. The driving rain of the morning prevented vendors and potential shoppers from making their usual Thursday morning appearance, with the result that only two sellers of produce braved the elements. Eggs sold at 25 cents the peck, a few staple winter vegetables, and fruit and quarters of beef were practically the only commodities available.

GRAIN

Winnipeg, April 22—(CP)—Wheat futures firmed on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today in narrow trading.

At mid-session prices were unchanged to 3-4 cent higher with May at $1.38 3-4, July $1.33 3-8, and October $1.19 1-2.

Firmness at Liverpool, higher quotations at Buenos Aires, continued continental interest and an advance in sterling in Great Britain

Mr. Pepper recently purchased an English made machine and will ride independently, representing Canada and Belleville.

CAPTAIN JENKINS WINS THE TOPPER

Not Having One, Commission Gives Skipper Box of Cigars

Too hats were admittedly scarce in Belleville yesterday. It was indicated by the hurried canvass on the part of officials of the local Harbor Commission to find a hat for a genuine "topper". Gold-headed canes, however, were not to be had scarce. For, from time immemorial, these two have been recognized as the accepted badge of proper garb to tender the master of any boat entering or leaving any harbor of any port.

So when Captain Jenkins entered the Belleville port yesterday afternoon with the sturdy motor tanker, Sandalite, and reported that Dr. Sinclair, this setting a record as the quickest passage through the new navigation here, a compromise was effected. Unable to find a topper, a quorum befitting the occasion, a large box of cigars was tendered the skipper. Accompanied by his arrival by members of the Commission.

It is the third time that Captain Jenkins has been at the helm to open the Belleville shipping season.

Piloted by the veteran, Captain Jenkins, the tanker was taken on board at Kingston, the Acadialite will take her berth at the government dock during the afternoon, discharged her cargo of 500,000 gallons of gasoline for the local tanks of the Imperial Oil Company and then will proceed through the night and boomed her way out of port at seven o'clock this morning in one of the heaviest gales seen on the bay in years.

BAY POUNDED BY A 40 MILE GALE

Waves Roll Over Top of Government Dock And Boats Loosed

Waterfront men and retired skippers of the city reached respective memories today in an effort to recall when waves of the Bay of Quinte had reached greater or more turbulent heights than observed on yesterday afternoon and this morning.

Pounded by a forty-mile gale, freighted with stinging rain, the bay rolled and tumbled its white-capped breakers, pounding their crests over the government dock, driving heedless craft high up on shore and prohibiting all activity except that of lake-sized boats on its surface.

During the night, it was reported a few of the smaller boats moored along the bay front had been loosed after being drawn into the open waters. Others of the fleet read this morning flying spray was carried completely over the high embankment, blurring windshields and wetting occupants of open cab trucks.

For the first time the government boat "Thomas" was utilized by the local Fish Hatchery for the purpose of guarding young pike and in the bay for pickerel was unable to maintain its nightly stand-to during the night. Her moorings parted at the nets late yesterday afternoon and considerable difficulty, and with the imminent possibility of being capsized or swamped, some where in the night the heavy boat pulled its moorings and scuttled for the comparative shelter of the Schuster Company dock, where it remained this morning.

Close watch, of the yacht Oriels, moored at the government dock was also being maintained following advice received by Captain Strachan, that its passage to the dock had been washed into the water.

GOODBYE GIRLS, I'M THROUGH

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

Irene had remained in the kitchen until her curiosity had become unbearable. Directly she entered the living room she spied Richard and Graeme. Her eyes widened in surprise. Still she greeted the visitor affably and prepared to settle. Richard scowled. With definite snubs Anne declined to help him out.

"Well," observed Irene, comfortably snoozing herself upon a plump ottoman, "you're quite a stranger here, Mr. Graeme."

"Yes," he agreed shortly.

"Mr. Graeme has just been telling me about his engagement," put in Anne smoothly. "He is going to be married."

"Congratulations," said Irene, beaming upon the amazed man. "Who is the lucky girl?"

"I'm afraid that is a secret," he informed the hostess tartly.

Again Anne interrupted in dulcet tones:

"His fiancee is rich and beautiful and belongs to the Social Register. Isn't that so, Richard?"

Richard's face darkened. He was in no mood to bandy words in further buggy ride. When Irene proposed cocktails to celebrate he looking at her hard and said:

"I am sorry but I have some private business to attend with Miss Lee."

"Dear me, I must be going," said Irene rose, winked at Anne, and vanished.

"Have you seen Ray Revell?" Richard asked abruptly, once the door had closed behind Irene. Anne's eyes narrowed slightly.

"I haven't."

"I thought Con said—"

"I went down to Ray's boarding house, Anne explained. "Ray would not see me."

"Couldn't see you?" the man echoed, taken aback.

"No, Richard, her landlady told me that Ray stays locked in her room all day without seeing anyone. The landlady was greatly upset about it. I think if she dared she would make Ray move, but the doctor won't stand for that."

"So Ray is really ill?"

"I believe you love that she is really ill," said Anne evenly.

Richard's face slowly reddened. He was at a disadvantage and knew it. Studiously he counted the cups of his boots, glanced at Anne, glanced again at the floor. After an interval he recovered his poise and, from his billfold and deliberately smoothed them across his knee. Except for the crackle of the bills, the room was absolutely quiet.

Presently the man cleared his throat and said with assumed nonchalance:

"Would you like to do Ray a favor?"

"What favor?" Anne inquired unencouragingly.

"Take this money to her. Tell her that it is from me, and that it is the last she will ever get from her that Richard Graeme is all washed up."

"I'll do nothing of the kind."

"Money has mended broken hearts before," stated Richard, carefully smoothing the bills on his knee. "A thousand dollars ought to do a lot for Ray's." he said, completing his sentence with a shrug.

"Take it to her yourself."

"Not a chance!" Richard laughed. "How could I? Ray would be demanded in a sudden, almost angry change of tone. "You know everything of the way that Ray has behaved. She will never see me again if I can help it."

"You were willing enough to see her once."

"That 'once' is long past."

Anne retired into an uncomprehending silence. Richard stood by her in a puzzled, rather baffled fashion. As if he were pleading for some appeal to reach her sympathies.

"Consider my position for a moment," he said suddenly, leaning forward and speaking in tones both confidential and persuasive. "Suppose I was fond of Ray once, but I'm not now. Is it right you think I should pay for that all the rest of my life?"

"I don't think anything about it," said Anne. "It's your problem, not mine." She surprised him, and you see fit so discuss it with me."

Again Richard flushed.

"I've got to discuss it with someone," he muttered, "You like Ray, or I thought you did. She has come to you, I honestly want to do something for her. Give the money, I suppose you do," Anne contradicted ironically.

Richard received the shot.

"I owe Ray nothing," he continued, glowering ahead of him. Out of self extenuation and excuse. "She has conducted herself like a hussy. She has made everything she could to embarrass me. Still, because I am a sentimental fool I cannot help remember what a sweet child I once thought her, and because I have been a heel—because frankly I want to rid myself of the possibility of having her pop into my affairs again, I am willing to help her. For that reason, she should get out of town. Hasn't she relatives in Maine?"

"She has a sister in Bangor."

"That's the ticket," Richard said cheerfully. "Ray could take this money, go to her sister, spend the summer loafing around, and perhaps return to town in the fall. What I'm offering her is a fresh start."

"Don't you mean that you are offering yourself a fresh start?"

"And what if I am? I'm giving Ray a better break than she deserves. If only she has the sense to see it. How about it?" Richard asked. "Will you take the money and the message to her?"

"I told you that I would not."

"I thought you were a friend of Ray's."

"I am."

"You don't know how much she might need money. Have you the right to refuse for her if you don't grant my request, I assure you that I plan to let the matter drop."

Anne rose.

"I will telephone Ray's boarding house, and that's all I will do," she announced definitely.

She went to the telephone and engaged in a short, spirited debate with Mrs. Schmidt, who hated climbing stairs. After a few minutes she heard Ray's thin, weak voice. Richard started eavesdropping in an effort to prompt the conversation. Anne turned her back. At the conclusion of a few words she replaced the receiver and glanced at the man.

"What did Ray say?" he demanded anxiously.

"She said for you to put the money in your pocket, take a boat to Riverside Drive, and throw it in the river with it."

"Is that so?" He shoved the billfold into his pocket and picked up his hat. "I'm sorry I've been such a pain in the neck to you," he said again you may inform her that if she attempts to annoy me further I will have her arrested. Also that I've put up with the last of that young woman's nonsense."

Jamming on his hat, he slammed out of the room. The clatter of his footsteps died in distance. Anne opened all the windows wide. Seating herself on the floor, she leaned her head on the sill and gazed out into the white, bright day. Once she gave a brief laugh.

That night something happened which drove from her mind Richard and Ray, and everything except her own hopes and dreams. Stanley Rye telephoned to Loiuland to ask if she ever went out after she got through work. Perhaps would like to drop in on a party with him—just a few friends. She might be amusing." Could she make it?

Could she!

She could have wept from sheer happiness. Ever since David Loiuland, but tonight she saw the moon half in and the colors of romance. What matter blistered feet and ruined slippers! Stanley had asked her out! He must be serious! He was a snob, was he? Had Irene and David called him that long ago? Did she hereself harbored a fleeting wonder long ago?

Irene was magic in her toes that night. She danced like one possessed. Even the indifferent clamor of the music only beat in harmony with the music in her heart. Over and over she heard Stanley saying, "I would like it if you wore the flowered dress; you remember, the one you wore our first night."

"Our first night—what words could be more heavenly?

She picked out the dress on that party. There were to be about fifteen guests, so Stanley told her. It was to be held at Stanley's home in spite of his, a girl. He would drop by the Loiuland's at 8 p.m. and if she could leave an hour early. She could, of course. Con agreed readily on her request.

"Big doings on?" he inquired, smiling at Anne. Clearly, David's girl's ill-concealed excitement.

"Stanley Rye is giving a party this evening. "I'm going to a party afterwards."

Burning the candle at both ends, eh? Don't you know there is a depression on, young lady?"

"There's a big percentage in this," Anne assured him, and took the door for dance.

The evening flashed past.

A quarter of twelve Anne slipped into the dressing room to give her nose a last careful powdering and to pat her hair into smooth perfection. The flowered gown was infinitely becoming. Anne's eyes sparkled back her flushed and youthful loveliness. She was beautiful tonight. She knew it. Stanley would not be ashamed of her appearance, anyhow for he told her.

"You are a dream of fair women in that frock, Anne. He said so when she met him at the stairway. "I am glad you think so, too."

After she was escorted in his smart, low-swung car, she asked about her friends.

"Who is giving this party tonight? You didn't mention the name, Stanley."

"Nancy Carr," he replied carelessly. "You'll like Nancy. She's a good sort."

She knows that I'm bringing a girl. Don't bother over your appearance, Nancy. She is the most informal kid in the world. Besides, she is always glad to see friends of mine."

He smiled at the girl on the seat beside him. Anne returned his smile. Nothing could mar her pleasure this night. It was to be a perfect evening. They arrived at the Park Avenue apartment.

Small, starry-eyed, and glowing as the spring, clinging to Stanley's arm, Anne entered Nancy Carr's luxurious apartment and almost at that instant her fears were laid to rest.

The reason, her Nancy Carr.

THE HOUSE OF LILITH

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

Nancy Carr was the sole, beautiful child of wealthy parents, who were middle-aged when she was born. Bitterly unreconciled to their empty home, they had received the tiny Nancy with open arms. Whatever joy, and the swiftly passing years had only increased their delight and pride in her. Friends of the Carrs sometimes shook their heads; certainly no one could deny that the red-haired, bewilderingly pretty girl was spoiled. "Yet the Carrs simply idolize her!"

The Carrs did idolize Nancy. For 20 years, aided and abetted by her husband, the lean, eager Mrs. Carr had slavishly, willingly, and accordingly devoted her time, her efforts, and her thoughts to keeping Nancy entertained. As a child Nancy's nursery had been filled with an endless variety of toys because the youngster "tired so quickly"; as a schoolgirl she had gone to a dizzying succession of boarding schools, because Nancy "rebelled at rules and regulations"; as a debutante, there had been no difficulties in her path but, after tearful scenes, she had succeeded in convincing her parents that a finishing school for mother was a girl.

Debutantes at the 1930's took hatchkeys and freedom as a matter of course. So Nancy argued and won. Won a partial victory. Mrs. Carr always sat up and waited until she heard the soft sound of daughter's key in the lock, whether it were two 12 at night or six in the morning.

Nancy was usually sunny-tempered, This particular evening she had started on a note of irritation that dated from the moment of Stanley's request that he be allowed to bring along a spare girl. Nancy had a secret belief that if she were on the party no spare girls were necessary; the fair she provided were carefully selected to complement her own charms. They were ladies-in-waiting, and red-haired Nancy herself was always Queen.

She had her own reasons for desiring Stanley to be unencumbered; unfortunately she had, as well other reasons for obliging him. So she had told him to bring the lee girl. Who was Anne Lee, anyhow?

A butler opened the door as Stanley rang and the arrivals stepped into a foyer of Chinese red. Fluttering servants relieved shipwrecked Anne was Mrs. Carr, a lean grey-haired woman in black chiffon worn with a narrow belt of diamonds. She fluttered forward— she actually fluttered—and greeted both warmly.

"I'm glad you could come, my dear," she said to Anne and looked straight into her eyes, so that some of Anne's nervous fears were allayed. Mrs. Carr was nice. Th, was easy!

The children are all upstairs in the game room. There, you can hear them now!" the lean woman went on in her peculiar, breathless fashion. "I'd take you up, only I think you youngsters have a better time by yourselves," she ended wistfully.

That was what Nancy thought. You won't mind, I'm sure. You track. Cardboard horses in various

BRITISH DELEGATI ON NARROWLY ESCAPES REDRE I, BOMBS IN SPAIN

The British parliamentary delegation, touring war-torn Spain to study conditions there, received an almost first hand experience when rebel bombs exploded outside the Gran Via hotel in which they were staying in Madrid. The legation was photographed at Paris as they were on their way to Spain and are left to right: Miss Ellen Wilkinson, labor member of parliament; Miss Eleanor Rathbone, the Duchess of Atlol, Mme. know where the stairs are. Stanley, I'll drop in later, perhaps—now I'll just get back to my book, a most fascinating book. You should read it sometime both of you. . . .

Her talk ripples on, the book, the beat, how she had spent the day, but mostly Nancy, Nancy, Nancy.

"You're a dear boy Stanley," she turned to the man to say. "I want to thank you for bringing Nancy home so early last night. She usually seems bent on turning night into day. Little child doesn't think she should, but I do worry so! You know how mothers are!"

Still talking, she led them through an oak-panelled room that had once been a part of a Tudor castle, and at last to a stairway, wide and imposing.

Together they mounted the beautiful, curving stairs. The girl's excitement. How thick and soft the rugs were, how gracious their complex colors.

"Mrs. Carr's a dear, I've known her forever," Stanley was saying. "She's always the same—always carrying on about Nancy, worrying about her. She's a widow, you know."

"Oh, is she?" Anne experienced a vague relief when dissolved when Stanley added a postscript. Mrs. Carr, he believed, was his mother's third cousin.

"Nancy's a charming, foolish kid," he continued in an explanatory side with a smile for Anne. "But don't wonder her mother worries. She's such a young harum-scarum, always on the hunt of a new man or a new thrill. The trouble is that she gets horribly fed up with them, no wonder I suppose. But it's too bad to be bored at 20."

Noise avalanched forth as they opened the door to a large square room that occupied nearly half of the second story, an incredible medyaisi

Medley of noise. The radio blared, someone pounded a piano in competition and people shouted and laughed over various games. Two couples attempted to dance amongst the crowd sprawled on the floor, and, at the fireplace, a solitary boy, his face streaming perspiration, his hair wild, supported himself by the mantel and clegped the hearth.

In the middle of the room, a bright-haired girl wearing pajamas was engaged in a furious game of ping-pong with a man obviously more interested in her than in the game.

"That's Nancy," Stanley said.

Nancy waved a gay racket.

"Hi, Stan! Hi, Miss Lee! Park yourselves somewhere, and place you can find room."

"There's only one horse left," another of the players objected.

Anne and Stanley joined the group collected at the rection of the Canadian lines, made its appearance.

The small became stronger. Men stood up, pushed at this new activity on the part of the enemy. Then it drew closer. On the right, black soldiers stood up, clutched at their throats and fell writhing to the ground. Foam hid the Inarticulations which came from restricted throats.

Jammed Along The Roads

Presently back then came in the disorderliness of hurried retreat. Wild-eyed, with black faces distorted in grimaces of fright and pain, they hurried along the lines of communication. Some artillery with 75's firing intermittently were jammed along the roads. Men speechless, with fingers pointing to their throats, suffocating, coughing, arms falling to the ground in their dying agonies, others stumbling along in what soon took on the appearance of a rout.

Beyond came the hordes of grey sled German Infantry, pressing onward in the wake of an attack never before used or even heard of in the annals of warfare.

This Khaki Line Broke

To the left a thin khaki line still crouched in the pitiful semblance of trenches. The sharp staccato of rifle and machine gun fire rang out as the Canadians poured a leaden defiance into the ranks of the oncoming German Infantry. Practically cut off, with men falling on every side the wearers of the Maple Leaf fought one of the most horrible battles in the history of the war, and by their unflinching heroism and utter disregard for death, not only saved the Channel Ports from the invader, but wrote a page in British history which will live forever.

As one survivor puts it, "we never expected to come out alive. We did not have a chance in the world and it was only the fact that we were ordered to the German the idea, that we were a thousand times as strong as we were, that saved the day". Modesty, undoubtedly, but still a significant fact.

April 22nd, St. Julien Day, will live long in the memory of those who were there and longer in the minds of generations to come when the civilian soldiers took in their first baptism of fire, saved the day for the Allies, and brought undying fame to Canada and to the Empire which they represented and fought for.

Local Gunner Cheats Death

Charles Gaioun, a former gunner in the Second Brigade, Canadian Field Artillery, and at present employed at the King George Hotel in this city, gave a graphic description of his experiences during the famous attack.

Twice he cheated the Grim Reaper, while enemy shells burst around him.

"There were three Belleville gunners in my battery", Mr. Gaioun stated, Gordon Buck, Eddie Blalock and myself. Gerald Spafford of this city, was a sergeant in another battery in the brigade."

Firing With Open Sights

"Culminating a forced march from Armentieres we swung our guns into action on the left bank of the Yser Canal near Ypres. Almost immediately we let go at enemy positions, a barn three hundred yards away. It was one of the rare instances of the war when 18-pounders fired with open sights. Then came the gas. Dense thick clouds of it. Our men choked and spluttered, some fell to the ground. It was terrible, but not as bad as the sight of the hundreds or refugees which streamed from Belgium. They died by the roadside with a horrible choking death. Then came French artillerymen mounted; some of them threw on a horse supporting each other. Foam flecked their lips as they staggered along the roads."

Enemy's Direct Hit

"The next day we had orders to retreat. A five-nine shell dropped on one of our guns scoring a direct hit and wounding five gunners including myself. Eddie Blalock also got his, but he and the rest got away all right. I pitched up my wounded leg the best I could, and stayed in the wrecked gunpit until after dark that night. Red Cross people picked me up and loaded me in a transport along with four other wounded.

"We had only got a few hundred yards down the road, when Fritz dropped another salvo along the road. One of the shells struck the transport, pocketing it to pieces, killing the other four wounded men and hurling me in a ditch some distance away. A piece of metal in my hip torn away as a souvenir of that particular shell. Incoming British troops discovered me, and took me to a dressing station where my wounds were cared for."

When asked if Dean or James favored the mayor's proposals, McIntyre replied: "I would rather not answer that." He suggested the two men be asked.

Work Obeyes Arrived.

Pay cheques, earned during the week preceding General Motors strike, were collected today by strikers who silently entered and left the pay office.

Some were fearful of collecting their pay because they feared the company might place "quit slips" in the envelopes. The company, however, announced no such step would be taken.

Hugh Thompson, organizer of the United Automobile Workers of America, left for Washington last night to confer with Homer Martin, president of the union. Both of the men whose presence in strike negotiations have been objected to by Premier Hepburn and company officials, will remain in the United States until strike negotiations, undertaken by the premier, are completed.

Union Offices Quiet.

No activity prevailed at union offices today and no comments was forthcoming on last night's sudden departure of Thompson or the cancellation by Martin of his visit here last night to address a strikers' mass meeting.

Today's action followed on the heels of an injunction outlawing the strike and granting a temporary injunction against the strikers, and Gloria Dea that the court ruling was a "miscarriage of justice" that "meant nothing".

City Is Patrolled.

Three hundred National Guardsmen patrolled Auburn today, hastily summoned by Governor Lewis O. Barrows. Three deaths and injuries to half a dozen persons and arrests of 16 mainly followed close to the scene.

City Manager Frederick W. Ford flatly asserted that, recurrence of such violence would bring martial law and more troops "to uphold the police and the courts".

Governor Barrows, in sending the troops into the district, declared, "I am prepared to order out the entire military forces of Maine to preserve constitutional authority."

Wages and C.I.O. Recognition.

The strike issue revolves around wages, and C.I.O., recognition.

Although Auburn was quiet throughout the night after the disturbance at the bridgehead, Police Captain John J. O'Connell said he had arrested six youths on assault charges resulting from a complaint by an 18-year-old shoe worker that he had been bound, gagged and dumped onto the porch of his home. The youth, Alvarez Pelletier, had a sign tied on his back, the captain said, reading, "don't send you rat".

Concrete Urns Hurled.

Two 36-pound concrete urns were thrown through windows of Peter Lemieux's Lewiston home, one narrowly missing a sleeping child. Two other homes were stoned.

The shoe workers' organizing committee, in addition to dispatching telegrams to Secretary Perkins asked President Roosevelt to order the National Guard to protect strikers' rights.

DUKE OF WINDSOR

pected to be either June 19, Mrs. Simpson's birthday, or June 23 which is the Duke's.

Marriage Likely At Tours.

The ceremony, which their friends say will be attended by his sister Mary, the Princess Royal, and the Duke of Kent, who will be his best man, is likely to be at the Chateau de Cande at Tours, France, where Mrs. Simpson is in residence.

Defining the fixing of a date, however, was said to await the Duke's arrival at the chateau after Mrs. Simpson's divorce decree is made final Apr. 27.

Friends of the Duke of Windsor doubt he will leave Austria before the coronation on May 12 for, although he says he is "counting the days" until he sees Mrs. Simpson again, he is determined to give his brother a "clear run" during the coronation.

May Go To Africa.

St. Wolfgang, Austria, Apr. 22 (AP) —The Duke of Windsor yesterday obviously was getting ready to travel to Africa, and possibly, France almost certainly and Africa later were understood to be on the itinerary the former king had under study.

With final action on the divorce of Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson approaching an air of expectancy hung over the Appelbach Villa the Duke has occupied here the last few weeks. Simpson's decree nisi is expected to be made final early next month.

"It looks like another moving day soon," said an attendant at the villa.

African Maps Studied.

The Duke remained indoors yesterday, spending much time poring over maps, including some of Africa he bought in Salzburg. That lent color to reports he is considering an African honeymoon after his marriage to Mrs. Simpson.

It was understood the duke had not definitely set a date for his departure from this upper Austria lake resort, but there were indications it might be as early as Apr. 27.

WARM WEATHER NEEDED AFTER RAIN

"This rain will settle the land" was the consensus of opinion of a small group of farmers representative of the district who met in the market place this morning. "One or two or three days of warm sunshine and we will be away to a good start at work on the land."

A late Spring was forecast by the speaker who blames the deterrent weather of the past few weeks for the present condition of cultivated land.

A farmer residing near Hillier in Prince Edward County took his head. "We have started seeding on the high lands" he said, and we are praying that this rain will not continue too long, or the seed may rot. However, to offset this, our winter grains have taken on a new lease of life and the crop, with any kind of weather this summer will be far ahead of earlier expectations."

NEW UNITED STATES BOMBING AEROPLANE POWERED BY FOUR 1,000 HORSEPOWER MOTORS

Wheeled out of its hangar at Seattle, Wash., for its first time, the new flying giant of the U.S. army was a target for cyes of the curious who were kept at a distance. OSHAWA STRIKE ENDS BY VOTE OF 2,205 TO 36

No Affiliation Agreed With Lewis Organization; Men Return on Monday

Strikers Cheer Announcement of Overwhelming Result of Ballot Favoring End of Strike

5-DAY WEEK UNDER AGREEMENT

Agreement Runs Concurrent With Agreement Between U.A.W.A. (C.I.O. Affiliate) And General Motors Corporation in United States

Oshawa, Ont., April 23—(CP)—General Motors employees today voted 2,205 to 36 to return to work Monday, thus ending the 16-day strike which had tied up the vast automobile plant.

Charles Millard, President of the Oshawa Union, announced acceptance of settlement to a cheering crowd of strikers who had balloted in the armories here after terms were disclosed to them.

The agreement provides no affiliation with the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization, but "shall run concurrently with the agreement between the United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O. affiliate) and General Motors Corporation in the United States," said K. L. Cohen, union counsel.

Five-Day Agreement

The agreement provides a five-day, 44-hour week, employees to work nine hours a day for the first four days of the week and eight hour on Fridays. Provision was made for a minimum wage, but the amount was not determined.

Time and a half will be granted for overtime except to certain employees in the maintenance and service department and arrangements for these will be made at a later date.

A shop committee of nine will be elected by all employees of the company, whether or not they are members of the Oshawa Local of the U.A.W.A. This committee will act as a bargaining and grievance committee to represent the employees in disputes that might arise with the management.

Sign Pact This Afternoon.

The formal agreement will be signed later this afternoon in the office of Premier Mitchell Hepburn at Toronto. Time of signing was originally set for two o'clock but was postponed to a later hour.

Harry Carmichael, vice-president and general manager of General Motors, and James Highfield, Oshawa plant manager, will sign for the company.

Before they were allowed to cast their ballots, C. M. employees were required to show their U.A.W.A. membership buttons. The union claimed 36 per cent. enrollment in the plants.

While the voting was done by union members only, it was learned unofficially that the signing of peace terms with the company will be on behalf of all employees, union or non-union.

Only 3,241 of the 4,241 employees affected case their ballots, but union leaders accounted for the discrepancy by explaining a number of employees live outside Oshawa and did not come to the city to vote.

Agreement Released.

Oshawa, Apr. 23 (CP)—Couched in legal language, the following terms of settlement of the automotive strike which kept 3,700 General Motors employees idle more than two weeks was released today:

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

April rains and plant growth! It is a commonplace knowledge that rains bring out the grass and flowers. All the plant tissues is lightbeat and moisture when in sufficient quantity. For the inventor of the whole thing appears to be most noticeable in April, but in June, July and August, according to latitude and other factors. The warm rains of spring are very important. Soil is not a good conductor of heat. It is a good absorber and radiator, that is, the top few inches warms quickly under the influence of sunshine, but the lower layers remain cool. Warm rains falling through a warm atmosphere soak down considerably, carry into the soil not only the necessary moisture but also warmth

Rose for Merrie England On St. George's Festal Day

Belleville Englishmen And Friends Celebrate

BARD'S BIRTHDAY

The red rose in coat lapels was noticeably absent on downtown streets this morning despite the fact that today true Englishmen the world over celebrate the festival of their country's patron saint, valiant St. George. The date is made all the more significant in that it coincides with the anniversary of the birth of the Bard-of-Avon, William Shakespeare.

England today recalls in historic legend that on this date many centuries ago, the country had been terrorized for many years by a dragon, which after having exacted the sacrifice of all the sheep on the land, was demanding its toll of human lives. One day as St. George was riding by, he witnessed on occasion led by the King's daughter to be the next victim. St. George promised the people deliverance and charging it with the lance despatched the dragon. The princess was married but here remains who was shortly afterward made the patron of the Knights of the Garter.

Though Belleville will not entertain its festival as will the Mother country this evening, between thirty and forty members of the local Sons of England lodge will journey to Trenton where plans special evening is being arranged by the Trenton Lodge in Orange Hall.

Hepburn Silent

Toronto, April 23—(CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn made no comment today on confirmation by the Oshawa strikers of the settlement drafted at a conference in his office yesterday. In contrast to the attitude of the conference each day of the past week, the Premier declined to see the press after word of the 2,205-36 vote was taken to him.

Windsor, Berkshire, April 23 (CP Cable)—In the shadow of ancient Windsor Castle, the King today unveiled a memorial to his father—"George V, First Sovereign of the House of Windsor"—which he regarded as not only as a new association between the Royal Family and the Royal Borough, but "also a link with another Windsor in the great Dominion of Canada."

The memorial, a simple cenotaph, is a joint gift of the people of the borough and of Windsor, Ontario.

The Mayor of Windsor, Lieut.-Col. A. E. Churcher, declared His Majesty's wedding gift to know that "full and complete agreement" had been reached, thanks to the generous support given to the scheme by the inhabitants of Windsor, England, and Windsor, Canada."

STRIKERS TAKE SECRET BALLOT

Shop Stewards Recommend Workers Accept Agreement.

Oshawa, Ont., April 23 (CP)—General Motors strikers recorded by secret ballot today their decision to end their sit-down strike in the assembly lines of the automobile plant. Ironically

Plain white pieces of paper on which the 3,700 workers were asked to write "yes" or "no" were the medium for the decision whether they should end the strike.

As they prepared to mark their ballots they had heard read out the recommendation of their shop stewards, that they accept the agreement reached in conference yesterday in Toronto between representatives of the union executives, Premier Hepburn and Government officials.

The 300 shop stewards were told the terms of the agreement at their meeting in the Oshawa Local of the United Automobile Workers of America, and George Day, chairman of the Bargaining Committee addressed the stewards.

BR. FOOD SHIPS RUN GAUNTLET OF BILBAO BLOCKADE

Afforded Protection of British Warships in Three-Mile Limit

SUPPLIES NEEDED

One Shot Fired Across Bows But Boat Did Not Halt

Bilbao, Spain, April 23.—(AP)—A fleet of three British food ships, under the protection of British three-inch guns and the lurking guns of Basque shore batteries, ran a gauntlet of insurgent fire today to break through the blockade of Bilbao with desperately needed supplies.

Frantically cheering crowds of Basques lined the docks to greet the sturdy merchantmen as they came into view down the harbor reaches of the broad Nervion River which has made the Basque capital the first seaport of Spain.

Crammed into their holds were 6,100 tons of foodstuffs for the starving population of the city, swollen by almost 40,000 by the steady influx of refugees from the surrounding country.

The three cargo vessels, the MacGregor, the Hatmeister, and the Seabrook, capitalized on the warning British seadogs, defied the shells of the insurgent fleet during the night and docked this morning.

First Fired on

Just before dawn, the skipper of the Hatmeister ordered full speed ahead and crashed through the block-

RAILWAYMEN TO STRIKE AT LONDON

Refuse to Accept Two Cents An Hour Increase Given by Board

London, Ont., April 23 (CP) — Employees of the London Street Railway, in an unanimous vote today decided to strike and take force action in their wage demands.

With a full attendance of the employees, the meeting, after two hours, decided that 90 per cent. of striking was passed without dissenting vote. Time of the strike is left to the discretion of the executive.

In an announcement after the meeting, President James Axford said the Union meeting was determined to force the issue at once.

The strike date was not fixed, Mr. Axford said, and the matter was in the hands of the Union executive which will be in conference with the general executive of the union.

The operators, shopmen, barn men, conductors and other employees in the shops are affected by the strike vote.

The mass meeting was called as a direct result of action of the Ontario Labor Board in refusing the men's wages by two cents an hour, when the last pay envelopes were issued.

The increase was that recommended in a minority report of the conciliation board, that had sought to arbitrate the dispute. The majority report urged restoration of the pay cut in full and considerations of two weeks holidays with pay for every employee.

After hearing the testimony, Superior Judge Walter S. Guerin declared: "I certainly think the plaintiff is entitled to a divorce. I grant the decree. Better luck next time."

Edward Pascoe, Four Years Old, Drowns in Ditch

It is Believed Child Lost Balance and Fell Into Water Filled Hole

FOUND BY D. LEWIS

Father Passes on Way Home at Time of Discovery

Little Edward Pascoe, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Pascoe, 14 Dunbar Street, was drowned shortly after twelve o'clock noon today, victim of an accidental tumble into a shallow, water-filled trench at the rear of the home of Sidneman Lewis, 16 Dunbar Street, which he had investigated in childish curiosity.

He was pulled dead on arrival at the Belleville General Hospital where a vain attempt had been made to revive him through the use of oxygen, when artificial respiration by Dr. C. O. Kennedy failed, shortly after his removal from the trench into which he had fallen. He was found by Donald Lewis, son of Sidneman Lewis, who discovered the tiny body, face down in the muddy water.

Tricycle on Sidewalk

The lad had deserted his little tricycle, left standing on the nearby sidewalk to investigate the ditch, dug recently to find the origin of a leaking water pipe, and filled by the rains.

It was evident, that the child had been in the water but a short time before discovery by Donald Lewis, whose attention was attracted by a mark in the Lewis home, who noticed "something in the ditch." Upon it as once investigated, face down, in a hunched up position, the little body was discovered. Life was apparently extinct, when he was removed from the water.

Harold Pascoe, father, employed by the Canada Packers Company on his way home for lunch, passing at the same time of the discovery, was unaware of the tragedy until he observed the limp form in the arms of Donald Lewis. Grief stricken, he seized the child in his own arms and hastened to his nearby home. Physician, Dr. Kennedy, was phoned immediately, and upon artificial respiration was performed. Finding no spark of life, he then hastened to the Belleville General Hospital operating room, where oxygen was administered in vain hope. Later the tiny body was taken to the Frank Funeral Home, where it is at present resting.

Besides the loss of her only child, Mrs. Pascoe is at present under the care of a physician.

Child Discovered

"My attention was attracted by the comment of the maid, that there was "something in the ditch" stated Donald Lewis. "I looked at once. "I left the house and went over. The first thing that I noticed was something, that looked like a blue rag. Then I went closer. I observed something that resembled a leg—a little body. I went over, reached down and pulled out the body, whom I recognized as little Eddie Pascoe, who lives up the street a short distance.

"His father happened to come along just at that time. He didn't know that anything was wrong with me. I saw the little boy in my arms. Then he could hardly believe his eyes. He looked and made sure for himself He rushed the child to his own home and I called the doctor at once. He came at once, applied artificial respiration and then rushed the child to the hospital. I feel as badly about it as if it were one of my own family," said Donald Lewis.

SUSPEND MEMBER IN BRITISH HOUSE

Labor Member Refuses to Apologize For Remark Made

London, April 1 23.—(CP)—The House of Commons today adopted a committee the text of the bill for relief of the "distressed areas" after an all-night session that lasted 20 hour and 53 minutes.

The bill was finally passed after the government had refused to put its concluding articles for further discussion, as requested by many labor members.

Discussion of the relief bill began last night after conclusion of the debate on Neville Chamberlain's budget proposals. It was carried on until passage was finally assured. It was the longest session since last July.

Member Suspended

Fraynd Aske, Labor member of the House resulted in the suspension of Sir Percy Harris, Liberal, four days. The Chairman of Committees, Sir Dennis Herbert, presiding, was from his residence at Hitchin, and during a speech by Aske, Sir Stafford Labor, suggested adjournment. Hevan Aske shouted:

"Get out of that chair, your conduct has been abominable- and I have never seen anything like it!"

He refused to apologize for his words and the Speaker was summoned from his residence at Hitchin.

The all-night session was preceded by a discussion of the budget proposals made by the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

A.F.OF L. AND C.I.O. NOT RECONCILED

High Command of Labor to Meet in Cincinnati in May

Washington, April 23—(AP)—The American Federation of Labor virtually removed today its last hope of reconciliation with John L. Lewis and his rival committee for industrial organization.

President William Green summoned the Federation's high command to a general war conference on May 18 in Cincinnati to "marshal all the forces of labor in America".

He placed the blame for failure to heal the breach on "those responsible for having set in motion a group activity clothed in garments of good faith but inspired by a mind and heart bent upon destruction of the organized labor movement of America."

There was no immediate response from John Lewis Camp. C.I.O. leaders have watched closely for developments in the Federation Council meeting this week while pressing forward with the organization of mass production workers.

Green invited the A.F. of L. executive council to meet the head of international and national unions in the Cincinnati Conference.

A special convention of the Federation will not be called to expel Lewis unions, he said, adding:

"It would ill become the executive council to deny dignity to a group and to a procedure that from its inception has been steeped in the processes of illegality and irresponsibility".

Parallel parking along Front St. from a distance east to Dundas Street that will not go into effect until about the second week in May, it was intimated today by city engineer Chas. Daly, the delay being marked by the painting of traffic lines through the city.

Merchants in the city have accepted the new regulations conditionally, try out the system for a month during the lower part of Front street is a good place to give it a try. If it works satisfactorily down there, then it could be extended to all of Front Street, it was intimated one member of the local Retail Merchants' Association.

BOYS WITH THROW-AWAY SHEETS ANNOY LOCAL HOUSEHOLDERS

The thoughtlessness of men and boys distributing throw-away sheets from door to door in the residential districts, cutting of corners by casual pedestrians and even the drivers of cars turning their machines across the narrow streets, leaving their imprints deep in the soft turf of the lawns in front of homes has led to a wave of complaints on the part of householders and the city hall during the past week or so. An appeal is observed by officials to observe the niceties of behaviour during the present trying period in which boundaries are being laid to coax their lawns back to summer shape.

LEGHORN ROOSTER BESTED IN BATTLE WITH COCK PHEASANT

Cock pheasants are getting pugnacious in this immediate section, and even slapping is indicated in the report of a battle royal between a large White Leghorn rooster and a scrappy male pheasant observed by Constable Lane yesterday afternoon by Wm. Hall, local commercial traveller.

"All I needed to get the picture of a lifetime was a camera," mourned "Bill." The battle were so engrossed in the fight they didn't even notice me when I drove the car right up in front of them and stopped. Most of the fighting was done in the air, but the rooster got the worst of it in this kind of a scrap and finally cooked for-keeps.

ROAD CONSTRUCTIN HELD UP BY RAINS

With the recent rains making a veritable quagmire of the earth's surface and rendering working conditions almost impossible, operations at construction camps at Gilmour have been temporarily suspended.

Twelve men were laid off the 20-mile of the construction camp gang a few days ago, men returning to their last part of the county report.

With the advent of warm weather however, which it is stated will relieve "frost in the ground" conditions which still exist in some of the projects, and which are making progress for the present slowly, of the ground, operations will get under way in the regular spring schedule.

THOUSANDS OF TONS OF ROCK DISMANTLED BY GIANT BLAST

While a large crowd of people looked on, one hundred thousand tons of rock hurled skywards Wednesday morning when Clifford Scott, brother of the Superintendent, of the Ontario Rock Quarry near Marmora, touched the switch which detonated eighteen tons of dynamite.

Fifty-four separate "charges" were placed in the 846 feet of tunnelling and simultaneously before the blast was fired. The displaced rock will be crushed in the company's crushing plants and used for road construction.

It was the second largest blast in the history of the company, the first taking place in 1933 when 22 tons of explosive were used to dislodge 200,000 tons of rock.

The smoking crater which was left after the wake of the explosion was the scene of a large crowd of curious sightseers during the remainder of the day.

RAIN CAUSES 12 IN. RISE IN THE MOIRA

"Old Man Moira still keeps rollin' along". Yesterday as creeks to the north of the city poured a flood of muddy water into the river, swelling the color of the water to a brownish hue, there was nearly twelve inches from its height of the preceding day. During morning, according to watermarks along the river wall, the water had receded to approximately the level it stood at that which preceded the rains.

CITY HALL CAT NEEDS A FRIEND

In Minnie, the city hall cat, rat and mouse catcher supreme, to be put on the official annual list of city workers, so that a daily appropriation of funds for milk may be made, all snatches of bambury may be secured.

This important question is expected to be one of the latest which will typically engage the council in its next regular meeting.

"Mickey" Dolan, caretaker Arthur Rawson of the city hall, is getting thin. He's none to fat now to be sure, but what while once against-cat defiance in the corridors of the hall have been practically almost to extinction by the active tabby, the little Lass yesterday appeared harder to find food for the cat. In this important matter merchants and boarders in the city hall are contributing towards her upkeep.

Has the master finding a bit lean lr "Minnie" is to be employed she should be kept in food-and-fury condition. The matter has been drawn to the attention of one alderman. Action is expected to follow.

FOUR DOGS ARE HELD BY POUND KEEPER

JOHN OSTERHOUT SENT TO PRISON

Stockdale Youth Will Serve Two Year Term in Penitentiary

John Osterhout, 19 year old Stockdale youth, was sentenced to serve two years in the Kingston penitentiary, while his accomplice, Alan Sine, 22 year old Wallbridge youth, received a sentence of one year determinate and a further indeterminate sentence of not less than two years one day in the Ontario Reformatory after they had pleaded guilty to charges of conspiracy to rob Charles Manahan, 52 year old Foxboro farmer, and assaulting constable Manahan, when he apprehended the youths.

Osterhout was in possession of this sandbag and doubtless intended to use it."

Osterhout was in possession of this sandbag and doubtless intended to use it."

Manahan and he displayed a cotton bag filled with sand, "I'll tell you this young man was before you on a charge of theft recently and is now on a suspended sentence as prompted the Crown Attorney.

"You don't seem to have profited by your previous experience in the court. Undoubtedly you are getting into a rut of crime. Can you realize you are liable to a term of from seven to 14 years imprisonment, had you succeeded in your plans? I intend to separate you two, so will sentence you to five years in the penitentiary near Portsmouth," Osterhout," concluded His Worship.

Character evidence was submitted by reputable residents of Sidney Township on behalf of young Sine, but was overruled by the sentence today, after having previously pleaded guilty to the two charges in question. Mr. Crawford stated the story of how the two men accosted had plotted the attack upon the elderly Manahan and added they were masked when apprehended by a posse of Provincial and R.C.M.P. police. "Apparently these boys do not realize the seriousness of their attempts, they might have killed the old man and charged with murder, had they put into practice their intentions of slugging the old man," prompted Mr. Crawford.

Sine, it was learned, had no previous criminal record, in fact, coupled with the character evidence submitted on his behalf, tended to lessen the sentence. "Young man you have entered upon the broad road of crime, charges are of a very serious nature. You might have murdered an unfortunate gentleman. It is fortunate the police intervened. This court cannot condone such actions despite the good references given on your behalf. You will serve one year definite and a further indeterminate sentence of two years less one day in the Ontario Reformatory," concluded His Worship.

CHARGE OF THEFT IS DISMISSED

Magistrate Holds Scrap Iron Had Been Abandoned

Charge of the theft of scrap iron was today dismissed against Donald May, Sidney youth, after His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., held that the metal admitted-ly taken by the accused, had been abandoned property.

May pleaded guilty to the theft of some 1,700 pounds of scrap iron and steel claimed to be the property of Harry Ketcheson, Sidney. Charles A. Payne, K.C., appearing on behalf of the accused, admitted taking of the metal. The iron was on the property of Mr. Graham and had not been in use for over 25 years, it understood, prompted Mr. Payne as the case opened.

Mr. Ketcheson, in evidence, stated the steel and iron had been his, but had not been used for a number of years. On the permission from the late R. J. Graham to leave the steel rails and steel rails, that were taken, upon his property," added the witness. Upon the examination under oath by Mr. Payne, however, Mr. Ketcheson admitted the scrap goods he claimed had been in use for many years.

Crown Attorney W. G. Donohan, K.C., and His Worship entered into a lengthy discussion at this point relative to the question of the ownership of the metal, Magistrate Butler upholding Mr. Payne's suggestion, that the goods were abandoned property.

"You deal perfectly well, there has been an epidemic of the stealing of rails lately. I would advise you to the bay shores and show you numerous similar cases where these rails have been made into fence cradles. I am afraid this may establish a precedent," suggested Mr. Donnan.

His Worship in his reply held that when rails were abandoned for a matter of "years he was of the opinion that they were abandoned, especially when left upon an other person's property and he immediately dismissed the charge. Mr. Ketcheson, in the meantime, had recovered some of his property, he admitted.

POLICE COURT

Thomas Graves, 19-year-old Belleville youth, was sentenced to the Ontario Reformatory by His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., for sentence today. Graves having previously pleaded guilty to the charge of theft of a quantity of brasses, the property of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

"This young man's mother informs me he did not tell the truth when he stated he did not know the accomplice in the court last week and he wants to correct that statement now. I understand Graves interrupted Crown Attorney B. O. Donohan, K.C., permission to speak out of the sentence. "Is that right, young man?" the Crown asked Graves.

"No, that other fellow was not with me," replied Graves. When this matter was asked what did he have to say about her statement to Mr. Donohan, Graves replied, "I will not let me see my son at the jail."

Mr. Donnan then introduced Graves' previous criminal record of three previous convictions, which prompted His Worship to sentence the accused to six months in the Ontario Reformatory, a "So you didn't want to be a squealer, eh?" asked Mr. Donnan of the accused, but there was no reply.

Harold Nodes, Marmora hotelist, was found guilty of a charge of reckless driving, laid by Motorcycle Patrolman Dan Bryine following a recent accident on highway No. 14 and to which Nodes was duly located. The accused did not give evidence on his own behalf, His Worship then suspending Crown prosecutor's license for one month.

Costs in the matter were set at $28.25.

"I'll not pay it," determined the accused.

"Very well, 18 days in default," replied the Bench, but when Nodes was escorted to the prisoners' dock behind the docket, he soon changed his mind and paid forfeit.

Everett Jeffery, local milk driver, was found guilty of assaulting a fellow boy and was given a suspended sentence. It was said during the proceedings, that the small boy had been in the habit at starting Jeffery's horse and causing the driver annoyance while in the course of his duties. Formerly slapped the boy" interrupted Mr. Donnan. "I know that, but he did something he should not have and I'll have to find him guilty," replied His Worship. The boy's father promised the driver's horse would not be molested again however.

Three charges laid by the L.C.A. and two domestic cases of a private nature concluded the proceedings today, which were of considerable length.

Local police today took into custody an abandoned truck, found on Railway Terrace. There were no number plates attached to the vehicle which had been parked in its position for the past week.

Gordon Blue, local grocer, reported the theft from his quantity of candy and gum from his premises. A pane of glass was broken in a door and that theft was done. The loss of the week of kiddies police believe. The theft was committed between 6.30 and 8.00 p.m. last night.

Owing to the continued cruise of seven translents arrived in the city and sought dry sleeping quarters at the police station last night.

MISS AMY LOTT GIVEN SHOWER

Prospective Bride Recipient of Many Useful Gifts

The home of Mrs. Ralph Loney on College Street was the scene of a happy occasion last night when Miss Amy Lott, of Victoria Avenue, a prospective bride, was the guest of honor at a miscellaneous shower tendered her by twenty of her friends.

Miss Lott, who will become the bride of Mr. Harold Chestnut, of Hartsmere, Ontario, sometime in May, was pleasantly surprised and delighted with the array of beautiful gifts presented to her by a group of friends, during the early hours of the evening.

Daintily wrapped, and placed in an attractive basket, the gifts were presented to Miss Lott, near the close of the evening by Miss Thelma Reddick. The bride-to-be, although the element of surprise was almost complete, made a pretty speech of appreciation, and thanked her friends for their many kind thoughts.

The evening was spent in a very enjoyable manner, following which a dainty luncheon was served. A number of out-of-town guests were present.

The Laymen's Association of St. M. M's Church will be hosts to the members of the Guild at a social evening in the Parish Hall on Monday.

On Tuesday evening a large gathering attended the joint annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society and the H. and S. Club in the S. S. room of the United Church, and greatly appreciated the fine address given by Miss Max Flemming of the Department of Public Welfare, who gave a "Possible Philosophy of Child Training in this Changing Age". The speaker pointed out that life two generations ago was simpler and more static, and that today we needed a new philosophy. We must teach the child to make decisions for himself, and to do this parents and teachers must act as "leaders" rather than "big bosses". Parents must inculcate biological habits — teach a child to control his emotions of fear and anger, and lead him to have an optimistic attitude towards life, that others and parents get best results if they follow a plan that gives interest and satisfaction to the child. The speaker discouraged giving rewards and punishments, as they destroy the inner responsibility of the child. She advised parents (1) not to claim to be infallible; 2— to teach a child when to lead and when to follow, and 3—to teach a definite religion plus tolerance. Mr. Ralph Hubbs introduced Miss Flemming and Mrs. N. Van Blaircomb and Mrs. P. A. Scott expressed the appreciation of the audience for the fine address. Mr. Sine Hateley presided at the meeting when reports of Rev. S. M. Scott, Treas. and Ralph Hubbs, Supt. of the C. A. S. were presented. Mr. Hubb's report showed 75 children involved in 23 new cases and 8 cases reopened by the Society, 17 families were also being assisted. 103 children were under the care of the Society, at the end of March 1937. Three legal adoption orders had closed. Rev. David Wren commented most favourably on the work of the local Supt. The H. and S. Club presented their report of the nominating committee as follows:—

Hon. Pres.—Mrs. Ivas Martin and Mrs. H. V. Tobey.

Pres.—Mrs. Ern. Ward.
1st. Vice Pres.—Miss Dunkley.

Mr. Rod Rose, Waupoos is very seriously ill at his home. On Tuesday a specialist from Belleville was called and, his condition reported very grave.

Mrs. Harry Bowen (nee Mary Keyes) of Cordova Mines is the guest this week of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Le Heup.

Red Cross Outpost Hospitals

With our doctors, nurses and hospitals "just around the corner", it is difficult for city people to visualize conditions surrounding the Red Cross Outpost Hospital work in isolated districts of the North which give rise to such succinct, matter-of-fact reports, such as the following, received at Red Cross Headquarters from one of its Outpost Nurses:

"Small girl, 3 years of age, upset kettle of boiling water off stove. Scalded both feet badly. Mother dead. Father away from home. Sister, aged 12 years, harnessed horse to sled and brought child several miles over bad country roads to hospital for treatment. After several weeks, care, child was able to walk again.

"Old lady, aged 71 years, living alone in log shack, fell down steps and broke right hip. Found by neighbours second day after accident. Removed to Outpost immediately on sleigh. After 10 weeks in hospital, patient returned home, walking with aid of cane. Very grateful for hospital care and recovery.

"Boy, 2 years old, very ill with pneumonia. Two children in family. Mother, an invalid, unable to care for child. Roads blocked with snowdrifts. Father, riding horseback, brought child to Outpost in his arms. Family very grateful for hospital and care when boy recovered and was sent home.

"Boy, aged 14 years, climbing tree for crow's nest, fell. Sharp branch of tree cut right leg, puncturing large vein. Bleeding profusely, boy was rushed to Outpost where operation was performed and his life saved."

W. B. MORTON, PUBLISHER

THEN AND NOW

Those who remember the days of horses and drays, horses and buggies and democrats and lumber wagons, recall days which had their dangers as well as today, though they were much less.

The runaway horse or team was a nuisance of danger differing somewhat from the dangers of today. An occupant of a vehicle might be thrown out and killed on the road but there were no such scenes as collisions of vehicles as today take so heavy a toll. Then too a horse unless running away never got so out of control as some motorists care do to the injury and probable death of the occupants.

A runaway horse on a city street put terror into a crowd, for it was not like a car. A car running away will not go very far though it may injure some. But cars rarely run away. Now a runaway horse could in the old days run for a mile or two or three through the streets of a city, leaving splintered wagons and upset loads on the road after collision with other vehicles and perhaps a trail of injured persons. The noise and excitement of a runaway put fear into the hearts of the onlookers. It was hardly safe to look at a runaway lest the horse take to the walk where the spectator was.

But the noise of hoofs and rattle of wheels which marked the oldtime runaway is less than the blast of a horn today. The motorcar that is doing damage on the streets and roads today is not blowing a horn. It steals insidiously upon the victim almost without warning of sound.

It looks today as if people were more afraid of horses in the old days than they are of cars today. But then there were not so many horses and everyone did not have a horse. If as few people had cars today as had horses in the old days, quite a different story would be told.

In the old days an accident in a runaway or a fall from a load with fatal results shocked the entire countryside and city and served as a warning. Today too many accidents and the fact that so many persons unknown to the neighborhood travel the roads and pay their share of the casualty lists, make the impression very fleeting.

In the old days the driver had to be careful with his horse, see that the harness and wagon were in good shape, he had to know his animal and not spur him into balkiness or a mad runaway. Today the motorcar driver's doings are largely to blame for accidents, because the motorcar will do everything reasonable at the take of it. It won't balk and won't run away. He sets the speed of the car, he has no horse to blame, and he cannot blame the engine or the gasoline.

BAY OF QUINTE BEACHES ASSOCIATION

Bay of Quinte Beaches Association has been given the approval of the city council in its scheme to go forward and make a beach and a park which have been projected by a number of public-spirited citizens. The council has named a committee to co-operate with the association. It has given the use of the city grader, and the supervision of the city engineer and has provided relief labor without cost to the association.

This should make clear enough to the people the importance of the undertaking. The time has come when a good deal of real effort can be put into the plans with the co-operation of the people. This is the season when work of this kind can best be done.

The plan deserves the support of the citizens and the project therefore should gradually work into something in the nature of a valuable asset to the city. Those who have visited waterfronts and beaches in other cities know the social and community value of public parks and beaches.

As the committees have been named the chairmen of these should now get busy on the work falling upon these committees. No time should be allowed to elapse.

Even yet there may be for some minds lack of clear perception what this means. A large map of the prospective beach and park has been prepared by Mr. W. A. Watson of this city, well known architect, who worked for three days, putting in every hour of the day in the preparation of this plan which he has drawn for the beaches committee without cost. This map is on view in the window of the store of Ald. Laurie Lewis and an examination of this will convince of the possibilities in such an undertaking as has been started.

If something of the spirit of unselfish service, shown by Mr. Watson in this work, were to inspire others to do something for the beaches and park project, there would be no uncertainty of its realization within a reasonable time.

The cost will be small, perhaps so small that people may even thereby come to doubt the success of the project but nevertheless this is a scheme in which the main factor is co-operation. All must get together in this public work.

IN SPRING

The darkness is lesser growng;
Daylight stays longer, glowing
With Spring sunn.
Nature from sleep is waking,
Buds on the braes are breaking,
And the sap runs.

The birds and bees are coming,
And swains their tunes will be humming
On the green plain;
The freed herd will soon be lowing,
And man on the lea be sowing
The golden grain.

The maid with her rope is skipping;
The lad his line is dipping
In the dimpled stream;
Age in a nook finds seating;
Lambs for their dames are bleating—
And life is a dream!

ECHOES OF THE TERRIBLE SEA DISASTER of September 7, 1934, when the Ward Liner Morro Castle burned a few miles off Asbury Park, New Jersey, almost in sight of the home port of New York City, came in a court order exonerating Chief Officer William Ferdinand Warms of all blame in the catastrophe. There was a loss of 134 lives in the disaster and the death of the captain shortly before the fire broke out. This threw the command of the ship on Chief Officer Warms and the resulting enquiry and court action resulted in him being found guilty of criminal negligence and sentenced to two years in jail. The case was appealed and finally he has been exonerated. Chief Engineer Eben Starr Abbott, one of the first to leave the doomed ship, also won the favor of the final court, after having been sentenced originally to four years in jail, while the Ward Line was fined $10,000, and its executive vice president $5,000. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals unanimously set aside the conviction of Warms and Abbott placed the blame for the ship's unseaworthy condition wholly upon the Ward Line, and deceased Captain Wilmott. Censuring the Judge who sentenced Warms the court held that the acting captain "had maintained the best tradition of the sea by staying on his vessel until the bridge had burned under his distinct, but minks are scarce. OLD MARKERS—

E.M.G., the tireless investigator of the St. Mary's Journal-Argus, who has been delving into the uses of old automobile markers has found they are used for: (a) covering rat holes; (b) locked on the sides of steps for book scrappers; (c) used for reinforcing the corners of battered trunks; (d) for shingles on the roof of a small outbuilding; (e) and as a part of slash-proof shin-pads in a boys' hockey outfit.

IT WAS SETTLED—

They're whispering this tale in labor circles: A sit-down-strike among sixty employees of the research department was called in the Indiana factory of an auto accessory company. The president decided to end it quickly. He entered the factory and told the strikers: "Boys, you might as well be comfortable here." He sent for blankets and then had three cases of brandy brought into the place. When the workers had almost finished the brandy, the president brought in sixteen young ladies to animate the strikers. At the height of festivities the official departed, and returned —bringing with him all the wives of the strikers to view the Indiana version of a Bacchanalian revel. The strike was called off forthwith —New York Post.

THE MODERN EGG FACTORY—

From an all-electric egg factory owned by Mr. C. E. MacManus of Baltimore, eggs flow during laying periods at the rate of six hundred dozen an hour. Here the pampered hens are not allowed their freedom even for mating. Their maternal duties are entrusted to electric incubators. Housed in tiers of wire cages, each cage containing from forty to sixty cells, they are fed on a scientifically balanced ration, delivered by an endless conveyor belt running beneath their pens. Other robot devices including an electric scraper, keep their feeding pan immaculately clean and every shred of rubbish, dropped to the conveyor belt, travels to a cleaning over for conversion into a high grade fertilizer. Additional stimulants to intensive laying are provided by air conditioning. Electric radiators maintain a uniform temperature of 60 degrees and ultra-electric cells installed in the factory's roof, automatically switch on artificial light when the internal combustion engine as well. He said he would feel safe among sufferers from diseases which his profession knew how to prevent, such as yellow fever, malaria, dengue and leprosy.

Since his Odyssey began in the early part of the century, man's inventions have brought new problems to such warriors as Dr. Heiser. One which he mentioned is the airplane's growing use in its trans-Atlantic services. It has carried from Africa to Brazil mosquitoes which have spread a form of malaria hitherto unknown in South America.

Unless there is thorough fumigation and disinfection, if airplanes hopping about Africa and from that continent to others, Dr. Heiser foresees the possibility of yellow fever being transmitted to such thickly populated lands as India. The result, he fears, would be "the greatest disaster the world has ever known." One airplane-riding mosquito, or one passenger infected with yellow fever, would be sufficient to start the calamity, he said.

Dr. Heiser's leprosy is as much of a hobby as stamp-collecting is to many a leisure hour. The great problem today, he remarked before, was to find how leprosy got from one person to another. Since no animal below homo sapiens will contract the disease and since experiments on volunteers among prisoners have shown it difficult to give leprosy deliberately to an individual, but for that measure to be put into practice the world is not ready. However, he said, birth control is making progress not by the Western world, but also in Japan, where complete sex segregation, where only ten years ago he had found it "violently opposed." The Indian leaders, too, he remarked, are becoming sympathetic.

Leprosy, it is known, can be inflected with leprosy, but in a few weeks or months it will get well, leaving the research work none the wiser.

Against leprosy, said Dr. Heiser, isolation still remained the surest preventative. "Where isolation of the disease unless there is a leper in the community." As the fellow citizens have always been driven back to Africa and largely to the West coast, so will they be driven by the United States, Mexico and Central America as it has freed, as had the West Coast of South America, though a few remnants remain there, he said.

One problem to which Dr. Heiser sought a solution was statistics as to Africa's possibilities for mass colonization to relieve congestion pressure elsewhere. Eventually, the physician thinks the world will have to adopt birth control as the solution to avoid sunpiu popula-tion.—Montreal Star.

Safe Among the Lepers

At 64, Dr. Victor Heiser, author of the best-selling "An American Doctor's Odyssey," is on his way from New York to Africa. He goes there on the invitation of the British Government, to study yellow fever conditions in certain parts of the continent. Despite the fact that in other sections and hillsides in the Egyptian Sudan, a country which would provide the United States with even more severe competition in world cotton markets but for the ravages of bilharzia, a disease spread to human being by snails in the filthy waters of irrigated countrysides.

Having remained in his homeland for two years, his longest stay in America in three decades devoted to fighting plagues and saving lives in every part of the world, the author of many books is once more eager to be away once more from such civilized dangers as influenza, pneumonia and rheumatism, and

GLAD TO SEE BOYS BEFORE CROSSING OVER

Ottawa, April 23 (CP).—For the first time in many years, Sir Robert Borden, Canada's war-time premier, was unable, owing to doctor's orders, to attend the annual reunion last night of the Ottawa Red Chevron's commemorating the Second battle of Ypres. He sent in his message which conveyed his warm greetings to all "his boys."

Sir Archibald Macdonnell, wartime Commander of the famous Red-Patch Division of the Canadian Corps, expressed "an old man's pride in the boys he once commanded." Despite ill-health and his statement that he was "glad to have seen all the boys before I cross over," Sir Archibald was cheered to the echoes to the song "Old Soldiers Never Die."

TWEED

Tweed—The Literary Club of Tweed United Church held its regu-lar meeting on Tuesday evening, with Miss Bessie Gordon, B. A., in the chair. The meeting was opened with a hymn, Rev. R. R. Nicholson introduced the speaker, Rev. Stan-ley Osborne B. A., Miss Bech, Mr. Nicholson said that as far as his knew there was only one priest min-ister in the United Church who had obtained his Bachelor of Music de-gree. That is Dr. Hoarewood now a member of the staff of Toronto Conservatory of Music.

There was a splendid audience to hear Rev. Osborne's address "Music Appreciation". They came from Tweed, Sulphide, Thomasburg, Ac-tinolite and Midoch. The speaker divided his address into two sec-tions: The Church Hymnary and Programme Music.

"Worship," said Mr. Osborne, "is an art, in which one of the most important elements is the element of music. It has the power to con-vey attitudes, as nothing else can do. It can make the hearer laugh, feel sober, lonesome, or disappointed. All sorts of meanings can be con-veyed by music. Thus the speak-er illustrated by the use of the piano. Anyone can cultivate for himself any attitude by listening to good music. Thus it has a definite place in the worship service. Suit-able music played at the opening of the service prepares the mind for worship. The United Church hymn-nary in this particular far surpas-ses any previous hymnary."

Mr. Osborne referred to German music as especially suited to hymns and illustrated with one or two Ger-man chorales. Some of the tunes in the hymnary were mildly criticized for their lack of interest even to the point of monotony as for ex-ample the usual setting of the Doxo-logy. Solo and duet singing is us-ually not worshipful as the singer generally have failed to catch the spirit and meaning of the words and thus fail to convey any mean-ing to the listener.

Every child in the public schools should be given an opportunity to learn to sing. Wonderful ideals may be taught them through the medi-um of suitable songs such as folk songs. Canada is gradually coming to realize the value of music in the schools. In this particular there is much may well be said to lead the world.

Three things elemental in music are time, rhythm, which makes mu-sic a unity and creates interest in the selection, and melody which gives balance. These elements were illustrated by various hymns and classical selections "Lobestraum", "Dance of the Goblins", and others.

This excellent address was deeply appreciated. Mr. T. E. Moffat and Mr. S. H. Cooper moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Osborne.

The Royal Road to the Coronation

His Majesty swimming at Southwold, golfing at Sunningdale, playing tennis at Wimbledon

TENNIS is his majesty's favorite sport and he is a good enough player, though wielding his racket left-handed, to have put up a creditable game on the famed Wimbledon courts. As a boy, the prince and his brothers and sisters were taught the value of sports in building keen minds and healthy bodies and they gave way to none in their enjoyment of games.

The king has long been known as the best tennis player in the royal family; many maintain that he is also the best golfer. Curiously enough, as the pictures above will show, while he plays the excellent brand of tennis left handed, he swings a golf club and plays all other sports right handed.

A study of his form here, to links critics, will reveal that his stance and swing are considerably better than that of the average amateur.

When his majesty plays, and with the great demands upon his time it takes effort to fit in a program for games, he plays hard and asks no quarter from his opponents. Tennis he perfected in the R.A.F. and with a companion is recorded as winning a doubles champion-ship at an important tournament. Golf was less popular generally when the king was plain Prince Albert, but that too was on his schoolboy curriculum and the abil-ity he mastered then has not deserted him. He plays generally at Sunningdale, near London, where he is well-known. Even when aboard ship during his tours of the dominions, athletics were not allowed to lapse and squash racquets took the place of other sports impossible ashore.

Swimming he enjoys particularly when at his camp for boys at Southwold, Sussex, which, in the early days he visited each summer for a few days under the Tents. Then a romp with the lads or a bout with a comrade often followed by a brisk dip and though not a cham-pion swimmer his majesty is well able to look after himself in the water.

His belief in sports as a train-ing ground for boys was indicated by his advocacy of playing fields in industrial areas both as an aid to better citizenship and as a safety measure against in-creasing traffic hazards. He became chairman of the advisory com-mittee to distribute King George's jubilee fund for this purpose. In 1934, during a visit to Manchester he watched the well-known Man-chester City football team in a match against football team in a match against football team in a match against

NURSE TESTIFIES NO CHECK MADE ON SPONGES USED

Sponge Nurse Not on Mc-Cumber Case Because of an Emergency Operation

Kingston, Ont. April 22.—(CP)—Evidence for the defence in the case of Gertrude McCumber and Syard McCumber, suing Dr. I. G. Bogart, and the Hotel Dieu Hospital for malpractice, ended yesterday after examination of Hotel Dieu witnesses, conducted by D. G. Cunningham, elicited the information that there was no check made of the sponges used in the operation. The case continued today.

Rita Laurin, who acted as instrument nurse during Mrs. McCumber's operation, told of the usual practices followed after her duties and said that sponges are counted before and after an operation and a comparison made as to whether any were missing.

She said there was no sponge nurse at the operation on Mrs. McCumber and no check made of the sponges used.

Dr. I. G. Bogart, during cross examination, said that in 21,000 surgical cases he had since started practice, he could only recall three similar cases to Mrs. McCumber's.

Sister Mary Magdalene said she had been a member of the Order at the Hotel Dieu Hospital for 24 years and for some time had been night supervisor at the Hotel Dieu. She said special care was given Mrs. McCumber. The case had come to her attention after written instructions of Dr. Bogart were carried out.

Nurse Louise M. O. Dade told of the care given Mrs. McCumber before and after the operation.

Nurse Alice Kearney told of caring for Mrs. McCumber while Nurse Shaver when the latter removed two inches of gauze from the vagina, ordered by the operation. She said she informed the floor supervisor shortly afterwards. Dr. Boucher, who was Dr. Bogart's assistant, following which Mrs. McCumber was taken to the operating room.

Nurse Ann Fleming said that she was in charge of the instrument nurse for the operation, but that there was emergency operation at the time and she was taken off the Mc-Cumber case.

FATHER DIVINE HELD IN CUSTODY

Booked on a Charge of Felonious Assault in New York

New York, April 22.—(AP)—Herlem's sepia-tinctured "God"—Father Divine—was in jail today.

The 60-year-old mission leader of Lenox Avenue, Manhattan's broad thoroughfare in the heart of the biggest Negro community in the United States, was brought back from a segment of his kingdom in Milford, Conn., and booked on a charge of felonious assault.

Both negth and man, the squat, bland-featured little author of "heavenly" promises, declared he accounted thousands of his followers from the "dregs of humanity" and cartographers as a one-time Baltimore handyman, who aspired to higher things, and founded on a fad religion.

Hundreds of police headquarters milled hundreds of Negroes. Patrolmen watched from vantage points.

In his far-flung "kingdom" embracing "heaven" and "heaven-ever," tension heaven"—restaurants and a great farm near Kingston, N. Y., Father Divine has his own psychic-mation wa consistent, omnipotent in his government. But he was just a weary old man today.

Minnie Being Tried

"I am tired, tired," he mumbled on the automobile trip from Milford as detectives piled him with questions about the beating and stabbing of a white man at Divine's main "heaven" last Monday night. He would say no more. As a process server attempted to hand the cult leader a summons in a civil suit, he and a friend were set upon by indignant Negroes.

Troubles had accumulated for the baldheaded little man as he was led into police headquarters early today. "Faithful Mary," whom he described as his "so-called wife" had announced, "he ain't God, he's a damned man."

John C. McDermott, Assistant United States Attorney, said he had assembled evidence to prove that Divine's "Heavens" were subject to Federal prosecution.

Women Derive Benefits from Friendly, Informal Program

Cooking School at Christ Church Parish Hall Concludes

Thursday, the final day of the electric cooking classes held by Mrs. E. McLean in Christ Church Parish Hall, saw the largest attendance of the sessions in spite of the very disagreeable day. Many of the women found the demonstrations interesting, they were there on all three afternoons to derive all the benefits they could from this friendly, informal program.

With a few introductory remarks Mrs. McLean set right to work to demonstrate pastry for a tasty apple pie and a shell for lemon chiffon pie. It is splendid idea to roll the dough out on a sheet of canvas as the rough surface will absorb the extra flour instead of the pastry.

MUSIC FESTIVAL FOR CORONATION

Christ Church to Sponsor Festival of Church Music

On Friday, May 14th, at 8.00 p.m. there will be held a "Coronation" Festival of Church Music, in Christ Church, Belleville, under the auspices of the School of English Church Music.

This is the first time such a festival under the S.E.C.M. has been held in the Diocese of Ontario and should prove quite an event.

The Cathedral Choir of St. Simon the Apostle, Toronto, under the direction of R. S. Lewis, Organist and Choirmaster, has consented to come to Belleville and assist with the Festival Choir of Christ Church.

It is well-known, St. Simon's Choir is one of the few all male Choirs (men and boys) in Canada. The choir has a splendid reputation both for the high standard of music sung and also for the rendition of the music of the Church.

To quote the Sunday Night' after hearing a Christmas Carol Concert in "The Eaton Auditorium" Toronto, by St. Simon's Choir, "Singing was of a really high order. The boys' voices were delightful, the tone of the cooing quality so beloved by Victorian Choirmasters. The combination was striking." The Toronto Globe's music critic, in a recent review program, indeed was notably complimentary in regard to the choir from traditional carols or the 15th century to the music of the modern Church Choirs. Mr. Lewis, the Choirmaster, comes in for special praise."

The choir of Christ Church Belleville, has won wide recognition for itself over the past two years under the direction of Mr. Ernest Organist and Choirmaster, Mr. Geo. Mayhew. Not only has the usual section of the Choir, both men and boys, been doubled, but the Junior Choir Christ Church in the Diocese of Ontario. Now it is one of the largest church choirs in the Diocese for rendering the music of the Church with the greatest reverence and simplicity.

For the Festival, Evensong will be given, and the service will be a Recital of Church Music. Mr. Lewis, Organist of St. Simon's, will conduct, and Mr. Mayhew will play the organ for the Service and the Recital.

There will be a small gallery choir in the West Gallery, the choir in the Chancel. The gallery choir will sing under the direction of Mr. Clarence and Nunc Dimittis, by Healey-Willan, and the Psalms and Canticles, (1) God Liveth Still—J. S. Bach; (2) Preserve Us, O Lord—Healey-Willan; (3) Come Ye Servants of the Lord—Christopher Tye.

The Chancel Choir will sing the following representative English Motets:

Rejoice in the Lord (F. Purcell)
O Clap Your Hands (Whitford Davies)
Blessed Be the God and Father (S. S. Wesley)
Judge Me, O God (Mendelssohn)

STUART HOOEY A-WHEELING GOES

79-Year Old Trenton Bicyclist Seen Again on Highways

Stuart Hooey, well known resident of Trenton since 1884, former resident and merchant of this city previous to that date, who at the age of 79 is considered one of the oldest consistent bicycle riders of the Dominion has entered his thirty or thirty-fifth —he forgets which—active year a-wheel. Mr. Hooey, who has always handled his well known bicycle into the open road during the winter months, is a preliminary warm-up for the coming season's fun, cycled the nine-mile stretch to the sporting Place from Trenton.

"I did it in 40 minutes going, and 35 minutes coming back, but I had head wind all the way back. I can do better time than that," he stated today while in Belleville, renewing old acquaintances here.

Last year Mr. Hooey became International advertised through a contest arranged by a prominent bicycle manufacturing firm.

"But I did not enter at all this publicity," confided the Trenton resident, when he was questioned in the fact of being able to pile up an average of 5,000 miles each year and the trips oh his bike.

Unusually active and alert in spite of his years, Mr. Hooey declares he will be observed on May 19th, next May, 1937, when he celebrates another birthday his physical well being. His reminiscences of the early days spent in Belleville are many and interesting.

"There aren't very many of the real old Belleville boys left," he says, "I know only one or two of the old timers. Most of them were here when I was in business. But I still have many friends here and enjoy these few friendships alive," he added.

Three New Medical Discoveries

One half of the patients he said, received the standard pneumonia treatments, the other half by injection of a protein substance which Dr. Brooks said, his medical friends think ought not to work.

But he said, the death rate of those treated with the protein was 10 per cent in the lobar pneumonia against 30 per cent, for patients receiving all the usual pneumonia remedies. The death rate was nine per cent. in broncho-pneumonia against 32 per-cent. The cases covered five years.

The medical name of the protein is desert proteose or secondary proteose. It is made from fibrin, the substance which causes blood to clot.

Bernhard Steinberg, M.D., of the Toledo hospital, Toledo, Ohio, reported a method, the first of its kind of coating the white blood cells from an animal to work in curing disease of not only another animal but of a different species, including a human being.

White Blood Cells Used

The white blood cells, leukocytes, are the scavengers in both men and animals, their job being to destroy infections of all kinds.

Laboratory workers have known for some time that it is possible to extract these living cells from blood and keep them alive. Dr. Steinberg discovered a method of speeding up this extraction by adding to the serum in large number of leukocytes taken from rabbits. The body fluid of another animal or to a human being while they are still alive and active.

He used the leukocytes obtained from one dog to cure peritonitis in another dog.

Nerves Control Bile Supply

The new nerve discovery is new knowledge about the structure of the human body. Bile is secreted by the liver. For some years it has been known that hormones, powerful chemical substances carried by the blood, stimulate the liver to produce bile.

It also was suspected nerves running to the liver from the brain and the nerves of the sympathetic system of the involuntary muscles, helped to control the supply of bile.

Adding to the joy of the occasion was news from the Governor General of the Province of Asturias to the West a fourth food ship had run the blockade and docked with a cargo of food at Gijon.

The Welsh steamer Mary Llewellyn under the command of Bluff Captain "Potato" Jones arrived at Gijon during the afternoon.

Sock Shtelter

Basque coastal gunners sighted the Insurgent warships as the merchant fleet approached the coast and tried to pick them off with a shower of shells. The Insurgent trawler Caderna darted between the cargo boats, seeking cover.

The battler merchant ships moved apart, leaving the Caderna in open water. From the trawler withdrew under hot Basque artillery fire.

Name Distinguishes

Lloyd Harwood is credited to distinguish him from his colleague, Captain Owen "Cornock" Jones, who commanded the destroyer during the night voyage from St. Jean de Luz, when he and the other merchant ship skippers had been forced to flee from earlier attacks of the Insurgent air fleet.

President Juan Antonio Aguirre of the Provisional Government sent a representative to the docks to extend an official welcome to the food ship which he heard it had sailed into the mouth of the river Nervion, air miles away.

It was shortly after dawn the three ships steamed past the ornate city of Portugalete at the mouth of the river. They had sailed on the tide from St. Jean de Luz two hours before midnight.

Crashing into the seas just off their bows came one shot from the Cervera, followed by a terse note from the Insurgent Commander:

"We shall sink you if you do not halt."

The hovering battle cruiser Hood, mightiest warship afloat, was quickly advised of the situation and slammed on the scene with the destroyer flotilla under her command.

When until they reached Spanish territorial waters the British warships covered the merchantmen, but after the three-mile limit turned them over to the protection of the Government armor trawler Blskaya.

Wrestling Fans of District Promised Outstanding Cards By Jack Corcoran, Promoter

First Show at The Arena on Thursday Full of Highlights

KATAN A WINNER

Charlie Strack Easy Winner Over Graeber And Coffield Takes Fiers

Speed, science and ability featured Jack Corcoran's Queensbury A. C. wrestling bouts at the Belleville Arena, last night, when three of the most outstanding wrestling bouts ever staged in Belleville were thoroughly enjoyed by a sparsely populated gallery. From the preliminary bout, when a fighting Irishman was received, through the semi-final, that saw Charlie Strack, Boston, defeat Henry Graber, Germany until the favorite in the main bout The Kerr of California was mounted on and practically unconscious and John Katan, former Canadian wrestling champion, declared winner, the bouts were keen and well contested with continued thrilling exhibitions being featured.

Promoter J. J. "Jack" Corcoran, or the Queensbury A.C., was introduced to the audience amid clamorous applause and assured the Belleville wrestling fans of the highest type of wrestling to be featured in the world for future shows. Matchmaker Corcoran, himself a wrestler of local wrestling announcements when he assured the gallery of 150 spectators of George Clark, Scottish contender for the world's championship and one of the first four outstanding wrestlers in the world today. Mr. Corcoran assured local fans, Jack Clark would appear on the next local wrestling card to be held in Belleville on May 4th. George Harris, secretary of the Queensbury A.C. was also an interested spectator at the arena last night, while other notables of the Queensbury A.C. were on hand when the Belleville show was originally scheduled for the Toronto Maple Leaf Gardens.

Awarded Decision

John Katan, former Canadian champion, added another notch in his return to the Canadian wrestling limelight, when he was awarded the decision over Ted Kay, California, last night. Kay being counted out in the third round as he was unable to return, after a series of flying tackle, each grappler having won a previous fall. Katan was by far the superior despite his more orthodox antics throughout the bitter pair of the final bout until Kay eventually found Katan's weakness and centred his attack upon flying tackles and dives, after a Joe Savoldi, Kay, although defeated in the first round, returned to the ring to win the second fall, by virtue of three successful flying tackles, that left Katan in a precarious position for a body prey. Kay's flying tackle early in the second round nature. Katan had previously assumed the villainous nature and despite the fact he had repeatedly been cautioned by Referee Jack Forbes for continued illegal tactics, Katan finally subdued Kay and won the first fall with an inside reverse Japanese hold, which incidentally, cannot be broken unless a fracture results, and concluded in a conceded fall for Katan for the first round, after continued pleadings on the part of Referee Forbes, directed towards the Californian collegian, who only conceded after absorbing extended punishment.

Katan Bagged Down

Despite the fact Katan continued his aggressiveness and carried the fight into the second round, Kay really did slap the Canadian down and that is meant figuratively, Kay assumed the offensive and, with a series of hard elbow smashes, lowered the pigmentied out and practically unconscious John Katan, former Canadian wrestling champion, declared winner, the bouts were keen and well contested with continued thrilling exhibitions being featured.

MARKET COMMENT

From now on a same- condition should prevail in the market. The list has reached its objective to move in both directions on short notice and the sharp rally of yesterday did a great deal to clear the air of overbought conditions. Such sharp operations were not accompanied by any special news which would definitely indicate that the list was in a vulnerable technical position which has failed to adjust before the forward movement could be regained. However, the manner of the adjustment was more drastic than the majority had anticipated.

The decline in local industrial stocks, despite the fact that New York held steady, is not hard to explain. Those who were called for margin in the past few days were forced to liquidate and as the result of the pressure the sharper decline, industrial stocks were sold for margin purposes. The apparent ease of selling in this group was sufficient to bring about a sharp setback.

The opinion in the Street at the moment is that Tuesday's lows will not be penetrated and the advice is offered that those who were fortunate enough to acquire the better mining equities around their lows should maintain their position for ultimately higher prices.

It is pointed out that the present attack of the jitters will soon pass and suggested that restoration of normal conditions will be hastened if men here and elsewhere will once more put their feet firmly on the ground and refuse to be stampeded by rumors and bogeys. Fear is a destroyer; those things that never happen are oftimes the worst.

Industrial recovery in Great Britain has been characterized by an increased consumption of commodities R. O. Swezey & Co. Ltd. Today per capita consumption per capita basis exceeds that of all previous years and is even greater than the North American peak rate of 20 pounds per capita recorded in 1929. This improvement cannot be accounted for solely by the more liberal use of advertising made possible from increased business activity. Every marked increase in interest in all public affairs, a decided increase in literacy—in brief, the formation of reading habits by the great mass of the public seems to us to have established a firmer demand for newsprint than ever existed before.

Mackenzie Red Lake

Production of $226,000 in the first three months of 1937 was reported by Mr.Ernesto Red Lake Gold Mines, against $150,852 in the same period of 1936. Tonnage milled was 12,932 of average grade $16.56, compared with 13,276 tons at $13.51 in the previous year.

Profit From the Inevitable Boom

Profit from the inevitable boom in inflation—prices of both commodities and securities will continue to rise, states Brown's Reports. This will naturally follow, as business and trade improves. Dollar-for-Dollar Corp. Programs and Hiram Walker were steady to a shade higher. Canadian Breweries was also steady in a little ground, but Canadian funds received a set back of 10.00@15% cents. On the curb, Lake Shore Mines was strong.

Pointing higher most of the day, some up a point or more at the best, Kirkland Lake, Southern Kirkland, Lackawanna, Atlantic Coast Line, Consolidated Oil, Goodrich, Goodyear, Montgomery Ward, J. I. Case, International Harvester, Southern Railway and Douglas Aircraft.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, April 22 (CP)—Bacon hog prices dropped 10 and 15 cents at Dominion Stockyards while other market points reported steady quotations.

Liverpool, Bransford $8.50; London $8.50; Hull $8.50; Peterborough $8.50; Stratford $8.50; Dresselwoodlie: Barrie $11.35; Colchester $11.35; Hull $11.35; Lotcher $11.35; Peterborough $11.85; Stratford $11.35; Guelph $11.35.

COALITION IS SEEN LIKELY IN AUSTRIA

Venice, April 23 (AP)—Formation of a coalition government in Austria, with Nazis taking part, was predicted today by the authoritative Giornale D'Italia at the conclusion of a conference between Premier Mussolini and Chancellor Kurt Von Schuschnigg of Austria.

The paper, published by Virginio Gayda, often the mouthpiece of Mussolini, said Italy approved of such a government.

"Nazis in Austria," said Gayda, "will seek to bring about its share responsibility with the (Von Schuschnigg) fatherland and the first step for their direct participation in the Austrian government."

FRAME LINE WORK HALTED

Janesville, Wis., April 23 (AP)—Twenty-seven hundred General Motors employees were thrown into idleness today when a group of union workers on the frame line in the Chevrolet Motor Company refused to work.

Cessation of work on the frame line forced a halt in operations in the motor factory and in the Fisher Body Company plant.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, April 23.—(CP)—While holding generally steady, trade in the Industrial and metal issues of Toronto Stock Exchange slowed down today to the smallest total the market was enlivened in the early afternoon by sharp advances in the senior oils. Gains in the latter group ranged up to 80 cents.

Oilwells was the leader at a rise of about 2.50 to 10 7-8. The price was holding around 10 1-2 for a gain of 2.50 cents. Narrow recessions predominated in the golds.

The market was a little stronger for Falconbridge, Sherritt, Hard Rock, Sudbury Basin, Lower for Noranda, Smelters and Pend Oreille. Hiram Walker, Reports. This will be

DAILY SHORT STORY

Sammy and His Sandwiches

By Dorothy Douglas

Sammy was one of the young men who, having done perhaps a bit more than his bit in the war had come to fallen fortunes.

His business, previous to his marching away with the first contingent to sail for France, had depended largely upon legs and the swift and sure way in which he used them. Sammy had been both a crack tennis player and a first-class salesman for a sporting goods house—the one aiding and abetting the other.

But, neither tennis nor salesmanship being possible now, Sammy had racked his cerebrum for a sitting-down job that would make him a decent living.

It was during a trip through England that he had seen the well-known van with the funny little Scotch chap standing upright on its roof, advertising that well-known brand of sandwich so dear to the business man's inward man.

Sammy decided that if one man could make a great a demand for sandwiches in England he didn't see why he couldn't do the same in his own land.

So Sammy started making sandwiches.

He began in a very modest way and concocted and made all his wares himself. He wrapped them daintily and engaged the services of a small but energetic and smiling boy to go around the offices with his basket of tempting sandwiches.

Sammy had hosts of friends to begin with and it was only a few months before he was able to take a tiny shop down in the business district.

One sunny day, she came into Sammy's shop. She was quite the loveliest creature that Sammy had ever beheld.

"I want some sandwiches for kiddies," she said with a smile. "I'm giving a children's party tomorrow and I should like something pure and wholesome."

"Kiddies love brown bread, with cream cheese and nuts and chopped cherries," said Sammy, his mind on cherries instead of raisins because of the cherry redness of his fair customer's cheeks. "And how many kiddies have you?" he asked.

"None," she shook a negative of the head to accompany her words. "It is my Sunday school class I'm giving the party for. I shall want about six dozen sandwiches and I will—I did Sammy fancy she colored slightly—I will call for them tomorrow—if they will be ready about two o'clock."

She left something intangible behind her—perhaps a fragrance or maybe it was the essence of wonderful womanhood. Anyway, whatever it was Sammy realized it wasn't for him. He was a cripple, born by the ravages of war, his left fingers sought and touched the small cross he carried hidden in his vest pocket. It might be that some solace lay there to make amends, for Sammy had been decorated for conspicuous bravery, but that same bravery was carrying him on now so that he smiled as he glanced at what had once been a pair of manly legs.

John Manners looked up from his great desk in a nearby office to see his daughter came in, and all the tenderness in his heart was lit as only he saw who it was.

She flew into his arms and burst into tears.

"Oh, daddy, how can a man be so brave? You told me he was a fine chap and a man worth my girl's admiration but you didn't tell me about his—smile."

John Manners' voice was none too steady as he patted his daughter's sunny head.

"It is a rare smile—for who has gone through what Sammy has, I know my girl would know a real man when she saw one. That's the reason I was keen for you to go in there and see him—the chaps you girls meet these days aren't up to much, and I've always been afraid you'd tie up with one of them. Now you just keep on giving kiddie parties and going in to order your sandwiches from Sammy and before long you'll know that your old dad can pick a winner when he sees him. That chap makes me the best sandwich for my lunch every day that ever went down a busy man's throat."

But as the weeks and months went by and Sammy saw more and more of Jean Manners and knew more of her as the daughter of the big financier who daily stood at his counter for a noon-day snack, his love became wistful and harder to bring forth.

And the color in Jean's cheeks was less brilliant and her eyes were sad. She realized that Sammy would not tell her that he loved her and her heart was breaking.

"Sammy," said the big financier one day, "you may know about making sandwiches—in fact, no one knows much more, but what you don't know is that you're smashing my daughter's heart. A fine girl like my daughter doesn't love a man for his legs or his hands. She loves him for the man he is. And, my lad—love's the biggest thing in this old world."

And with those decisive words he walked out of the shop and left Sammy to do the rest.

AMELIA EARHART COMES BY TRAIN

Tells at Toronto She Was Badly 'Bitten' by Flying Bug There in 1918

Toronto, April 23—(CP)—Amelia Earhart, noted woman flyer arrived here today with her husband George Palmer Putnam, from the Pacific coast.

Miss Earhart said they would stay in Toronto a few days visiting friends, before going to New York whence she plans to fly to San Francisco. The Putnams arrived by train.

Miss Earhart said she had intended to fly to Toronto but took the train because of bad weather. She said it was the first time she had arrived in Toronto by train since the Great War. She has a number of old friends here for she served as a war nurse in Toronto during the war.

"It was here in Toronto that I first got the flying bug," she said. "I didn't make my first flight here, but I was badly bitten by the bug during the war. I used to go up to one of the hills on the edge of the city every Sunday and watch the airplanes take off."

TARZAN'S QUEST

The discovery that Annette was missing momentarily stunned the remaining members of the ill-fated expedition. But now Brom advanced angrily on Sborov. "You know where she is, you rat!" The prince fell back, instinctively raising his hands in defense.

"I know nothing about her," he pleaded. "You lie," Brown roared, still advancing. "Keep away from me," Sborov screamed; "don't let him get me, Jane; he'll kill me." "You're right I'm going to kill you," Brown growled. The trembling prince turned and ran.

But in a dozen steps Brown had overtaken the terrified man. Alexis wheeled to fight, with all the madferocity of a cornered rat. But the aviator bore him to the ground and closed fingers upon his throat as Sborov struggled furiously to free himself.

Seeing that the pilot was really intent on killing, Jane seized her spear and darted toward them. Presently she was prodding the sharp spear against Brown's head below his left shoulder blade. "Stop! Or I'll run this spear straight through your heart!"

SCOTTISH FOOTBALL CUP WON BY CELTICS

FIFTEENTH TIME FAMOUS CLUB HAS BEEN VICTORIOUS

Opposed by Aberdeen Which Club Has Never Won Trophy

140,000 PRESENT

Celtics Scored Winning Goal in Last Half of Contest

Glasgow, April 24.—(CP Cable)—Celtic won the Scottish Football Cup for the 15th time today by defeating Aberdeen 2-1.

Tied 1-1 at half-time, the Celts came through with the winning goal in the 54th minute.

A crowd estimated between 130,000 and 140,000 witnessed a dramatic tussle in fine football weather. Celtic was full value for the victory, monopolizing first-half play and holding out Aberdeen's frequent thrusts after the interval.

Score in 11 Minutes

Repeated raids at the opening brought success to the Glasgow squad after only 11 minutes. Crum netting from close in. Thirty seconds later the Dons swept down to field and Armstrong, Celtic's lanky Canadian-born goalkeeper. Buchan gave the Celts their lead after 54 minutes in the second half.

For most of the battle Celtic pressed vigorously but the midway through the second period the Aberdonians settled down to give the powerful Glasgow defence a warm time.

While Johnstone played valiantly in the Aberdeen goal, Cooper and Geddes in the Celtic line were guilty of many faults. Falloon, the pivot, showed a lower standard than ever, and saved the day several times for the Dons' back division.

Celtic's defence was dependable at all times but the forwards did not play with their usual dash. Johnstone, Crum and Murphy being well held on the left, Delaney on the other wing, was clever individualist, being well assisted by Buchan. McGrory, the veteran, played his smart game although he did not score.

Why the Weather?

By Mayor A. H. Thiessen, Science Service Meteorologist, Bring May Dewers".

"April showers

We are made to believe by the song writers that April is the month, and others, that April is an unusually showery month. The actual difference in the numbers of rainy days between March and May or between April and May is small and not at all significant in most parts of the country. We have many types of rainfall, but "April showers" are not the rule in May than in April. The Pacific coast and Pacific southeast Manitoba, also in some parts of southern Saskatchewan, are the only ones with more rain in April than May.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, April 24 (CP)—A deep disturbance is moving northeastward across Minnesota, accompanied by heavy winds and moderate gales over the Great Lakes which will spread over the greater part of the Eastern Canada and Northern States. The weather has been fair and mild in Ontario. Late eastward not snow or rain has fallen in the Lake Superior and southeast Manitoba, also in some parts of southern Saskatchewan, but elsewhere has been fair.

Forecasts: Fresh and cool today and soon of Sunday.

Alberta and Saskatchewan—Cool, Sunday, partly cloudy and cool.

Jolly Buxom May Irwin Waits Curtain Cue for Death

Sang Happiness Into a Million Hearts in 'Good Old Days'

RETIRED MANY YEARS

New York, April 24 (AP)—Death was a stagehand today, awaiting the curtain cue for Jolly, buxom May Irwin who sang happiness into 1,000,000 hearts.

Young people of today did not know her. She sang to their elders many years ago, chiefly classical. That was in the 90's. The 90's and the naughty-naughties, the days of John Drew, „Ole Skinner", the "good old days" of the theatre.

Today May Irwin retired for many years but a laughing memory to those who remember her "Frog Song", her "Hear Dem Bells" and all the many others, lies critically ill at her farm home that snuggles close to the heart of Canada in which she was born 78 years ago.

Many who remember her well would call her America's first comedienne. Her long life in the theatre was a rollicking carnival of laughter.

Laughs were her specialty yet like the other great performers of her day she was not a specialist. She could be most anything. There must be tears behind the process lum as well as laughter.

Her best friend, who sang:

"Just lots of folks are like that Irish lady,
"Gettin' into trouble just to pass the time—"

Could also bring a lump to the throat with:

"After the ball is over
"After the break of dawn—".

The theatre public of "the good ole days" roared at and with May Irwin. They whistled and sang the "comic songs" she introduced, feeling somehow lots better for having (Continued on Page 10)

15 'ANGELS' FLEE FIRE IN HEAVEN OF FATHER DIVINE

Newly-Bought "Branch" of Father Divine is Ruined

LOSS IS $25,000

Sheriff Starts Probe at Once Into Blaze at New Paltz, N. Y.

New Paltz, N.Y., April 24 (AP)—Fire drove 15 of Father Divine's "angels" from a newly-purchased branch "heaven" today, less than 36 hours after the negro cult leader, known as "God" to his followers, was arrested in New York City on a charge of felonious assault.

The office of Sheriff A. F. Molyneaux, at Kingston, announced an immediate investigation. The fire destroyed the 22-room, two-story structure.

Residents of Ulster County protested the negro's purchase of 22 acres of land in this vicinity when the sales occurred, and recently threatened to block the securing-ring of minor "angels" in houses which Father Divine calls his extension heavens.

Fire Chief Elting Clearwater, estimated the damage in excess of $25,000.

Coronation Spirit Is Reaching a Climax in All Parts of Great Britain

230,000 Overseas Visitors Expected And Will Spend $135,000,000—London Now a City of Seething Activity—Rehearsals For Coronation Are Proceeding Regularly.

London, Apr. 24 (CP)—The coronation spirit, gathering orderly momentum since the accession of George VI less than five months ago, is rapidly reaching a climax throughout the land.

On every hand there is indication of stepped-up activity and anticipation of the much-heralded day—May 12—when the king and his consort will be crowned amid splendour and solemnity within the sacred precincts of Westminster Abbey. He will be the 38th monarch to be crowned there.

The task of preparing for the great event is nearing the stage of finality; city and country is assuming a gala appearance; formal invitations to the coronation service have been despatched; thousands have already flocked to the heart of the empire and thousands more are on their way.

230,000 Overseas Visitors.

It is estimated 230,000 overseas visitors will be in London for the coronation proper. Statistician believes they will spend approximately $135,000,000 during their stay.

Already the official contingents from Australia, South Africa, Rhodesia and some of the other outposts have arrived. Those from India and other parts of the far-flung empire are on the high seas. Canada's official party is not due for another ten days.

Apart from the overseas and colonial guests, London's population will be augmented by visitors from the provinces, Scotland, Ireland and Wales. There will be thousands of others from the home forces.

Never has the present generation witnessed such scenes as have attended the coronation preparations. Within the span of a few months London has been transformed from a normal pitch of business and home life to one of seething activity, thronged thoroughfares, crowded hotels and cafes and a blaze of color. Everywhere, London bustle is growing in business.

Every Floor Has Been Checked.

Meanwhile rehearsals for the coronation are going on regularly. Every phase of the ceremony has been checked to the most minute detail; principals in the abbey service and a professional pageant thoroughly drilled.

Last Sunday thousands set the alarm early to witness the first major procession of the coronation cycle.

Stop watches recorded the progress of the procession and incidents which did not go as planned were noted. Those in charge viewed the rehearsal a success.

Before they left London to take up temporary residence in Windsor Palace, the King and Queen visited the Abbey, accompanied by the Earl Marshal, the Duke of Norfolk. Their visit was kept secret some of the workmen were not aware of their presence. Their Majesties were pleased with arrangements.

Queen Mary also paid a visit to the Abbey, testing the seat assigned to her and showing particular interest in the places allotted to the young Princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret.

The King and Queen will remain at Windsor Palace until around May 8, when they will return to Buckingham Palace. They have been considering with perfect reference for weeks, but plan a full-dress drill a few days before the actual coronation.

SAYS GOLDBRICK SWINDLE WORKED

Fred Munchuk Complains to Police at Windsor

Windsor, Ont., Apr. 24 (CP)—Fred Munchuk of Val d'Or today reported to police he was the victim of a "goldbrick" swindle which relieved him of $150.

Police said they were holding Munchuk for questioning. Henry Myers, Detroit, and Orval Lucier, Windsor, are being questioned, police said.

Munchuk, with his wife and child in his Quebec home, took a trip to Toronto where all the trouble started, he told police. He said he met a man named George who claimed to be from Hamilton Lake and who said he was planning to transfer some high-graded gold into Detroit. This man, Munchuk said, induced him to act as intermediary, buying $150 worth of gold and then delivering it to "the man in Detroit".

At the Windsor conference last night, Munchuk was to turn his $2,000 ready and in return was to obtain 12 pounds of gold. Instead went awry when Munchuk announced he would buy only one pound of the metal and pay $150 whereupon one of three men shoved his hand in his pocket, found the money, rebuild up Munchuk, and fled with the $150.

WALKOUT CERTAIN FOR 25,000 MEN

Strike Would Tieup Movement of Freight In And Out of N. Y.

New York, April 24—(AP)— A strike of 25,000 members of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees was threatened at noon today in the metropolitan area of New York. No strike was voted but union officials said a walkout was almost certain.

The chairmen of 125 local unions met yesterday in conference over an alleged refusal by eight railroads to grant a wage increase of 20 cents an hour and discussed a strike to tie up the movement of freight in and out of New York.

The vote, announced yesterday by George Price, head of the union's New York Central branch and spokesman for the organization, was connected with organizing activities of the International Longshoremen's Union. Both unions are members of the American Federation of Labor.

ROBERTA SEMPLE IS SUIT WINNER

Baby Clarence Kincaid awarded pretty, 27-year-old Roberta $1,000 on her allegation that Willard Ahlstrom, attorney for both Aimee and her Angelus Temple, told a newspaperman Aimee has been threatened, intimidated, coerced and black-mailed for the last time."

Judge Kincaid gave her another $1,000 on her charge that Andrews, omitting "Reverend" repeated the statement to other newspapermen, and another $100 attorney fees.

STEVE CONICK OF SUDBURY TIGERS KILLED IN CRASH

Centre Player of Dominion Senior Hockey Team Victim

OUT TO PARTY

Returning Home When The Crash Occurred at an Intersection

Hamilton, Ont., April 24—(CP)—Steve Conick, centre man with Hamilton Tigers, newly-crowned Dominion senior hockey champions, was killed early today in a collision between two automobiles at street intersection here. Four others were injured, two seriously.

Conick was a passenger in an automobile that crashed into and crashed into another auto, leaped into the air and overturned. The hockey player who also starred in baseball here before going to Northern Ontario, was pinned beneath the wreckage.

The driver, all passengers in the car in which Conick was riding: Mrs. Frances Lalonde, Hamilton; Edward Lalonde, Hamilton; George La Zerke, Hamilton and Nelson Nichol, Hamilton.

Returning From Party

According to information obtained by police and hospital staff Earl Palker, Stoney Creek, and Stanley Jewell, Hamton, were riding, had stopped at the intersection and was about as it proceeded by the car allegedly driven by the injured Nichol. Albert and Paul Conick, brothers of Steve, escaped without injury. Palker has been placed under arrest on a charge of criminal negligence.

Conick who recently helped Sudbury Tigers win the Allan Cup, returned Beavers in Calgary for the Alpine Cup, was visiting here before returning to Toronto to play with the team in the finals of the International Series with Wembley Lions, English champions. The party had been out for the evening and were returning home when the accident occurred.

Standout as Player

Breaking into organized hockey in 1931 with Sudbury Cub Hamilton Junior O.H.A. team, Conick was a standout. The following winter he played in the senior City League here. In 1933-33 he played for Hamilton Drake and Manly Bennett and helped Hamilton Tigers win the O.H.A. championship.

Only 25, Conick was a veteran and one child, both living in Sudbury. Mrs. Conick was the former Mildred Nicol before the international star played hockey here. He played three years with the club, then left the international ranks in 1932-36 when they were downed by Kitchener Dutchmen.

Popular in Hamilton sport circles, Conick was rated highly in Hamilton hockey circles for years ago. He broke into senior company with Hamilton Tigers and when that team disbanded he turned out with Tigers as a catcher.

Not One Electrical Idea From Women in Seven Years

Therefore Dr. Robert W. Boyle Says They're Not 'Keen' on Science

RESEARCH RECORD

NOT ONE ELECTRIC . . . .

Ottawa, Apr. 24 (CP)—Women are not interested in science according to Dr. Robert W. Boyle, director of the Physics and Electrical Engineering at the National Research Council, who addressed the Ottawa Board of Trade last night.

"In the history of the achievements of scientific research he said science had received from women by evolving all kinds of household labor saving devices. Yet in more than seven years' work at the council of problems connected with electrical devices, treatment of food and refrigeration he had not received one idea or suggestion from a woman.

"I do not believe women, speaking generally, like science or are interested in it," he concluded.

If People of Ontario Prepared to Accept C. I. O. Domination

On the basis of reports that the C.I.O. planned to unionize 300 plants in half a dozen Ontario cities and towns, the Premier said last night: "If this is intended as a challenge by foreign agitators then I am prepared to accept it."

The reports said Hugh Thompson, C.I.O. organizer who headed the Oshawa General Motors strike, planned a "real drive" for unionization among the 300 industries.

New Baptist Church Is Prepared to Spend Last Day of Their 'Holiday' in Happy Manner

NO PICKET LINES

Movie Shows And Dance Halls Packed With Happy Throngs

Oshawa, Ont., April 24.—(CP)— Smiles replaced expressions of worry on the faces of Oshawa General Motors workers today as they spent the last day of their "holiday" in celebration of the signing of an agreement ending their 16-day strike.

Men, who have been away from their jobs for more than two weeks and who worried for a time whether they would have jobs to return to were happy in the knowledge they will start out Monday morning on their usual wage-earning day and under improved conditions.

Decision of the men to accept the agreement yesterday had a noticeable effect on Oshawa. Picket lines which had been the principal point of interest in the town were abandoned and strikers thronged the main streets.

Many went to a strikers' dance and other hundreds packed the movie houses. Activity was evident for the first time since the walkout even among the more staid workers, who celebrated by taking their wives down town for a bit of food.

FOOD RUSHED TO HUNGRY PEOPLE

Running Blockade Will Avert Capitulation to Insurgents

Bilbao, Spain, April 24 (CP) — The Basque government's supply food to its hungry defenders today with a mounting hope its supplies brought by British blockade runners would avert capitulation to Gen. Emilio Mola's insurgent offensive.

While the mountainous Durango sank, 30 miles southeast of the capital, echoed machine gun, and artillery fire, 400,000 inhabitants of Bilbao were jubilant, believing the determined will of the insurgents by land and sea had been broken.

The first supplies brought to the refugee-swollen capital yesterday by the steamers Stanbrook, Seven Seas and MacGregor past Gen. Francisco Franco's warships and land batteries and to troops fighting desperately to hold Durango, 30 miles, less than six miles from Durango.

The minister of provisions announced the end of starvation was improving and soon would be relative-by normal. Inflation and confidence other supply carriers would defy the insurgent navy.

The blockade runners came in just in time. Bread completely lacking in the diet of their arrivals. The supply was still scant today owing to the difficulty of preparing immediately the great quantities of flour required.

FARMER LOSES GRAIN THRU HOLE IN BAG

Birds flying along the highway between this city and Roslin yesterday afternoon may have feasted heartily and taken the thing for granted when they discovered ¼ bush trickle of seed oats several miles long, but Arthur Conmee, Rodlin farmer, learned a lesson. The oats trickled from the rear of his car as it bolted homeward bound.

Mr. Conmee purchased the bag of seed in a local feed store, placed it securely on the rear bumper of his machine and started home.

A projecting nub of the bumper wore through the bag gradually enlarging as distance and bumps increased.

On his arrival home, Arthur found he had just enough grain left to fill a gallon measure.

YOUNGSTER 'PAYS' DEARLY FOR HIS FUN

Wallace (Chuck) Klein, nine-year-old Front Street resident is at present receiving treatment for burns and abrasions suffered as the result of a "practical joke" on one of the high arches of the upper bridge early last evening. Wallace attempted the stale old trick brave with no more than the seat of his breeches between himself and the rough concrete during the fast ride down.

CONDITIONS FAVORABLE FOR CARP SPAWNING

STORE AWNINGS MUST HAVE 8 FT. CLEARANCE

Eight feet clearance from the walk is the standard height for awnings in front of stores and business houses in the downtown section of the city, it was announced today by City Engineer Gerry.

Search of the by-laws at city hall this morning by Mr. Gerry and Wilfred Holmes revealed no by-law covering the height of awnings.

"Several years ago by-law regulating the height of signs and this awning apply exactly the same, and we generally hold them up to the eight foot height," added the city engineer.

FEMININE DRIVERS

MAY GET INCREASE

A rarity in these days of modernism is the up and coming man, who has not yet learned to drive the family car, indicated R. V. Vermilyea, today, local issuer of motor licenses for the province. Through a routine final check up of records of the office, he finds that in Belleville at the present time, about one-third of the licenses are held by feminine drivers.

"But this number increases," declared the local issuer. "It used to be that the woman driver was almost a rarity. Nowadays they learn to drive the family car before they put on long skirts.

"They're good drivers, too, and fully acquainted with all the mechanical features and details," observed the issuer.

At the present time an average of fifteen licenses are being issued daily at the local office.

BOY GETS PAPERS MAN GETS CHANGE

A local newsboy today nearly missed supplying his eager reading public with their morning paper. Harry Burns, the newsboy in question, usually finds his bundle of Thirty-one Globe and Mail papers by the delivery truck at the intersection of Highland Ave. and Bunton Street, but this morning no sign of the bundle of papers greeted young Burns when he appeared on the scene. After some little investigation the newsboy notified the police of his predicament. P. C. Arnold immediately patrolled the city and on Yeoman Street apprehended one, Allen Assetine, 60 Benjamin St., who gathers waste paper and refuses for sale. Constable Arnold reported he found the papers secluded beneath some old rags and waste paper in the junk-cart operated by Assetine. Young Burns was given his papers and continued hi route to supply his customers with the news while Assetine was detained at the police station and will be charged with theft in Monday's court, police report.

Manahan has been a patient in the Belleville General Hospital since Sunday.

"NOT GUILTY" PLEA IS MADE

Typographical Error Made "Not Guilty" Plea of Douglas May Read as 'Guilty'

CASE WAS DISMISSED

A typographical error appeared in the account of a police court story appearing in this paper Friday, which was the result of this error in the pleadings of Douglas May, Belleville, who pleaded "not guilty" to the theft of a quantity of rum and gin, the article stating young May had pleaded guilty to the charge. May was subsequently dismissed by Magistrate Ponton, K.C., on a technicality, the court holding that the property allegedly taken by May was abandoned goods.

No Toll Makes Ferry At Glenora Popular

While the proverbial housewife will dash excitedly downtown when she hears something exciting is in progress, and there think she is getting associations, the ferry staff, sum-it remained for the conversion of the Glenora Ferry from a toll-collecting enterprise to a free thoroughfare to prove that more man still likes something he can get for nothing.

For, according to Captain McLeod, in charge of the ferry, traffic has increased just four hundred percent since the powers-that-be made the cross-channel trip a free one.

PLAY 'MARIGOLD' SCORES SUCCESS

Albert College Cast Pleases Large Audience With Production

"Marigold" a delightful four-act play in Scots was staged at Albert College on Friday evening by the College Literary Society, directed by Miss Jessie B Tutte. The play in particular appeal in Coronation year as in the background is the story of the visit of Her Majesty Queen Victoria to Edinburgh and her investiture of the Garter. This year of crowning the audience naturally was in fullest sympathy.

Love is Theme

It is a story of the broken love of Major Andrew Seiler, and his wife Madame Marizy, who, went on the stage while the major was away, and daughter to grow up believing her mother was dead. When the kirk is brought in in the first act as the pest is unfolded and the motivation set to work which, this year of crowning the audience naturally was in fullest sympathy.

The cast of student players was well chosen and provided Miss Tutte with an extra fine company.

Mary Lockhart had the part of Glenis, the servant girl. She rose and gave a very lively, clearly-defined conception of the role. Eunice Pyrtsen as Mrs. Pringle "on minister's wife, took one of the leading roles and handled the part with discretion. A delightful pair of characters, Kirsty "the gossips and neighbours", were brought in as the sisters, Miss Valencia and Miss Hattie Dunlop, the former was played by Betty Anderson and the latter by Mary Sethlinger. Both were lifelikeness to the characterization and acted as a comic relief to the more serious of the play. Jessie Bishop as Peter Gloag, the divinity student, gave more than was expected of her part in the role and Marigold, the play scirves." Madame Marizy, the ancestor of the play, was portrayed by Miss Stafford who showed much difficult of the part, that of the "

CRITICIZE ART FROM DOMINION BUT TAKE SOME

Canada's Pictures in South Africa Draw Candid Comment and its Experts Buy Five For Gallery.

CAPE TOWN—An exhibition of representative Canadian paintings created something of a furore here and roused two critics to drastic denunciation, but the situation seems to have culminated happily, with purchase of five of the controversial pictures by the National Gallery of South Africa.

The show was assembled by Arthur Lismer of Toronto, educational director of the Toronto Art Gallery and an artist himself. Sir William Clark, former British higher commissioner to Canada, formally opened the exhibition after which the critics made themselves heard.

Gwelo Goodman declared the pictures made him "think of the "scream of the preyer, the howl and dinner of machinery." Another critic, whose status is not indicated, stated the Canadian snow scenes made him ill.

The Cape Argus commented editorially on the criticisms and rejiterated a plea for less "odium pictorium" and "rather more politeness in dealing with the art of living painters who are esteemed in their own country."

First Important Sale.

The pictures purchaser from the exhibition by the National Gallery of South Africa represent the first important sale of Canadian art to a public gallery in a decade. The paintings, which will become part of the permanent collection of the national gallery at Cape Town, are: "Cranberry Lake", by Franklin Carmichael, Toronto; "Canadian River", a water color by Mrs. Peter Haworth, Toronto; "Winter in Quebec", by A. Y. Jackson, Toronto; "Little Haven, Nova Scotia", by Arthur Lismer, Toronto; and "The Long Barn", by George D. Pepper, formerly of Ottawa but now on the staff of the Ontario College of Art.

Learning of the criticism directed at the Canadian show, Mr. Lismer wrote a letter to The Argus, defending the pictures. Mr. Lismer's letter says in part:

"Canadian painting during the last ten years has undergone considerable change and development. The Canadian-born artist is endeavoring to interpret the significant and typical characteristics of the Canadian scene.

"The common accusation is those paintings are 'poster-like, lacking in subtlety. So is the Canadian landscape—it is strident and clearly defined in powerful rhythms of line and color. . . It is reasonable to suppose that to certain South African artists this quality should appear to be altogether too exaggerated at the expense of the painter-like qualities usually associated with the sensitive appreciation of what is well-painted panel picture should be.

Show Was Welcomed.

"The aim of this exhibition is to present a fair section as to the state of Canadian painting today. It is not perfect—no exhibition is, not even a one-man show by any one artist—but from the warm welcome it has received from other critics and thousands of the public in Johannesburg and other centres it has demonstrated its power to attract, interest and arouse that form of sympathy that is the beginning of understanding.

"There is no question of 'modernism'. There is a strong present-day vitality evident in all new lands, essaying the difficult path of national expression—a phase of development which all lands must go through. These paintings—at least those of them—have weathered such storms before, and no painting or canvas can harm any individual."

GOES TO JAIL ONLY ONE DAY

London Woman Never in Court Before in Life

London, Ont., April 24 (CP)—Off to jail today went a 56-year-old London woman, who received one of the shortest sentences ever imposed in police court. She was convicted of having beer in an illegal place after a police officer told of finding her walking along King Street with a glass of beer in her hand.

"I haven't a cent," pleaded the woman. "I was never in court in my life."

The minimum fine for illegal possession of beer is $10 and costs. Although there is no set rule, the alternative for those who can't pay the $10 fine is usually 10 days in jail.

But Magistrate Menzies didn't want to see the woman go to jail for 10 days so he changed the usual procedure.

"The fine," announced the court, "will be $10 and costs or one day in jail."

REVIVE OLD BAND OF HENRY'S TIME

LONDON — "The King's band", which had its origin in the Middle Ages but has not played at court since the days of Henry VIII, will be revived for the Coronation.

The band has been traced back to the fifteenth century. There were fifteen minstrels in the first royal band of which any record is given. Their chief instruments were "trompets, shalmes and pypes". Henry VIII enlarged the band to more than forty musicians, including sixteen trumpets, but in later years it was reduced to about twenty.

Some of its former members will be among the musicians forming the orchestra of 60 which will take part in the Coronation.

NEW INDUSTRY

that supply parts and fabrics to the Oshawa plant.

Premier Takes Stand

Premier Hepburn's stand in the Oshawa strike has been vindicated Mr. Hepburn, a few days after the negotiations formally ending the Oshawa strike were concluded, let his future position be known when he said :

"If the people of Ontario are prepared or accept the domination of Canadian industry by Lewis (John L. Lewis, C.I.O. chairman) and his paid hirelings, then I will retire to my farm in Elgin county where I can forget responsibilities so far as public life is concerned.

"But I do not believe the people of Ontario will subject themselves to the domination of this world-de dictatorship under the direction of Lewis."

Meanwhile in his announced desire to prevent future strikes, Mr. Hepburn hurried along the setup of his industry and labor board, the purpose would be to step in with negotiations before a dispute could reach the strike point.

The Premier said he wanted W. H. Moore, member of parliament for Ontario constituency, "the outstanding economist in the Dominion of Canada," for the board chairman. The Premier expects Mr. Moore's reply to his invitation soon.

Recognized Indirectly Claim

Statements in Washington by Thompson and Homer Martin, President of the United Automobile Workers of America, of which the Oshawa unit is a local, indicated they considered the C.I.O. had been recognized in the Oshawa settlement, if only indirectly.

To this opinion Premier Hepburn replied that the employers' representatives declared "in a signed statement" they had nothing to do with the C.I.O and acted only for General Motors workers.

Thompson and Martin, whom he termed "absentee directors" of the General Motors office, failed to judge correctly and understand "the intelligence of the Canadian people", he declared.

Formal signing of the agreement ending the Oshawa lockup came yesterday in the premier's office. It is concurrent with the agreement between General Motors in the United States and the U.A.W.A. that the contract was signed in Detroit and will operate till Aug. 11 after which it may be modified or terminated if either party wishes.

The document drawn up in the premier's office was signed by General Motors officials and representatives of the employees who signed "on behalf of themselves and their successors in office representing the employees of the company who are members of the local union."

H. J. Carmichael, vice-president and general manager, and J. B. Highfield, plant manager, signed for the company. C. H. Millard, who is president of Oshawa Local 222 of the U.A.W.A; George H. Day, chairman of the negotiating committee and E. R. Bathe, committee member, signed for the workers

Parties Congratulated.

Both parties to the dispute expressed satisfaction when negotiations were completed. Premier Hepburn thanked the strikers and citizens of Oshawa for their "splendid co-operation" and said "the true Canadian spirit asserted itself in the final analysis."

With the return of prosperity, said Mr. Hepburn, his government would aid in bringing to labor in an orderly and constructive way a greater share of increasing profits of industry.

Mr. Carmichael declared his company had never opposed organization by its employees and is always willing to negotiate with representatives of any group.

Main points of the settlement provide: 44-hour week made up of four nine-hour days and an eight-hour day on Friday; wages of 55 cents an hour or less increased seven cents; more than 55 cents, increased five cents; (present scale ranges from 39 to 94 cents); no discrimination by either side for past or future trade union activity; no intimidation of employees by either side; five-minute rest periods twice a day; system of handling grievances and a detailed arrangement to govern seniority.

PREPARE

program today was a triumphant parade in honor of Hugh Thompson, who was to arrive in Oshawa from Washington. The organizer for the committee for industrial organization called the strike in Oshawa and has been a principal figure in its continuance.

Told To Stay Out Claim

Thompson in Oshawa Wednesday, reportedly under an agreement to stay out of Canada until a settlement was reached in Oshawa between strikers' representatives and company officials with Premier Hepburn presiding.

The workers planned to parade to the station when Thompson's train arrived to honor the tall, sandhaired organizer of the C.I.O. and do for them.

Satisfaction of the workers in the settlement terms was reflected in their vote of 2,205 to 36 in favor of accepting it. After the vote was taken in the armories yesterday and the result announced talk among the strikers was concerned mostly with the increases in pay and the shorter hours.

They joked with each other about what they would do with the extra day when the five-day week came into operation and spoke lightly of how wealthy they would be under the new wage terms if only the plant would operate the year round.

R. H. McLaughlin, president of General Motors of Canada and a well known figure in horse racing circles, seemed as happy about the outcome as the strikers.

R. H. McLaughlin Pleased.

He said he was "glad" his "boys and girls" had decided to return to work and spoke of his "grievous disappointment" when he learned of the strike in Bermuda. He returned to Oshawa just as the dispute was ended.

"They must have been pounded on the noon," he said. "We have tried always to be generous in our relations with our employees."

A secondary matter that compelled the attention of some of the workers today was the re-opening of the beer parlors and the liquor store. Mayor Alex Hall said yesterday he would ask the authorities to reopen them as soon as possible. They were closed on union request when the strike opened.

During the strike thirsty workers had been forced to drive to Whitby, four miles away, for their ale. But it was surprising how few of them took the trouble. The Whitby Hotel reported a slight increase in business but there was no great rush to the nearest refreshment station.

Another indication of the order of the strikers kept all through the strike was the report of Police Chief Owen Friend. There was not a single arrest during the sixteen days. A transient was placed under technical arrest when he requested it but there was not a police court case arising from the strike.

The "crime-free" record was the longest in the municipality's history, the chief said.

... IS BUILT INTO EVERY FEATURE!

Distinctive appearance—new convenience features

The Ford V-8 for 1937 is a completely modern car — from bumper to bumper! The modern tilt-type hood lifts at the front and is hinged at the back. Swift streamlines flow back from the distinctive front end, with headlamps recessed in the fender aprons. New luxury in interiors and appointments — newly designed. The starter button is now on instrument panel; parking brake lever is below it, within easy reach.

Power to go—more economy to go farther

The new Ford V-8 with its smooth power and famous Ford pick-up gives even more brilliant performance and unusually low gasoline consumption. Owners report it takes you farther between gas pumps than any other Ford car they have driven. Refinements of carburetion, an improved exhaust system, new self-lubricating water pumps in cylinder banks, new fan location and improved ignition unit contribute to the Ford V-8 engine's increased efficiency.

Increased comfort—more quiet—extra luggage room

Comfort of the Ford Centre-Poise Ride has been improved. Long-tapering spring leaves with new interleaf pressure lubrication make spring action smooth and silent. The compact V-8 engine requires less space under the hood, permitting more room in the body. New methods of engine and body mounting, improvements in rear axle and drive shaft—all contribute to a new standard of quiet. Larger luggage compartment is concealed within body lines.

"Safety of steel from pedal to wheel"—Easy-Action Safety Brakes

You get dependability and feather-light pedal action with the new Easy-Action Safety Brakes. Positive and direct — they give "the safety of steel from pedal to wheel"—cable and conduit control type, they are self-energizing — car momentum helps apply the brakes. These brakes are matched in safety by the all-steel body — top, sides, floor and frame — and Safety Glass throughout at no extra charge. See your Ford dealer about a trial ride.

$30 A MONTH, with reasonable down-payment, buys any new Ford V-8 Car under T.F.C. National Finance Plan.

PATRON SAINT'S DAY

There is something so typical of the English people in the legends clustering about the patron Saint George, whose day was celebrated yesterday, and about the English and British manner of celebration of the day. A sense of solidarity and strength with simplicity is felt as one mentions the name English or the name Shakespeare or the name St. George. These names are associated with the 23rd of April and other names could be given which convey the same impression.

It must be remembered too that April 23rd was the day of the death of Shakespeare. Those who have read the works of this great man, know that while much of his life is not intimately known, yet there is enough revealed to show that he was one who did not seek personal acclaim. His retirement from active theatrical enterprise for some years before his death at the comparatively early age of 52 years with his return to the small town of Stratford, on the Avon, his birthplace, is a symbol of the great poet-thinker-playwright's quality of mind. His last years were spent as far as we know in the little town which gave him to the world. There he lived the quiet life. In that life there is something so healing, so soul-enriching, so British or so English in spirit. That spirit is ever manifest among Britain's great. Whether they be merchantmen or kings, or laborers or statesmen or great industrial leaders there is that equanimity, that sense of strength and uprightness which all admire and which is one of the contributions of this people to the world spirit, world growth, world brotherhood.

The English people were fortunate, choosing St. George. Though there is a multitude of stories gathering about this figure whether he be mythical or a real person in his age, the story of the slaying of the dragon is best known. This legend appears in many a saga of different races and in many different forms and somehow all seem to have been gathered up and combined in the British conception of St. George that it is no wonder that this legend has moulded British ideals of chivalry—warfare against wrong. This again is so satisfying a thought that the Englishman or Britisher gives the impression of strength and conviction.

It brings to mind the words of Tennyson regarding the gallant knight, Sir Galahad, "His strength is as the strength of ten because his heart is pure."

To Canadians the day is rich in memory as some twenty years ago Canadian troops stood in a place of danger and did not fail at Langemarck and at St. Julien. To the people April 23rd is treasured as they think of that spot where Canadians like gallant knights of old and like St. George fought for right and did not flinch. Therefore those Belgian scenes still remain and will remain forever to Canadians, to paraphrase the words of Rupert Brooke, "a spot forever Canada." Surely in this Canadians have added to the soul wealth of the race so linked with the past of noble England, for it was the same chivalry, the like heroism as of the Englishmen and other Britons of old who made the race.

CORONATION SOUVENIR PROGRAM

A copy of the official souvenir programme for the Coronation of Their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth reached this office from London, England. This programme is prepared and sold by King George's Jubilee Trust which was authorized to issue the official programme of the silver jubilee of his late Majesty King George Fifth. The coronation program has been prepared in like manner. It contains a foreward by His Royal Highness, the Duke of Gloucester, brother of King George VI.

From the cover with the Royal Coat-of-Arms in color, to the last page with a geneological history showing the descent of the Crown this is a work of art and should be in the hands of every British subject. That will have the widest possible distribution throughout the Empire, is the Duke of Gloucester's confident hope.

The work contains a prayer for the King's Reign by the Poet Laureate, John Mosefield, photographs of Their Majesties, and the two royal princesses, of Her Majesty Queen Mary, an article by the late lamented John Drinkwater who died a few weeks ago after completing his duties in connection with preparations for the coronation, an intimate study of the life of His Majesty and his activities, an illustrated outline of the coronation procession, a street map of the route of the cavalcade on May 12th, an illustrated article on the Coronation ceremony by the Garter Principal King of Arms and the Coronation service with an introduction by the Archbishop of Canterbury.

NATIONAL ANTHEM FOR THE CORONATION

To be sung following the first verse of "God Save the King."

God bless our Sovereign Lord,
As we with one accord
Our tribute bring;
Almighty King of Kings,
'Neath Thy protecting wings,
Guard while the Nation sings
"God save the King."

Our Gracious Queen, may she Loved by her people be,
God save the Queen;
With loyal hearts aflame,
Let us with glad acclaim,
Sing praises to her name,
God bless our Queen.

This Coronation year,
May we with hearts sincere,
The Empire o'er,
Sing praise to God above,
And to our Sovereign prove
Strong in the people's love,
Their Throne secure.

—George Allen Kingston,
Toronto, Canada.

THE ABOVE VERSES ARE SUGGESTED, AS A "NATIONAL ANTHEM FOR THE CORONATION", written by George Allen Kingston, of Toronto, well known in Belleville. He has also written another poem entitled "Coronation Hymn, 1937". It is suggested that these patriotic hymns be sung in connection with Coronation Day ceremonies.

Of course seeing there are several million people in an' about Lil Ole New York, Brooklyn and environs, someone is bound to get kilt occasionally. BASEBALL HISTORY IS AGAIN BEING MADE IN THE BIG LEAGUES. New faces come into focus and get the headlines. Babe Ruth, last of the big veterans of baseball fades out of the picture and a young feller from Iowa, Bob Feller, comes into the picture pitching for Cleveland and fanning even the best batters of the New York Giants. Then there are Dee-Maggios from the Pacific Coast and other new stars crowding the Pepper Martins and other baseball celebrities into the background. However, good old Roger Hornsby, on the other side of forty, cracked out a home run the other day which travelled over 400 feet and broke all records for the park where it happened. Roger also contributed two singles in the same game to ensure victory for his team. Biggest thing about professional baseball for some time, has resigned his position to enter the employ of the Dominion Lumber Company at Grand Valee. His associates in the office received a farewell party with a handsome travelling case and an address was read expressing regret at his departure.

At a meeting last night at the Y. M. C. A. a city football league was formed with the following officers: Hon. President, H.Coby; President, J. S. Hess; Vice President, S. Wheeler; Secretary, J. O. Conger. The following teams were represented at the meeting: Argyl Rangers, Tribes of Holloway Street, High School, D. and D. Rudduck, and Marsh and Henthorne.

OTTAWA PARADE.

Back Stage in the Dominion Capital with

WILFRID EGGLESTON

For some reason so far unfathomed by this Column, Calgary has been a notorious home of nicknames starting with "Paddy" Nolan and "Bob" Edwards and, more recently, Leonard W. Brockington, who now resides in Winnipeg, but who lived in the Porcupine city for several years. (If I wanted to be facetious, I could add that R. B. Bennett and William Aberhart lived for many years there also). Parliamentarians who know "Paddy" Nolan and "Bob" Edwards still talk about them and relate the many reminiscible of their anecdotes. Chatting with a couple of Alberta Senators the other day, I heard among others, these reminiscences:

"Bob" Edwards was having breakfast one day with L. W. Brockington, in a well-known Calgary cafe. They had cereal, among other things. Toward the end of the meal Edwards impressively called the waiter over to him.

"I'd like to see the manager," he said.

The waiter bowed, and returned a moment later with that worthy.

"You are the manager?" Yes? I want to congratulate you, sir, on the superb work of one of your employees."

The manager, who had been apprehensive of a row, now perked up and threw out his chest.

"Yes," said Edwards, "I have travelled pretty well around the world, but I have yet to see the beat of this cereal for efficiency and thoroughness."

"And who might you be referring to?" finally asked the manager.

"I mean the son of a blankety-blank who makes the coffee," retorted the editor of the Calgary "Eye-Opener."

O—O—O

"Paddy" Nolan ran for parliament in the old territorial days. He had many opponents. One of them owned a brewery, and the other was the manager of a liquor store. Paddy himself was not averse to a bottle.

On one occasion he is said to have addressed a crowd of voters thus:

"One of my opponents represents the liquor manufacturing interests. Another represents the retail end... He stopped impressively. "Gentlemen, I represent the consumer, and I'm asking one of them votes for me. I'll win at a canter."

"Paddy" was, however, badly trimmed on election day.

Gone are the days when all a member of parliament needed was a strong voice and a glad hand (if there were such). The present-day member is becoming cramped in abstruse mathematics and involved economics.

I make those observations with the farm implements committee in mind. In order to be a useful member of such a committee, understand all the evidence, contribute to the discussion, and help draw up a constructive report, that is about all the background you would need.

Thorough training as a cost accountant, some years experience as a lawyer, a few years as an agent, handling farm implements on a prairie town, some little while on the farm actually operating such, a term or two as an auditor, and the B. Com. degree from some recognized university, Extensive knowledge of the Customs Tariff. A personal acquaintance, as executive of a big manufacturing concern, with costs and management wouldn't be a bad addition. Further, if you could manage it.

What is the ordinary garden variety of member to do when he runs up against such a proposition as that? Why, he does the only thing he said: that if you pooled the capacities of all the committee, you would find that en masse, they could fill the bill of the above requirements. On top of that, you wouldn't find any one person such as a paragon of virtue as described.

O—O—O

This being the fourteenth anniversary year of the Rebellion in Upper and Lower Canada, that episode in Canadian history is being brought to the fore.

There is interesting link between the Senate and one of the more romantic, though little known episodes of that time.

Senator Lorne Webster's children are the great grandchildren of their mother's aide, a woman whose maiden name was Elizabeth Baby. Elizabeth Barnett deserves to rank with Laura Secord as one who risked her life to warn her friends of impending danger.

Elizabeth Barnett, a native of New York state, was a youthful bride of the Secretary of Quebec at the time when the famous "Bill of Abjuration," or "Trials of the Thousand Islands" was organizing a raid on Kingston. Co-operating with the revolutionaries gathered in New York State, the audacious Johnson planned a swift move across the frozen river, the capture of Kingston, and with it the control of Upper Canada.

On a brief school vacation back among her relatives in New York State, Elizabeth Barnett learned of the proposed raid on Canada—and Kingston. Alarmed at the thought that her staunch Canadian friends were in danger, she resolved to drive back in a cutter across the ice as rapidly as possible and warn the community. Tradition says that the weather was intensely cold, and that she was badly frozen when she reached Gananoque. The warning was given, Kingston was immediately told, the militia were called up, Johnson's base on the St. Lawrence was attacked and the proposed raid abjured in the bud.

It appears that Miss Barnett's warning received no laudatory recognition from the authorities. But among the militiamen who rallied that day was a handsome young fellow named Warren Fairman. Elizabeth Barnett saw him and extended a friend to introduce them. Shortly afterwards they were married. The heroine herself lived until 1906; three of their eleven children are still living. One of her grandchildren is Mrs. Lorne Webster.

Trenchermen of Yesterday

If those honored with an invitation to the Coronation banquet next month had to face the gargantuan feasts prepared in former days somewhat in the fashion English cooks and management wouldn't be a bad addition. Further, if you could manage it.

What is the ordinary garden variety of member to do when he runs up against such a proposition as that? Why, he does the only thing he said: that if you pooled the capacities of all the committee, you would find that en masse, they could fill the bill of the above requirements. 23 TEASHOPS ALONG ROUTE

J. Lyons And Company Engaged in Coronation Day Problems

A special staff of organizing experts is engaged in solving the Coronation Day problems of J. Lyons and Co. Ltd., the largest caterers on the route of the Procession.

Their plans will cover the provision of food for thousands of people in their 23 teashops along the route.

Owing to the difficulty of conveying supplies to the teashops during the day, special alternative tariffs will have to be provided, so that whatever the weather may be, the appropriate quota teashop will be able to meet the demand.

With this in view each teashop will have supplies of hundreds of tins of coffee in special skylight containers, and thousands of gallons of milk and bottled lemonade.

Literally hundreds of thousands of bread rolls, steak puddings, fruit pies, etc., will be provided to sustain hungry sightseers." An enormous call for sandwiches, to be bought and taken away, is anticipated.

Special individuals have been selected from the total teashop staff of 11,000 to ensure rapid, efficient service, Rack Nippy and Sally will be provided with plans showing her which bus or train route to take, and the easiest way in which to reach the teashop.

The staffs will arrive at the teashops at 6 a.m. They will be ready for short periods, with rest time in-between. Special facilities will be provided for them to see the procession.

Supervisors will be provided with sleeping accommodation at headquarters. When the day staff goes off duty, a crowd of expert cleaners will carry on to prepare the premises for the next day.

All the four Lyons' Corner Houses are near the route, and will remain open all night. Preparations are being made to serve a record number of customers.

Lyons have also undertaken the "catering" of 6,000 troops at Olympia.

Lyons' teashops near railway terminal such as King's Cross, will open early on May 12 for the convenience of provincial visitors to London.

"I have gained 10 lbs of Pep and Health!"

SOME months ago, Miss Irene [illegible] was wishing that she could find some way of increasing her weight to normal and improving her health. Her happy letter tells how she did this:

"I started to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a few months ago. I am now taking my fifth package and during this time I have gained 10 pounds of pep and health."

Another young woman, Miss Ena [illegible] was worried about her failing health and loss of weight. But after taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills she writes:

"About eight months ago I was feeling half sick. Tired all the time. No pep. Was constantly losing weight. Had my blood tested and was told I was anaemic. So I started to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It was the turning point for me. I got right. I have continued the treatment and I am now feeling fit as a fiddle. I am a new girl."

There are hundreds of other letters like these which testify to the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Take them yourself to build up your health, give you more vitality and help you gain solid flesh if you are under normal weight. Price 50c.

Take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills until you feel better, and then if you don't feel better, stop taking them and say so. They will be returned to you.

THE Royal Road TO THE CORONATION

His Majesty at the races and on the pole field; the pole match was between Templeton and Hillmorton

Just as many an upper class-class Englishman regards racing and horses as part of his recreational life, so does the present King, who, though no sporting page or sporting supplement, will ever carry pictures of him riding in a point-to-point race or topping the timber in a steeplechase, inherits an interest in good horses from his father. Shortly after he ascended the throne it was indicated that the stables which Lord Derby had taken over following the death of George V, would again receive the attention of the crown. Last fall's racing season saw racing history outdrawn by the royal colors.

But his majesty is also a man who enjoys the feel of a good horse under him, and though the majority of his outings on horseback are confined to gallops along the bridle path, we also him here at a much more strenuous exercise. It takes nerve and hands and courage as well as good horsemanship to swing a pole mallet aboard one of the swift ponies trained to the sport, and indicative of the King's enjoyment and ability in the saddle is this picture of him at the hard-riding game.

At the left he is shown, with the Duke of Gloucester in the background, as they attended the Ascot racing meet together. King George V was usually to be found in the royal box at the Derby, or at Aintree where the Grand National was being run, and if 'early-indications are correct his son will not be the one to neglect these gatherings, which have become in the minds of hundreds of thousands of Englishmen, national institutions.

Little Benny's Note Book

Saturday afternoon me and my friend Archie and Puds Skinkins was sitting on my front steps tawking and arguing, and all of a sudden it stopped looking like rain and started to rain for real, Puds saying, G, we could go in my house and play darts with my new game of darts, only I'm not aloud to play it in the house on account of my mother claiming things are liable to happen to the furniture, and she's partly rite because some have already.

Well hay, nobody's home in my house, so we can play here, I said. You run home and get your game of darts and hurry up back and me and Artie will go in the house and get some cookies.

With we did, and I had a idea, saying, Hay, Artie, I tell you what, when Puds rings the bell with his darts he's dont go and open the door and we'll leave him ring and ring and then we'll suddenly yell out the window at him and sak him why he's standing there in the rain without ringing the bell.

And pritty soon the doorbell rang and me and Artie just stood there in the front hall giggling and the bell rang about 10 times more and then started to ring without stopping as if Puds had stuck a pin in it or something, and I said, Hay hell get that bell out of order and I'll get back, good nite.

And I purry up opened the front door and who was out there but pop looking wet as the dickins and mad as the docce, and I said, O, where's your key, pop?

Where's your manners, where's your front manners, the asties you were born with? pop said, and said, Well jiminy crickits, pop, I didn't know it was you. —

You knew the doorbell was ringing, didn't you for it wasn't pop said, and I said, Sir, yes sir, but I mean I thawt it was somebody else.

Probably being a bum saser on account of making pop even madder, and he made Artie borrow a dime from me to go home and I had to go up in my room and wait for mother to come home and Puds called up on the telefone to say I wasn't aloud to play again and pop told him he wasn't intetsted.

letter from Mr. Wilson who read reminding the members of the coaching classes in Stirling. Delegates were appointed to attend the District Annual meeting early in June, which is the absence of Mrs. S. Dies, convener of "Legislation", Mrs. Arnold Mitchell capably took charge and read a very helpful paper on Legislation prepared by Mrs. Dies explaining how a legislation means making laws to govern the affairs of citizens. Up to the year 1867 instead of a Dominion each province was making its own laws independent of one another. By the Act of Union in 1841 Quebec and Ontario were united as Canada — Upper and Lower, and so after much difficulty and many years of hard struggling with intervening wars and other calamities we have this beautiful Canada that stands for all that is pure and true and holy.

Mrs. Clinton McDonald who attended the classes at Melrose gave a splendid report of the "Meeting" telling how she would take so much care of the subjects, and in closing she gave some recipes on washing fluids and how to take them.

Community singing was a change of subject and heartily indulged in for a time. An instrumental solo by one of the visitors present was much enjoyed.

The Roll Call—A legal saying from a magazine which was the answer as well was responded to, and some valuable information received. The singing of "God Save the King" and grace brought to a close an afternoon of interest. Mrs. Aikins and her conveners served a dainty lunch and all enjoyed a sociable hour before leaving, voting Mrs. Aikins an ideal hostess.

RED CROSS WORK IN HIGH REGARD STATES SPEAKER

Dr. W. S. Caldwell, Toronto, Tells of Outpost Work in Ontario

DRIVE UNDERWAY

Hope Expressed Local Branch May Soon Have Outpost Hospital

The awakening of the forces of civilization to the greater acts of courage in peacetime as epitomized in the realization of devotion of the public to the great major catastrophes which occurred during the past two years; the importance of the work of the Red Cross, and its far-reaching effects in the hinterlands of the Canadian north country and a graphic detailed account of the many and varied activities of Red Cross workers throughout the farflung corners of the Dominion constituted a splendid address given in the auditorium of the Y.M.C.A. last night by Dr. W. S. Caldwell, of Toronto, Assistant Director of the Ontario Division of the Red Cross Society, in charge of the Outpost Hospital Service of the division, before a well-attended meeting of the campaign canvassers at a pre-campaign dinner held on the eve of the annual Red Cross drive for funds, which starts on Monday next and continues all through the week.

"There is no doubt that the work of the Red Cross is held in high regard in all communities," stated Dr. Caldwell," for in its ranks you will find the leading citizens of each and every community."

Proof of the fact that people are becoming cognizant of, and more interested in the humanitarian phase of war, was evidenced in the reception of the public to the three major calamities which occurred during the past two years.

Extent of Work

Especially significant the speaker pointed out was the fact that practically without a great amount of solicitation, the public within the space of a short time donated the sum of $80,000 to the gallant rescue in the Moose River disaster of a year ago. With less dramatic appeal was the great western drought where 250,000 people suffered for lack of adequate foodstuffs and supplies. $350,000 was sent to them from a sympathetic public. Thirdly, the great flood which took an unknown toll of life and property in the United States last year. Millions of dollars worth of damage was done, but the public again rose to the occasion. Doctors, nurses, food supplies were rushed to the stricken areas. Money was forthcoming to relieve distress. These incidents," Dr. Caldwell said, "typify the spirit which is motivating the Red Cross activities throughout the country today."

Describing conditions and the activities of the Red Cross in the northern districts of the province, the speaker stated that "these people living in these isolated areas are mostly of pioneer stock. They are free and easy, generous and thrifty and are deserving of anything the outside world can do for them. In these sparsely populated districts there are 20 different projects in operation by the Red Cross. Fourteen of them are outpost hospitals 25 miles from the nearest medical man. In addition to this we have a well equipped hospital car which is always available for any emergency. At times it is used to make surveys for the location of outpost hospitals, but it is always in readiness for any emergency which may arise in any part of Ontario.

"No matter where you go," continued the speaker, "you will always find that human impulse to help those in need. During the first year ago reached proportions which placed it beyond control you would have to go to the original sources of the Red Cross of Canada and the Red Cross.

"Besides the hospital car, we also maintain a Dental Service. This travels through the north country serving people where dental services are not available.

Typical Case Quoted

"A typical north country case was brought to light the other day," said Dr. Caldwell. "A steamer living in the village of Killarney on the isolated spot at the eastern end of Manitoulin Island, boasting only seven, many of whom have never seen an automobile or a train, was brought in unconscious as the result of a severe accident. He was taken by canoe across the ice to another place, then another 35 miles to Minnedosaw where one of the outpost hospitals is located. Here he developed pneumonia, then empyemia. He was nursed back to health, and became attached to the hospital that he did not want to leave.

"The significant thing," said the speaker, "is the fact that this man, who was not accustomed to anything really worth while when he was leaving the hospital, 7 an not to say 8 years, for what you have done for me, but I hereby make a resolution that the rest of my life will be spent doing some for other people."

"We are not only treating patients in these hospitals, but 50 per cent of those admitted have to undergo minor or major operations".

In a splendid eulogy to those of ten unsung heroines of the north, the Red Cross nurses, Dr. Caldwell stated that their gallantry and devotion to service under trying conditions. "Most of them are graduates," he said, "They are fine splendid examples of Canadian womanhood, and I feel that there should be a tribute paid to the, but because they are isolated with their wonderful missionary spirit, which characterizes the Red Cross nurse. They are often forced to adopt the most primitive of conveyances. They reach their destination by canoe, by dog team and by water, carrying their message of good health and service to their patients in the north. They go in homes. They have to date organized over 400 clinics, and have treated over 10,000 children of the north."

Work Only Touched

"This outpost hospital work has only been touched," he said, "way here in your own backyard, in a place called Denbigh 65 miley from your city they have very little public health resources. Belleville is nearest hospitalization centre, and in the winter things become very difficult for the people there. No doubt some day they would like to have an outpost hospital. And they are not alone in thinking that. Every day we get letters from places in various parts of the province asking for one of these hospitals."

Dr. Caldwell, in conclusion complimented the Belleville branch of the society on the fine work done during the past year, "It is evident from your report," he said, "that the Red Cross is carrying out here one of its great organizations, to cement the forces of good, and bring the people on the common ground of helpfulness to others."

"May 13th, is not only the Coronation of their Majesties the King and Queen, but it is also the birthday of that great lady, Florence Nightingale, the originator of the Red Cross. If you carry out the spirit of service which she gave to the world then you will not only make a grand success of this campaign but go on to greater accomplishments during the coming year."

Mr. I. G. Hefkey, chairman of the General Campaign Committee, who presided, at the banquet, and Miss Hurley, Secretary of the Committee, voiced the appreciation of the gathering to the guest speaker, Mr. Hefkey expressing the hope, that this branch would soon be in a position to open an outpost hospital.

Banquet Complimentary

The banquet which was a complimentary gesture on the part of the advertising branch of, the Canadian Red Cross Society to the campaign workers on the eve of the campaign to collect the objective of $1,000, showed a marked enthusiasm on the part of committeemen and workers.

Under the auspices of the members of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. was made even more attractive with its pretty coronation setting. Golden replicas of the Royal crown on pedestals covered with red and blue of the coronation colors gave an added attraction to the well set tables. Seated at the head table with the guest of honor were Mrs. Stuart Laxier, who introduced the guest speaker; Miss Ann Hoskin, Campaign Secretary; Mr. J. W. Smith, Campaign Treasurer; Mr. I. G. Hefkey, Chairman; Charles A. Cameron, M.P.; and N. R. Vinton of Toronto, Field Secretary of the Red Cross Division.

Mayor R. D. Arnott sent his regrets at his inability to be present through pressure of business.

The toast to the king was drunk immediately after the grace by Russell Wotten at the piano brought forth some lusty voices, Chairman Hefkey in a brief speech thanked the canvassers for their splendid work in the past, saying that it was not only a credit to the group but to Belleville.

Mr. Charles Cameron, M.P., humorously described his experiences at home with Mrs. Cameron and Red Cross activities. He conveyed to the gathering the best wishes of Russell Watts, a former president of the local branch, now living in New Brunswick, and who now holds an enviable position in that province with the Red Cross. "Russell attributes his success." Mr. Cameron stated, "to former training received in Belleville."

"I can see nothing but success for this campaign," he concluded "when I see such a splendid number of workers, full of pep and vim, and you go over the top."

Campaign Outlined.

Mr. N. R. Vinton gave a detailed description of the Red Cross campaign to be followed by canvassers. He answered questions relating to problems which may arise. Mr. Inslah, campaign treasurer, stated that the objective of $1,000 was necessary funds had come through the mails as last year, prospects for reaching the objective of $1,000 looked exceedingly bright. A number of subscribers had raised their contributions voluntarily, while some new ones had come in.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Mrs. Stuart Laxier, chairman of the women workers, presented the canvassers present with the necessary documents, cards, etc., in connection for the opening of the campaign which gets under way on Monday morning.

Following are some of the men and women workers who will canvass the city next week: Messrs. I. G. Hefkey, R. J. Clarke, B. G. Slater, Charles Dolan and Joseph Shorts; and Mrs. A. R. B. C. Seeks Aid to Control Doukhobors

Victoria, April 24 (CP)—The British Columbia government seeks aid of Federal authorities in dealing with 12,000 Doukhobors living according to their religious concepts in communities throughout the interior of the province.

Premier T. D. Pattullo announced yesterday the Dominion would send a representative to Victoria to discuss the Doukhobor problem with provincial officials and at the same time charged Peter Verigin, the Younger, spiritual head of the Russian religious sect, with failure to observe and attempts to bring them into disrepute.

The premier who conferred last week with the Russian sect leader about a wave of incendiarism which had swept the communities, said he would call upon Verigin to "declare this his intentions that his whole desire is to be helpful."

Verigin was completed in Castlegar, B.C., yesterday on charges of vagrancy and driving to the common danger and was sentenced by stipendiary Magistrate R. A. Pringle to three months hard labor and fines totalling $75.15.

COOKING EXPERT LIKES HER WORK

Miss Baycroft Demonstrator at C.D.S. Tells of Some of Experiences

What does the professional cooking expert do when she goes to her kitchen to cook in front of an assembled, expectant audience?

Miss Ruth Baycroft, B.A., of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto, is the attractive lady in charge of cookery, has found these answers out through thoroughly practical demonstrating throughout Ontario.

"I've never had a cake go "flat" before any of my audiences for the past eight years," she told the Intelligencer demonstrations," countered Miss Baycroft with an engaging smile, "but I've had to throw away a wooden table, "but there's always a chance, and I like to be ready. Then I'd do as some of them have done before me—point a moral to the occasion of such a shocking my work. That is, I'd tell them dinner served by the cook was not that area the way not to make a cake.

Eight Years in Institute Work

For eight years Miss Baycroft has been Institute Branch Director of the Department of Agriculture, Toronto, and has specialized in classes, to women throughout the Province. Previous to that she was a member of the staff of the Montreal General Hospital, specializing in dietics.

"Men," confirms Miss Baycroft, "are as keen cooking cookies as the ladies, in many of them more so. Oh yes, we do give them a good many hints, but they are very appreciative good cooks.

Miss Baycroft likes her work.

"What makes it so interesting is the different questions that are asked," she explained enthusiastically. "It keeps a good demonstrator on the toes keeping up with them. "The funniest recipe? Well, a lot of Belleville people have seemed to be interested in cooking cookies in a can, or one of the main ingredients in the recipe is rather funny. That is they did until they tasted it. I couldn't make it fast enough. Then there's the question of substituting is to take your class, your audience for granted, because that's them watch you closely. Try to get them feeling responsible for the success or failure of whatever it is you're making. Then you'll have no trouble."

Plain Cooking Still Favored

The market differences exists in the appetites of the fancies of residents either in the eastern or the western parts of the province. All the same old standbys are used and called for, favorites used by their grandmothers.

Belleville men appear to be a little shy, indicated Miss Baycroft. So far her male audience in the city has been small, although Belleville women have taken advantage of the twice-daily demonstrations.

Miss Baycroft uses one of the latest types of electric stoves. This she also declares to be the most dependable and never failing. Up to the minute stoves, as she demonstrated, turning switches and watching a little red light appear can be left cooking on the timer themselves with the certainty that nothing will be burned or spoiled due to variation of even temperatures. With the new stoves there is automatically controlled. The model being used in the Canadian Department Stores until Saturday is an Acme, equipped with nine new features all created for the specific purpose of doing a better job better and is made by the Guelph Stove Company, Ltd., and sold through the Canadian Department Stores.

IMPROVEMENT PLAN FOR HOMES UNDERTAKEN

Belleville Committee is Organized to Carry on Scheme Here

DETAILS GIVEN

Belleville's committee on the Home Improvement plan, headed by Mr. J. O. Herity, secretary and manager of the Chamber of Commerce, got away to a good start at the organization meeting held in the Chamber rooms on Thursday last evening, at which the preliminary organization details of the past few days spent in organization, showed results. Most of the representatives of the various bodies and industries and trade groups were present and short addresses were delivered by the chairman and by Mr. F. E. Jones, district representative of the Ontario Advisory Committee of the Home Improvement Plan. In the absence of Mayor Bush the Home Improvement Plan is quite definitely under way, said Mr. Herity.

Tonight at 10.30 to 10.45 o'clock Mr. J. B. Purvis, chairman of the National Employment Commission of Canada, will deliver an address over a coast-to-coast hookup of Canadian stations, including CKOC, in explanation of the aims of the Home Improvement Plan which has been sponsored by the commission.

The local committee spent some time in discussing various phases of the work, such as furthering the publicity of the plan, and also means as motion pictures, showing the benefit of improvement to homes and by a show-window and other schemes. The members were very optimistic as a result of the meeting and encouraged by the outlook for impressive results in Belleville.

Plan Is Explained

Mr. J. O. Herity, chairman of the local committee, explained that the National Housing Act was put into force but the rebates were not to be paid, and that could not be secured from the Income Commissioner for all the loans on houses those interested in the scheme would like to build, that a house would be built and furnished last year the minimum value of the contemplated house. If the loan was sought had to be $4,000, the 20% rebate applies. The committee is willing to take loans on $3,500 houses. Numbers of those who would like to build could afford this outlay on a home, it was pointed out.

The Home Improvement Plan is entirely distinct, Mr. Herity said and the two are entirely different sort of undertaking. He stated that he had been asked by the chairmanship of the local committee and the past few weeks have been spent in organizing group interest.

He felt greatly enthused about the possibilities of this plan," said the chairman, "and I look into it the more I see that there has been built up a means of stimulating business and relieving of the unemployment situation, so as to give self-help as everyone desires."

More than four thousand loans have been advanced for the Home Improvement plan in the first province of Ontario, it was pointed out, accounting for $1,600,000 in loans.

Season Just Ahead

"And we have not yet reached the season when the worst of this kind actually begins. By June it is hoped to have the entire $50,000,000 devoted to this work taken up. It is generally believed that for every dollar expended in the Home Improvement Plan there will be three dollars spent by others on their own initiative, as a result of the example set, so that there is a reasonable possibility of $150,000,000 additional being spent in improvements throughout Canada this year by private enterprise," he remarked. "The committee is to the results of such a movement. If the plan succeeds as it has in the United States, it will be of great benefit." In Philadelphia alone $21,000,000 improvements resulted.

Mr. Herity said that the ladies had been asked to work on the committee as they very good results that it is believed that the women in the home are responsible for about seventy-five per cent of the work which may be expected.

Mr. Herity introduced those present to the audience mentioning that the representatives present were Thomas Adams, plasterer, sions mascre, bricklayer; Jack Wilson, Jr., W. Taylor; R. A. Fraser, painter, Rotary; E. D. Finkle, electrical contractor; Mr. Sutherford, carpenters and builders; Mrs. W. N. Ponton, Daughters of the Empire; Mrs. Hall, Local Council of Women; Mrs. Hall, Local Council of Women; Mrs. Hall, Local Council of Women

"Maytime" Reunites Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy

Topping even their triumphs in "Naughty Marietta" and "Rose Marie" Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, Belle Locke's favorite singing star, now come to the Belle screen for one entire week, starting today! Their latest production is the "Maytime" Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's lavish adaptation of the Rida Johnson Young operetta, which was one of the most memorable hits of the New York stage.

Directed by Robert Z. Leonard, the film has glimpses of "Ziegfeld Girls" with a wide variety of songs by Sigmund Romberg and Herbert Stothart, and with a brilliant supporting cast headed by John Barrymore in his first appearance since "Romeo and Juliet,"..... the new M-G-M. musical opens as one of the outstanding productions of the new movie season.

The famous song hit of the original play, "Sweetheart, Will You Remember" was retained for the film version, and the remainder of the music divided between the sensational star duo. Miss MacDonald sings two complete operatic arias and portions of others, and Eddy has three novelty songs, "Students' Drinking Song," "Vive L'Opera" and "Wedding March." Both of them are done with chorus, with the last number going through the streets of Paris with hundreds of singers joining in nonsensical lyrics about ham and eggs to the tune of familiar operatic melodies.

Together, the two stars sing an American folksong for the first time the touching "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny."

For the first time in film history original opera was written for a picture. Herbert Stothart composed an Opera, Charlotte, which fills an entire reel with a full operatic company assisting and a great New York opera star has a duplicated role in detail.

Nightly sets were constructed most elaborate in the court of Louis Napoleon in 1866. There are opera house, grand parks, forests, streets of Paris, lavish hotel suites, an enormous ballroom in the Tuileries in Paris, an apple orchard in full bloom and numerous colorful scenes. Six stage crews toiled over the creation of these settings, among the most elaborate ever constructed in Hollywood.

The story, taken from Rida Johnson Young's original play and adapted by Noel Langley, opens in 1906 with Miss MacDonald appearing in old lady make-up for the first time, trying to solve the romantic problems of Lynne Carver and Tom Brown by telling the girl of her own life so she can choose between love and a career.

The story then goes back to 1866 and briefly shows Miss MacDonald as a prima donna, and Eddy as a young singing student together in a Latin Quarter flat.

They love and part because Miss MacDonald has already promised to marry Barrymore who has been her benefactor and guiding hand to success. Years pass and when they again meet when he sings opposite her in her grand opera. This time their love cannot be denied.

Together with Barrymore, Lynne Carver and Tom Brown, the supporting cast of "Maytime" includes Paul Ellis, Ottakar Herman Bing, Russell Hicks, Charles Judels and Guy Bates Post. The production is under the personal supervision of Hunt Stromberg, producer of "The Great Ziegfeld."

The Belle Lake World News promises a "Maytime" show, starting at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.15, "Maytime" starts daily at 2.45, 7.10 and 9.30 p.m. For your perfect enjoyment of this outstanding screen classic is suggested that you arrive one hour before the very beginning.

CAPITOL

"Hands Across the Table" and Fred MacMurray Top Capitol Bill

A diverting piece of funny business, crammed with lively action, clever dialogue and laughs galore is the romantic comedy, "Hands Across the Table," with lovely Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray heard in the leading roles of this fun fest, comes to the Capitol as festival fill No. 2 with the swell revival "Rhythm on the Range" starring Sunday Monday and Monday and Tuesday.

A laugh riot from start to finish, the merry proceedings of "Hands Across the Table" centres around the attempts of a poor but ambitious manicurist and a penniless young socialite to live up to an agreement that each shall marry money, with love a negligible factor. Various complications ensue result as the two set out to keep their bargain, until both fall in love, and all things, with each other.

Miss Lombard in fine style introduces Miss Lombard in an entirely new characterization and the blonde star is equal to the task with flying colors as a light comedienne, as well as a lush romantic lady. Her performance may be equally divided between Miss Lombard and MacMurray who has possessed of a distinct personal charm as well as a flair for that sort of role he is required to fulfill in the comedy. Ferguson and Hasty, engaging, blundering duo as Lombard captive the amusing mo-ments, sharing them with a delightful and refreshing abandon.

BOTTLE WASHERS OUT ON STRIKE

Toronto, April 24 (CP)—Now it's the bottle washers who are on strike, demanding an increase from 10 to 30 cents an hour, five employees of the plant in old Toronto, say they will wash no more bottles until the pay boost is forthcoming.

The walkout was called by officials of the Hod Carriers' and Common Labourers' Union yesterday. The bottle washers, members of the union, are picketing the dealers' shop and claim they enjoy support from the Retail Merchants. Fifteen members were disposing of their bottles elsewhere.

Their demands earned $6 a week and tried to keep their families on that amount. They are employed on a casual basis.

"They are entitled to more and are going to get it."

Screwball Artist of Giants Continues Where He Left Off Last Fall Stopping Boston

Allows Only Three Hits And Earns 3-0 Shut-out

TIGERS UNDEFEATED

Lon Warneke Wins First Start in a Cardinal Uniform

By RED FEDER

"Screwyscott" is back with all his stuff, so all's right with the Bronx, the Polo Grounds and the New York Giants. Put it's not so hot for the rest of the Nedional League.

Screwyscott, for the benefit of those who've missed the trest, is the famous pitcher who's property of the way down to his ankles and look for all the world like two dove-tailed pieces of white, when he's out there on the mound.

He is also noted for his portside pitching, his screwball specialty, and his .16-game unbeaten string, streak, he's got season.

Bill Terry threw King Carl at the usually troublesome Boston Bees yesterday as the league champions made their debut at their own Polo Grounds. And Hubbell picked up where he left off in '36.

His screwball everything but set up and laugh light in the Bees' faces. The rest of his stuff followed suit, and Carl pitched himself a three-hit, 3-0 shutout for the visitors' second straight win of the season and his own 17th straight in league competition. He turned the trick in two and three and the only time he was threatened, he struck out two men in a row with the bases loaded.

Generally Fine Hurling.

Hubbell's top-flight flinging topped a day of generally fine pitching along the big-league front. Right behind him was young George Caster of Connie Mack's Athletics and old White Hoyt opening his 20th year in the majors as relief-pitcher extraordinary for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Hoyt, picking up in the second inning when big Jim Weaver weakened, allowed three hits the rest of the way as the Pirates won their third straight, nosing out the roughhousing Reds of Cincinnati 4-3, in a game made from start to finish by fast, marked by the season's first fight. Bucko McCormick of the Reds and Catcher Al Todd started it, and several others joined in before it was over.

Caster limited the Senators to four hits in burling a 7-1 victory, with the help of Bob Johnson's third homer in the opening game.

Roy Henshaw fanned nine in close to eight innings as the Dodgers blanked the Phillies 4-2 in the Philadelphia National League opener. Monte Lawson pitched for Chicago White Sox with half a dozen hits as the Detroit Tigers headed by Hank Greenberg and his first homer, clubbed out a 10-2 conquest to remain undefeated.

Warneke Wins Start.

Although touched for eight and ten hits, respectively, Cincy's Paul Lon Warneke and the Cleveland Indians' Johnny Allen showed lots of stuff in the pinches. Warneke, pennant hope of the gas house gang, kept the Cards in the unusual column with a 5-4 victory. St. Louis' Rabbit Allen's Indian rallies did most of the work in the Cleveland home opener, banging five pitchers to way top the already vanquished St. Louis Browns 9-2.

The Yankees and Boston Red Sox were rained out.

The Indians, tangling with the Browns again, are slated to present their week-end rookie sensation, young Bob Feller, to the home folks in today's tilt.

Yesterday's Stars

Carl Hubbell, Giants—Stopped the Boston Bees with three hits for 3-0 victory.

Johnny Mize, Cards — His smile with bases loaded turned ugly and winning runs against Cubs.

Hank Greenberg, Tigers—Hit homer, double, single and drove in three runs in 10-3 win over White Sox.

Waite Hoyt, Pirates—Allowed three hits in 7 1/3 innings of relief pitching for a 4-2 victory over Reds.

Lon Lary, Indians—Had two doubles and single in 9-2 win over Browns.

George Caster, Athletics—Limited Senators to four hits and beat them 7-1.

Roy Henshaw, Dodgers—Stopped Phillies with nine hits and strikeouts for 7 1/3 innings of pitching.

And say he will trim the Bees' Wee Willie Sharp pie of shinola by the time he is all washed up, like Mussolini thinks Italy is going to be in Abyssinia Handcap..... The Bees are likely elected into office and the league voted to affiliate with the Ontario Lacrosse Association.

Five certain starting clubs were assured the loop, following considerable discussion relative to whether the organization carry on as an individual unit, or operate directly under the O.A.A. with the decision finally reverting to the former and the new league came into being. Peterborough, Belleville, R.C.A.F. and a combined representation of Cobourg and Port Hope officially entered clubs while Oshawa was represented by proxy and entered the league, assuring five clubs. President J. D. Lehane, of the fifth club, assured the meeting that he had contacted Norwood and they were anxious to play lacrosse, thus assuring a six team loop, if that club affiliates next Friday at Cobourg.

Form Own Association

Upon the motion of Gordon Delaney, President of the Belleville Lacrosse Club, the meeting decided to form a Central Ontario Lacrosse League and affiliate with the O.A.A. under the parent body's banner. Delegates from Cobourg and Port Hope requested entrance as a "combined" team and were admitted, the question of playing dates being left in the hands of the executive, executive, J. D. Lehane, president of the, Peterboro' club, occupied the chair during the meeting.

The question of officers for the Central Ontario Lacrosse League resulted as follows:

President—Harry Moore, Trenton.
Vice-Pres.—Pete King, Peterboro.
Sec.-Treas.—Lieut. Carling-Kelly, R.C.A.F.

The league executive will be composed of the following:

Cobourg—Port Hope "Combines"—H. Sankl; Oshawa—Sgt. Brasier; R.C.A.F.—Squadron Leader Lawrence and a member to be named from the Norwood entry. The league left the question of appointing O.A.L.A. convener in the hands of the O.A.L.A., however.

Considerable discussion was entered in upon relative to the matter of referees for the year, it finally being adopted that neutral officials be used whenever possible. Each club was requested to submit the names of their officials for the year, and those referees will be appointed to attend the next league meeting when they will be "passed on" and lectured by a member of the O.A.L.A. executive. The next meeting of the league will be held in Cobourg on Friday, April 30th when the league schedule will be drawn up and submitted for approval.

The clubs represented were: Peterboro—P. King and J. Garson; Cobourg-Port Hope—H. Sankl and A. Henderson; R.C.A.F.—Joe Gould; Belleville—Gordon Delaney, Harry Moore. Oshawa and Norwood were represented by proxy of members of the Peterboro Club. The O.A.L.A. was not organized, although that organization had been notified of the meeting.

Central Ontario Lacrosse League Comes Into Being

League Will Affiliate With Ontario Lacrosse Association

The schedule will be drawn up at the next meeting of the league, which will be held in Cobourg on Friday, April 30th, when the league executive will be empowered to attend the next league meeting when they will be "passed on" and lectured by a member of the O.A.L.A. executive. The next meeting of the league will be held in Cobourg on Friday, April 30th when the league schedule will be drawn up and submitted for approval.

JERSEY GIANTS LOSE OPENER TO ROCHESTER

Minor League Record Broken When 13,234 Attend Pastime

LEAFS WIN AGAIN

Score Three Runs in 9th to Defeat Orioles by 8-6

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.

If they even come close to drawing power packed in their opening-day crowd, the Jersey Giants should fulfill the fondest hopes of the International League baseball boss for a financially successful season.

The all-time attendance record of 21,224, which came out yesterday as the Jersey City club, back in the circuit after a three-year absence, got off to a day-late start, probably won't be equalled often if at all.

It was the product of a city-wide celebration which included baby-holding in public offices and schools and which was backed by a concerted drive to get the fans out, regardless of the cold, raw weather. Jersey City is noted as a "red hot" baseball town, however.

The brand new team was beaten in its first start but looked promising as it battled the Rochester Red Wings for 11 innings before going down, 4-3.

Brilliant fielding saved Richie Stiles several times as he was routed for 15 hits, including a homer by Lefty Hopp, while Nisha Kleinke gave only eight blows and fanned thirteen. Emil Crabtree's double and Wally Alston's single finally broke up the battle.

Minor League Mark Broken.

The crowd, which eclipsed both the league regular-season record of 19,315, made the Newark and Little minor league mark of 28,000 set in Milwaukee, brought the total for four openers up to 56,824 over two days.

Only about 2,000 chilled customers turned out at Syracuse to see the Chicks take a 5-1 licking from Buffalo Bisons in their opener. The veteran Bill Harris limited Syracuse to seven hits and whiffed eight while the Bisons drove Frank Pearce to the rather welcome retreat of a hot shower with five hits for as many runs in the sixth.

Newark Bears and Toronto Leafs continued to head the parade in each lining up its second victory. Buddy Rosar batted the Bears to a 7-5 decision over Montreal Royals by belting two homers, each with Joe Gordon on base. Alex Donald, a rookie flinger, weakened toward the finish and finally went out in the eighth after giving three runs.

Toronto smashed over three runs in the ninth to beat Baltimore 8-6 after the Orioles had tied the count with a five-run "inning" in the eighth.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

Eau Claire, Wis.—Jack Gibbons, light heavyweight, St. Paul, outpointed Eddie Schenkier, Marshfield, Wis. (10), unanimously (10).

Cleveland — Eric Seelig, middleweight champion, outpointed Clarence Barth, Cleveland, former Olympic star, lightweight champion, (10), (weights unavailable).

The softball moguls are in the midst of the season's annual scurrying for players and what a scrambling there is! Reports from the various team managers, who are angling about the town for assistance, are now never using the eyes of the movements of the other. We understand the ranks of the 1936 champion Percivals have been severely nibbled though continued raids by other clubs, but President Todd says he will carry on, as usual, with the softball fraternity will convene in the Aikman Block rooms on Monday night for the purpose of drafting a schedule.

Bill Preest and Dave Stinson, two former Napanee boys, are expect to wear the livery of the Maritime this year, thus increasing the league's membership to five. The former Napanee and Belleville third sacker, Preest and his teammate left for the Maritimes yesterday. If the exodus continues there will be none left in the Quinte diamond stars in the Nickel Belt, loop then there are at home.

When Promoter Jack Corcoran paternally ushered the ring of the Arena on Thursday night and announced he would bring to Belleville the best wrestling in the world, the Queensbury A.C. maestro was in no way speaking from an egotistical viewpoint. Mr. Corcoran explained why he was able to bring such outstanding men as Pierre Strack, Coffield and others to Belleville. He also announced that during his next show George Clark, Scottish titleholder of one of the heaviest wrestlers in the world, would appear locally. One local fan recalled: "Bring back those two in the preliminary," and Jack replied: "O.K. I will." Pierre and Coffield put on a splendid exhibition of scientific wrestling and proved themselves matmen and will be included on the card to be presented one week from Tuesday night. It might be wise to sign Pierre and Coffield to meet in the 45 minute semi-final, as they surely proved crowd-pleasers on Thursday night.

If the fans desire it, Promoter Corcoran says he will alternate pro boxing and pro. wrestling cards about in Belleville, featuring such boxers as Frankie Genovese, Sammie Luftspring and other well known schmoes. Incidentally we two struck up a conversation with Charlie Strack the other night and he told us of the ring he is in good health as you would wish to meet, with pet dervishes in flying. Now under contract to wrestle in Earl's rink on Saturday and will take a plane night after the bout for any how town and expect to spend Sunday with his family in Boston. He also will appear at the Boston Gardens in the main bout on Tuesday night," added Strack. Incidentally Mr. Coffield is a cousin to Dynamite Jos Cox, another well known wrestler.

Do you remember when "Ziggy" Berg, Great Britain's foremost lightweight boxing challenger, was knocked out by champion Tony Canzoneri at Chicago six years ago tonight. Short-ender in the betting odds, Canzoneri hammered the former down in the third round, of their scheduled 10-round bout. Lou Ambers now wears the crown.

Sensing the falling off of interest in the Central Ontario Lacrosse league, the lacrosse moguls are putting every effort behind their proposed new loop and last night formed a Central Ontario Lacrosse League at Port Hope. The clubs are assured starters—a consolidated team of Port Hope and Cobourg, Peterboro, Oshawa, R.C.A.F. and Belleville will definitely face the acid test this season, while Oshawa Norwood will come into the fold is made a five club circuit-up. Lacrosse of today has had a long period up-hill struggle in these parts, but the members believe their long-awaited day has at last settled upon the horizon. Unfortunately the O.A.L.A. the parent body of said fracas is sufficiently advisable to send a representative, as we think was a poor diplomacy on their part, under the trying circumstances.

This afternoon the C.O.B.L. Baseball league is slated to open the local Y.M.C.A. at which time schedules will be drafted, the matter of umpires discussed and other matters brought up on the agenda. People continued referees to the latter subject, we can assure the Peterboro scribe, that the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" will not be playing senior ball in the Central League in 1937. Incidentally there will be two new pilots in the loop this summer, Fred Collins, Peterboro Canoe Co. manager guiding the destines of the Peterboro club instead of "Shifty" Johnson while Art Legge, former hockey mentor of Oshawa, will pilot the Motor City crew, replacing the grey-thatched Tracy Shaw and McCullum of last season. This will leave the veteran Joe Dairy, of the Police, and the perennial Walter Gerow, now at Napanee, the only holdovers from the 1936 stock of C.O.B.L. managers.

On Monday night the local service clubs are honoring the Belleville Bantams, intermediate champions of the O.H.A. and at the same time entertaining the champion R.C.A.F. "Flyers" at the Chez Quinte. The speaker of the evening will be A. J. Mayhew, chairman of the Ontario Athletic Commission and veteran mentor of sports in general throughout Canada. Mr. Mayhew has for years been associated with Canada's Olympic teams for many years past and will doubtless have a tale or two to tell us. Incidentally how Olympic teams are conducted." Mr. Mayhew was the speaker of the day at the recent annual meeting of the O.A.A.A. and was well received. It is estimated, that between 375 and 390 service and sports fans will greet and attend the testimonial banquet on Monday night.

Dance Hall Lady

— by —

Jane Clayton

Her thoughts grew calmer. Reluctantly she had herself to see that the original mistake had been her own. She should never have accepted Stanley's invitation. It might not be fair but it was certainly true that she and Nancy and girls like Nancy had nothing in common. It was useless to imagine that she could bridge the gap between her world and theirs; she could not compete.- Always they could shut her out, because she did not belong with them. She lacked the money, the background, the time, and without them the end would always be heartache and pain.

Her cheeks burned at the memory of the ruined evening and at the memory of her own behavior. She knew that she had been unreasonable, capricious, illogical. She had punished and bewildered Stanley and all because she should never have been there at all. . . She would not again make that mistake. Let him think what he looked,she would see him no more, she would blast the memory from her mind and all, she would stay where she belonged.

So she argued and won for herself a kind of false and temporary peace. Indeed as she descended at the familiar shabby apartment house and walked through the familiar shabby lobby and acknowledged the greeting of the drowsy elevator boy, she felt oddly content. This was not Park Avenue; it might not be beautiful but it was home. Here she could be herself; here she was no need for pretense; no one here would snub her — or fill her with envy and bitterness.

Still in a mood of quiet acceptance she unlocked the door upstairs and cautiously entered the studio. The lights were blazing. Irene, her wide awake at two in the morning, was curled on the couch, busy with coffee and buttered toast. At her feet on the ottoman, sat David, smoking at his pipe and looking as natural as one of the pieces of furniture. Anne had not seen him since the night of the quarrel.

"Where in the world have you been?" Irene demanded shrilly in welcome. And then with no pause, for an answer — "Oh, I'm glad to the thumb: "Look who's here. I called him up!"

"Yes, as I was about to call here," David admitted sheepishly. As the girl advanced into the room he added, concerned and anxious, "Why Anne, dear, you're tired to death. Why, honey, you've been crying, your eyes and nose are all red."

He had sprung to his feet and was supporting her weary body. He pulled her arrogantly so that her head rested upon his shoulder, one of his arms was at her waist. She could feel the strength of that arm and the strength of love that shone from his careful, protective eyes.

"Glad to see me again, youngster? Did you miss me even a little bit? I missed you."

His mouth was tousled in the chair where she dropped, spent and at weary peace. He took the slippers from her and knelt and slid off her hands gently in both of his. "Poor hand was all bruised."

"Where were you?" Irene demanded the second time.

"At a party with Stanley Rye." David stiffened.

"He must have given you one swell time," he commented. "You look like death."

"I had a marvellous time," Anne blazed from the depth of shattered nerves. "I danced her tired."

"You look it! I wish to heaven you'd open your mouth and tell me in the first place how it would work out—"

"You'll have to keep on wishing then. He asked me to a house party and I'm going."

Anne stopped short, appalled by her own lie. But she knew from David's stricken face and from Irene's ill concealed exultation that they did not believe it.

SWORDS CROSS

CHAPTER TWENTY

Irene's morning delight over the mythical houseparty was hard for Anne to bear. As the older girl busied her usual scattered toilette, searching frantically for a fresh blouse, borrowing a pair of Anne's stockings, bemoaning a spot on her only decent skirt, she was full of a thousand questions, a thousand suggestions, a thousand delicate insinuations. Anne would have given anything now to recall her lie.

"And you simply must have one of those little linen suits, brown or maybe blue for your eyes," Irene remarked the fourth time.

"I'm not taking a thing I don't own already," said Anne uncomfortably, pounding one of the pillows unnecessarily hard as she made up the couch. "You talk as if going on a week-end party was like being presented at Buckingham Palace," she ended tartly.

"I don't suppose you're excited. Oh no. You're just as cool as a bushel of cucumbers!"

"I've half a notion not to go," declared Anne, seizing upon that chance. "It's insane for me to even think of trying to keep up with that crowd—you with no job and me with thirty a week at the most! Why even the ruined fur set —the whole thing's out of the question. David tried me last night into saying I'd go but I really never intended to."

There she had solved it! But Irene only looked mysterious. She completely shut out her legs.

"See them. Aren't they handsome, aren't they gorgeous?" she inquired. "Well, I'm thinking of having them insured. Yesterday they earned me ten dollars being photographed for a stocking advertisement. Can you imagine it? Those stems being worth ten dollars? And the photographer said they'll want more, its five dollars for every one they use."

Irene sprang to her feet and clogged merrily to a noisy, tuneless accompaniment of her own, her silken legs flashing and her short hair flying. One last wild whirl and she sank exhausted in the divan, reached over to an open bureau drawer, seized upon a packet of cigarettes and lighted one. A moment later, on her feet again, she was forcing a dollar bill into David's hand.

"That'll cover a hat and gloves and maybe railroad fare," she predicted with reckless optimism. "All those things that you haven't got for the last minute."

"Irene, I can't!" Anne was close to tears.

"You chump, this is on your big chance! You'll need Stanley Rye's money and it's probably why he asked you—and you simply have to make a good impression. You know how much first impressions count."

Anne looked at her helplessly, ignoring the twist of pain that the other's innocent words had given her. "I appreciate your offering you know I do, but even if I wanted to go, it's a big splash, even if I wanted to go to that darned old party, I couldn't use the money. I need it much more too for the rent."

Irene smiled calmly.

"I paid the rent last night," she announced modestly.

"In the name of heaven, how?"

"Borrowed the money from David" she replied.

"Indeed I did. Wanta see the receipt Old Haves gave me? Black and dead when I telephoned," Irene continued gleefully, "and he did pay. Guessed He got here so quick I think he must have run all the way."

"But how could you?" Anne gasped as it came her anger died and only humiliation remained. Irene, with the innocent vision of Nancy, wondered fleetingly what Nancy, what Stanley would think of such a transaction. But it did not matter what they thought. It did not matter how such a night handle a problem that in their lavish lives must always be a hypothetical one.

"So now there's no reason why you shouldn't go home," Irene was cheerfully saying comfortably.

No reason, Anne reflected except that she had not been invited.

She thought of that all during the morning as she moved sleepily about the house helping Irene with the cleaning, the making of the bed, the fast dishes, the dusting and the sketchy sweeping with which the two girls contented themselves during summer months. It even distracted her practice. Suddenly Irene came to the piano and leaned against the keyboard.

"You aren't very glad this morning, are you, Anne." she asked rather than questioned.

"Perhaps not."

"Tell me what went wrong last night."

Anne had been a protest but before Irene's friendly interested solicitude the protest died.

The only thing to do, she said slowly, thickly, "the only thing is, that you keep on assuming I had such a marvellous time and I—I didn't." She struck an elaborate chord and studiously watched the position of her fingers.

"Because a girl at the party?" Irene hazarded.

Anne took a long breath. "Because he was another girl," she admitted honestly. "Nancy Carr's first name. She's pretty, she's charming and she's rich, she's just everything, Irene."

"She was corny, huh?"

"Not even that." Anne responded wryly. "Just sort of disinterested—didn't know I was on earth most of the time, and when she did she was too polite. And something went wrong —and I—left the party in a huff and got haughty and made a heroine out of myself by announcing to the world at large that I worked in a ten-cent dime hall and they could like it or lump it."

"So she came on on top?"

"She certainly did," Anne agreed fervently.

"Stanley likes here?"

"Likes her! You should have seen him!"

Irene pondered!

"Can't you figure out any way to put her in bad?"

Anne promptly denied that she could. Certain forms of feminine warfare were spurning, on the level of other forms were not. Not even to this dearly loved roommate would Anne import a piece of information about Nancy which magnified the bitterness in her mind.

"Just the same, I think you're crazy mooping around and deciding to let this Carr dame walk off with the man you want," Irene said aggressively. "You've spent too much time thinking about all the things she's got that you haven't. Why don't you look at it the other way? She might have money and advantages and all the things Stanley's used to, but that's where you step in—you're what he's not used to!

"You're different, and that, my girl, is an asset with any man. You work for a living, you're independent, you can take care of yourself, and you're cute and pretty and real class, too, the same as she is. Why don't you get in there and fight?"

That night as she made the trip to Lexington Anne determined that she would fight. Nancy should not be allowed to have everything her own way. Just how she would manage, Anne did not exactly know as yet, of course, was planning her reply on the week-end party. Stanley man had raped over that party that Anne was beginning almost to think of it as a reality. Under different circumstances, the situation might have been amusing. Oh, well she had set the date two weeks ahead, and many things might happen in that time. She arrived at the dance hall.

Every night as she stepped into Lexington Anne died a little death. Only the appearance of Stanley Rye could resurrect her. Whether the hours she spent there were not real living, the dancing there was not real dancing, nor the talk real talk. The faces of her regulars grew to seemed to belong. She even knew who had any substance or reality. She kept them entertained —it was her job —and she herself, the real Anne, withdrew beyond entertainment. She had grown expert at the art of seeming absorbed in some casual conversation when all of herself, all her thoughts, her dreams, her imaginings, were securely locked away.

Con had noticed, had objected, but she had made no effort to change her attitude. Her one real indifference had given her a success she had not known since her first dollars looked. That success had earned her the grudging respect of the other girls. Almost all of them liked her. There were two notable exceptions. Ella, the blonde manicurist always plotting somehow to bring about her downfall. As usual when Anne entered the dressing room, their conversation broke off, and the chatter began once more as usual they had been talking about her.

Ella's attention upon her as she settled at her table.

"Dear Anne is here and wants to see you in the office," he said.

"Why can't he see me out here?" Anne demanded.

"Alicia chiefly. That girl ought to be run out of town on a rail," Ella replied with energy.

Though the time seemed endless, when she walked he-e-y her eyes were liable she had been gone less than fifteen minutes. As she seated herself with elaborate casualness she thought that she looked all right. She underestimated Alicia, who now had forth at the table that Ray had once adorned. Alicia regarded her intensely, yawned, and strolled over.

"Bad news?" she inquired.

"Why, no."

"You look it." There was no encouragement from Anne. But Alicia persisted. "Did you see Richard Graeme?"

"Is he here?"

"One of the girls saw him coming in."

"Is that so?" Anne managed vaguely.

All at once she became conscious that Alicia was staring at the table. She jerked her hand to her lap, but she had not been quick enough. Alicia swooped, pounced on it in a long, significant stare, and departed.

Naturally, Alicia did not keep her own counsel. Anne learned that soon enough. At one o'clock, when she was changing into street clothes and talking to Jean Clark, a favorite of hers, Sunny, who had lingered long on the stairway at her farewells, hurriedly quitered the dressing room.

"It was a big evening for him," she announced to everyone. "Seven gents —count 'em, seven—offered to

OATH REVISIONS REMOVE THORNS FOR CORONATION

Changes Approved By King and Privy Council Tend to Raise Irritants to Church and State.

By THOMAS T. CHAMPION

LONDON—Even the most ancient English constitutional usages may be modified to meet changed conditions, and some of the alterations effected in the Coronation Oath.

These changes have become operative through Letters Patent the Dominions has altered constitutionally since the Statute of Westminster, 1931, at Westminster.

The oath has a history extending back to the eighth century, but in its modern form goes back to the settlement after the revolution of 1688. The latest alterations in the Declaration Relative to Religion established by law" was subject to no geographical limitation, and is now confined to maintaining it "in the United Kingdom" only.

In its latest form the oath covers all the members of the British Commonwealth, but, in those directions where it does not, the limitation is explicitly stated. The modifications are slight, but they make clearer the plain shades of the nineteen position.

"Gradually," says the Manchester Guardian, "we have shed from the ceremonial of accession and coronation the harsh religious phraseology of the seventeenth century exclusiveness; though the Protestant character of the monarchy, once the most vital characteristic, stands unshaken, it has ceased to be an irritant challenge to those of other faiths."

SURVEY AUSTRALIAN ORES

CANBERRA, Australia.—The government will survey iron ore deposits at Australia. It is not thought likely export of ore to Japan will be stopped.

GETS CORONATION COMMAND

LONDON.—Rear-Admiral Arthur N. Loxley-Tottenham, appointed Rear Admiral commanding the Tenth Cruiser Squadron for the Coronation naval review, with his flag in H.M.S. Colombo.

BIG FISH WORTH MONEY

LOWESTOFT, Eng.—Record price of about $150 was paid for a royal sturgeon brought in by a local trawler, 13 feet long and weighing 672 pounds, biggest fish ever landed here.

Irish Free State and Northern Ireland. Both, seemingly, are included under "Ireland", thus comprising a form which could hardly give offence to Free State susceptibilities, as it ignores the present "partition" of the country.

The second part of the oath, in which the King answers the Archbishop's question: "Will you to your power cause law and justice, in mercy, to be executed in all your judgments?" stands as it was enacted in 1688.

Church Oath Modified.

The third part of the Coronation Oath is this time once again modified. In 1688 it assumed that the Protestant Reformed Religion established by law." And will you maintain and preserve inviolably the settlement of the Church of England, and the doctrine, worship, discipline, and government thereof, as by law established in England?"

It will be seen that under the old oath the promise to maintain the "Protestant Reformed Religion established by law" was subject to no geographical limitation, and is now confined to maintaining it "in the United Kingdom" only.

In its latest form the oath covers

"Will you solemnly promise and swear to govern the people of this United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the Dominions thereto belonging, according to the Statutes in Parliament agreed on, and the respective laws and customs of the same?"

And the King made answer: "I solemnly promise so to do."

In the new form the Archbishop's question is:

"Will you solemnly promise and swear to govern the peoples of Great Britain, Ireland, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa, of your possessions and the other Territories to any of them belonging or pertaining, and of your Empire of India, according to their respective laws and customs?"

And the King will make answer: "I solemnly promise so to do."

It is noteworthy the new oath takes account of the fact that the constitutional difference between the

HINTS ON HOME IMPROVEMENT

Your Home is Your Castle

Whether you live in a cottage, a mansion or a little clapboard bungalow, that house is your stronghold and you'll make beautiful, livable and enjoyable. Your little domicile may never be as modern as Mrs. Noah's, or as mansion across the way, but it can be just as attractive. There is always something to be said for simplicity, you know.

Just look at the clothes in the shops these days, look at the beautiful furnishings, pots and pans, linen. The whole world seems one big riot of color. We Canadians never have given the outside of our houses the color attention they needed, as the Bermudians or the Cubans do. Their houses are painted in all blue, pink, yellow, green and white dwellings that blend in beautifully with the bellflowers of their flora and fauna. And the Dutch — they're never squeamish about color. We needn't be, either, because there are fine paints on the market which don't change like seasons won't harm. They'll stay as true and undaubed as the day they were placed on the wood, or the brick or the stucco.

A fresh coat of paint means a new life for that home of yours. It will add immeasurably, to its beauty and will preserve it for years to come. It isn't just the coat of paint that counts however. You've got to think hard and seriously about your choice of color. Don't be satisfied with dead, silver, pearl grey, yellow, soft green— is the thing for the small house. A light color, too, is good for the heavily landscaped house. The large house however, can stand a dark color and is particularly delightful with white doorway and shutters.

Don't let your home get that weatherbeaten, stained and aged look —not when a fresh coat of good paint can rejuvenate it.

MARKET COMMENT

The market is showing a more normal condition and the nervousness so prevalent a few days ago has disappeared. Everybody is talking of the bargains that were available Monday and Tuesday and are hoping that they will be presented with another such opportunity. In fact today is in a much better technical position than at any time in the last six months.

Drury & Thompson point out that another speculative cycle seems to be now in course in the base metal mining market going prone to exaggerations. In fact in the case of some these stocks have such wide swing is an apparent disinclination of the public to buy. Probably all experienced brokers know that it is much easier to get the public to buy stocks than to sell them—and when paper profits are utilized to finance other commitments an overbought position is built up which nearly always has a violent reaction once something develops which gives a little selling. In the present case the fear of a change in the price of gold was sufficient to get the ball rolling.

The Shares of the International Nickel Company Are Strongly Held —Analysts of Holdings Show.

International Nickel. Here is a company that is internationalized. 60.5% of the stockholders live in the United States and they own 44.4% of the stock. 39.5% live in Great Britain and they own 32.3% of the stock. while 31.4% live in Canada and own 18.9% of the stock. The belief is current that it would seem that the average American stockholders were moderately well-to-do for he owns a goodly number of stock, while the average English stockholder is a big fellow and the average Canadian stockholder is a little fellow.

On The Street

Many of the larger American trading accounts have been carried by the London banks on a marginmargin basis, according to all reports, 75% being carried with 25 percent charged by brokers in New York. Rumour has it that margins may be raised to 30 to 60 per cent. Considerable comment is heard in respect to the large bank loan now appearing in the McColl Frontenac balance sheet. . . . With business growing it is just a matter of time before more funds may be required by the Bell Telephone Company. . . . A new stock issue would be well received by shareholders.

The previous big break in the 'golds' was on July 8, 1934, on that occasion the gold index broke 3.31 points, compared with 5.03 on Monday. Volume this week was far heavier than it was in 1934.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, April 24 (CP)—Friday's downward slant in the Toronto Stock Exchange continued in the closing session of the week, specially in the gold and industrial groups.

Copper-prize golds led in the downward drift, McIntyre losing a point. Minor fractions were dropped by Lamaque, Lake Shore, Teck and Buffalo-Ankerite. Losses up to 10 to 15 cents were boarded in Pickle Crow, Wright Hargreaves, O'Brien, Little Long Lac and Massey, and among the cheaper issues recessions ranged from 5 to 7 cents for Jellicoe, Base Metals, Monets, Canadian Malartic, Dark-wood-Kenticott, Sladen, Sylvanite, Francoeur and Stadacona.

The Canadian Malartic and Dominion Stores were lower and other foods steady and quiet. Brazilian lost ⅝ and C. P. R. and Ford A were down about 1-2 each.

Nickel was the outstanding weak spot in the base metals, selling off about two points and prices were lower for Sherritt, Ventures, Falconbridge and Chromium. Noranda and Pend Oreille held minor gains.

FALCONS NEST ON SKYSCRAPER IN MONTREAL

Fierce Duck Hawks Are Seldom Seen in City—Nature's Best Flyers

Montreal, April 24.—High on a ledge on the southern facade of the Sun Life Building, two fierce peregrine falcons, or duck hawks, are nesting in an aerie which to their beady eyes resembles nothing more than a native cliff.

Montreal ornithologists yesterday states the Montreal pair are the second the presence of the war-like birds, discovered only after weeks of careful vigil from windows and roofs of nearby lofty buildings.

Flying high over Dorchester street, a few days ago, the male "tiercel" gathered pace, and swooped into its strangely placed aerie. Yesterday observers saw the "falcon" or female larger of the two black and black birds—soar over St. James Cathedral, then gracefully bank down to its mate.

No other record exists, local ornithologists say, of duck hawks nesting on the artificial crags of a skyscraper. A pair nested in Ely, Cornwall, England, for several years, but their choice was a natural cliff within the limits of the city.

Two days were spent 15 months ago in investigating reports that a pair of the hawks had established an aerie on the Sun Life Building. The birds were seen, but ornithologists found a single flight feather after they had made a minute examination of ledges and lairs on the masonry building. Comparison with a museum piece confirmed belief that the feather came from a peregrine falcon.

Aware that the birds migrate in the spring, observers this year began posts again a month ago. They were amazed yesterday when the second of the two was seen. Interested Sun Life officials will cooperate with ornithologists in promoting more detailed studies of the birds' habits. Efforts will be made to record their activities photographically.

Fiercest brave, the "falco peregrinus anatum" or duck hawk is no city dweller by choice. He is a settled area. Dark, bluish slate plumage adorns his body, it is nearly black on the head and cheeks, white beneath, and barred with black. Females are larger.

G. H. Thayer, writing in 1904, describes it as "probably the most highly specialized and superlatively well-developed flying creature on our planet today, combining in a marvellous degree the highest powers of speed and force, audacious with massive warlike strength."

'Frisky', Pupils' Pet, Killed by Auto

"Frisky" is no more. A cute little box of tricks was this six months old police dog, the pride of the kiddies of North Front Street, who used to gallop every evening in a tail-wagging paroxysm of joy to meet her schoolboy and schoolgirl friends, this time for the last time, for wherever it is that such dogs go. For "Frisky" was killed at noon of her friends last night, failed to note a swiftly approaching automobile. It happened in a second. There came a short sharp yelp of pain as a second more and she was dead.

R. Brockman, owner of "Frisky" said today that he would not have taken any price for the dog. "She was the pride of the neighborhood kids and will be greatly missed by them as well as members of our family."

Alderman Clarence Clapp, chairman of the Public Works Department today, asked the co-operation of the public in the campaign for cleaning and beautifying the city becoming known as "Clean-up Week."

CANNERY STRIKE BECOMES QUIET

Bloody Scenes Changed to Peace Meeting at Sacramento

Stockton, Calif., April 24—(AP)—The bloody Stockton cannery strife moved today from a field of rioting, where it had been for several days past gassed, to peace meetings at Sacramento.

There a conference of canners' and labor representatives with Governor Frank F. Merriam broke out early today amid indications of a tentative agreement between factions over demands for wage increases, and union recognition.

A joint statement said canners and workers believed they were "not far from a satisfactory solution" but explained conferences with their individual groups would be necessary before resumption of the peace conference.

Battle to Save Lives

Doctors, meanwhile, battled to save the lives of two seriously wounded strikers injured in rioting which flared here yesterday when strikers attempted to halt a spinach-laden truck being taken to a plant, reopened in defiance of the strike.

The strike here was called by the Agricultural Workers Union.

Some 1,300 men were involved in the walkout. Most of the strikers were affiliated with members of the Agricultural Union. The strike crippled an industry valued at $8,000,000 annually in this rich San Joaquin Valley agricultural area.

CLOUDS LOWER OVER MADRID

Bring Respite From Insurgent Air Attack

Madrid, April 24 (AP)—Heavy rain clouds hanging low over this besieged capital provided respite today from Insurgent artillery attacks, while Republican Government underwent a drastic reorganization.

The authority of General Jose Miaja, the elderly civil and military Governor of Madrid since General Francisco Franco's big guns booted him out of Cuenca early in the war, it was limited to "strictly military affairs" by order of the Valencia Government. The Defense Junta was dissolved.

The only shout the city were quiet, but the dire situation of 1,000,000 insurgent fingers on Madrid's throat by Generalissimo Franco's big guns inflicts hope the lull would last long. Avia-tion remained in a leading role on other fronts.

The four girls, sisters, went to Roy Brown's home and woke him with the cry of fire in the barn and the local fire department.

Mr. Brown, Mr. Mundy and his wife and aroused the household.

The fire apparently started in the rear of the garage around the stove, Mr. Pedak said that when he left the building the fire in the stove was nearly out and could not give any reason for the cause.

Sentence following example of one year ago when he was running around the country without a driver's license. Verigin made no application for bail.

Instead he is setting an example of good behavior he was running around the country without a driver's license.

The charges were laid following incidents on the Nelson-Castlegar home here February 24 when the Doukhobor driver, John Konkin, and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred M. Erickson of Rossland.

The Rossland couple testified Verigin's car forced them five times as they drove on the highway and each time stopped their automobile in the middle of the road, bringing the Erickson car to a halt. Erickson said Verigin was driving, swearing in English, although he spoke mostly Russian.

Verigin testified he had seen a man speaking from beneath a canvas in the back of the Erickson car and thought it might be "people who were trying to steal that burned cleared buildings in the Kootenay district recently."

Verigin said he was swearing "because he could find no police help to stop the Erickson car." He denied being intoxicated.

Konkin testified Verigin was not drunk but had been drinking. He said the Erickson had done nothing to warrant being stopped.

DAILY SHORT STORY

A GAME FOR TWO

By JOHN WESTON

Deborah Elkins saw trouble ahead. She slowed the pace of the roadster as she approached the car beside the road and stopped when a tall figure planted itself squarely in front of her.

"Now, what in the world does he want with me?" she asked herself. "I can't help him and I won't give him a ride even if he is a bit good looking!"

He came to the side of the car, and she saw in his dark eyes a grim look of determination. It occurred to her that she might give him a lift to town.

"My car has gone bloocy, and I wonder if you will give me a lift? I am headed for the home of Mr. Elkins," he said briefly.

She looked at him sharply. She knew that her father had been trying to avoid process served from the city for a week. Was this handsome, tawny chap one of that annoying tribe?

"But I—"

"I am Marion Raines from the office of Stetson & Stetson," he explained.

"No, I don't think I will," she answered coolly. "Besides, I am on my way to town."

"I am sorry, but I am on my way to the Elkins country, too, so if you will please move over one seat, I'll drive," he said quietly.

"Well, what do you propose to do?" she demanded, amazed.

"To drive you to the Elkins place, then drive you to town," he answered serenely. "Please."

"I won't," she replied briefly. She thumped her foot on the floor throttle, but he had taken out the ignition key. The car was dead.

He asked her to move; on her refusal, he lifted her bodily from the seat into the next. Before she could stop him, he was under the wheel.

He smiled down to her. "I am sorry, and I apologize, but you see I've had to do what a dozen men haven't done."

"Indeed—and I ought to be down-right angry with you, but you are a bit interesting. I never ran across a man just like you—so near the caveman. I think," she said slowly, studying him.

Attracted in spite of herself to him, she made up her mind to pay him for his cool confiscation of her car and also prevent him if she could from ever reaching her father, for she was convinced that he was a process server—a young lawyer who had volunteered to serve it that father got for his services which would require his appearance in an annoying lawsuit.

She reached forward, and with practised hand jerked the ignition key from its socket. The car slowed down to a standstill.

He turned around, smiling. "Now, little girl, you must be good. Return that key, or right here you must take it away from you by force, and I almost think I would like to."

She clung to the key, almost wishing that she could try for the sake of the experience of having him, and yet angry at his calm assumption that he could take it from her. She returned the key with the feeling that here was a new kind of male.

The car rolled smoothly on, and then, over a rough bit of road, began to bump suggestively. She laughed in spite of herself. The old tire on the rear wheel had gone flat.

He stripped off his coat. "It's a case of putting on your spare, and have good!"

He laid his coat in the seat. Her eyes caught the glint of a legal-looking envelope, and a wild plan leaped into being. Cautiously, she drew out the envelope, extracted the contents, and replaced it, and sat innocently back.

"Now all the same game," she thought with delight.

Once more he took his seat, first glancing at the pocket to make sure his envelope was there, and the eventful journey continued.

Under the guidance of his capable hands, the car rapidly covered the remaining miles, and he came to the goal of his effort—the entrance to the Elkins home. He mounted the steps triumphantly.

"If you will wait, I will be glad to drive to your home or to town," he said gravely.

"This is my home," she said simply.

He hesitated, then she saw his features lighten. "I am sorry I should be this way, but I have no choice."

Then he went in.

The sound of voices reached her through the open door, her father's deep laughter loudest. Then the would-be process server came out, and she stepped in.

When she returned, her hold-up man was far down the road swinging with steady strides townward. She slid hurriedly into her car, pressed the throttle, and soon caught up with him. He turned a smiling face, and it dawned upon her that he was a good winner and holding a good loser.

"What, Mischief, did you do with those papers?" he asked, a man's broad grin on his face.

She laughed. "I just gave them back to him! I have always thought he ought to go and testify—and the other reason—well, I just plain like your WIT and ride with me!"

"Will I?" The frank admiration in his eyes averted her. "I certainly will because I want to show you my cavernal ancestor is about a million years old!"

"FEELING FINE"

"Let me give you a tip. I'm feeling fine. Headache and pains all gone. I never miss an appointment since I learned about Paradol. It's quick and never disappoints." 25 cents.

DR. CHASE'S PARADOL

LIBRARY CORNER

The story of the brilliant young Secretary of State during the reign of Queen Anne is told by Sir Charles Petrie in his biography "Bolingbroke". "So far superior to the generality", was Chesterfield's phrase for the mind of Bolingbroke, who quitted office for the last time before he had reached his thirty-sixth year. Though the pages of Sir Charles Petrie's book, . . . It is made clear that the evils of the time, adverse fortune, and his own weaknesses robbed him of his destiny. His one positive achievement, the Treaty of Utrecht holds new interest for a generation so strongly influenced by the Treaty of Versailles. Among the figures who crowd the scene, Marlborough is outstanding. It is interesting to compare this view of him with the very different picture given in Winston Churchill's "Marlborough".

Tales that describe the work of the pioneers, beachcombers and wreckers of the Cape, who scan the shore after a shipwreck, are told by Henry C. Eldredge in his book "Moonrakers of Cape Cod". There is peculiar charm in these pictures of Cape Cod which the author knows so well. Some are humorous, as of the rivalries between towns; some are dramatic, of the wild storms and dangerous shoals, and of the heroism of beachcombers in their efforts to save ships and sailors. Mr. Eldredge offers shrewd observations on the influence of the beach on even the casual visitor who now feels the desire to tramp the sands looking for whatever the surf may have washed ashore.

"Drums in the Balkan Night" by John B. McCulloch records the travels of two young Americans who chose to spend their honeymoon in the little-known corners of Southeastern Europe. Fascinated by the ways of the Balkans, they prolonged their journey to two years and during that time established close friendships with natives of the six Balkan lands. The author gives thumbnail sketches of leading Balkan politicians. He considers the field of Balkan politics completely changed by the successes of Hitler and Mussolini. At the close of the book he leaves the reader with the important question, "Will the Balkan Peninsula echo again to the drum beat of marching armies . . . ?" With rumors of war on all sides it is a pleasant surprise to discover an optimistic view. Walter Mills in his small book "Armed Without Alarm" has made an honest effort to analyse the complex situation of Europe today. Emil Lengyel in the New York Times says "Mr. Mills has earned the gratitude of those who believe that the cause of peace is poorly served by observers who help create an atmosphere of fatalism." —K. Where Gold is Stored

Within the next few months, the Federal Government expects to occupy its new $1,000,000 mint, heralded guaranteed by its designers and constructors to be the most burglar-proof and fool-proof construction of its kind ever erected.

It will replace the famous old mint that has been one of the curiosities of San Francisco for half a century. It will take the centre of mining interests out of the down-town section of the city to the top of a rocky summit, where natural surroundings have combined with the latest architectural genius in making the mint safe.

The new mint will be virtually automatically defensive against a burglar or a raiding party. It is so equipped that defenders will be able to call out not only the San Francisco fire and police department but the army stationed at the Presidio.

Besides being burglar proof, it is declared to be virtually inaccessible even to a fly.

Among a few of the safety gadgets that are being installed are bullet proof windows, thick as a man's thumb but with openings just large enough to let machine guns protrude. Then there is the automatic tear gas machinery for flooding the entire establishment.

Tunneling into such a building is believed to have been circumvented not only by the architectural precautions taken in its foundations but by the fact that it is located on top of a hillock of solid rock that could hardly be "tunneled" short of conjuring.

The vast burglar alarm system is declared to be the most extensive protective measure of its kind ever installed in a mint.

There will be only two entrances to the building—one in the front and one in the rear—and each will possible be protected by a barred guard room. The access doors will be operated electrically.

According to mint officials, if any untoward incident should occur, the mint equipment will act in the following manner:

Alarms will be flashed automatically throughout the building.

A short-wave radio station will call the San Francisco police department and mobilize the United States troops stationed at the Presidio.

Tear gas automatically will spout from a dozen sources.

If the attack is at night, floodlights will illuminate not only the interior but the exterior as well.

All nine of the huge vaults will be equipped with sound detectors so delicate that they can distinguish the difference between the ring of a genuine coin and a counterfeit.

Precautions even have been taken to keep the air from stealing any of Uncle Sam's gold from the new sanctuary.

On the top floor is being installed a giant lung—or ventilating system—which will suck all of the air of the entire mint into one room. Experience in the old mint has demonstrated that air had the bad habit of lapping up particles of gold dust and carrying them away —particles that in the long run amount to large sums.

So, in the new mint, even the air won't be allowed to escape with gold. It will be gently conducted by the mint's lung into a single room where the dust will be allowed to settle. Then the dust will be put through a sifting operation and the gold recovered.

All in all, the designers and constructors of the mint believe that even a burglar to get in, or for a particle of gold dust to get out will be insane one in the front and one in the rear—and each will possible.

QUEEN FAVORS DRESS FITTER OF CHILDHOOD

Her Majesty Likes Ice Blue—This Shade Likely to Become Popular As the Coronation Approaches.

By HOLLIE McGEE

LONDON—Queen Elizabeth will have the fittings for her coronation gown under the watchful eye of the same petite-haired dressmaker who supervised the making of her first pink chiffon ball dress for her 1916 coming-out party.

The same seamstress flitted her in the white satin gown in which she was first presented to King George V and Queen Mary at Buckingham Palace and for her mediaeval silver lame wedding gown. All her Majesty's "red letter day" dresses have come from the same house since she was 14.

"Miss Little Lady Elizabeth' had simple and feminine tastes when she first came to us with her mother," the dressmaker said. "Now when we go to Buckingham Palace to fit her, it seems as if she has not a moment to herself. She is going out so much we keep a staff busy on her waist robe all the time, some cutting, some fitting, some finishing. The other day we made a dress for the Queen at 24 hours' notice to meet an emergency."

The 36-hour dress, of ice blue re-embroidered or "outlined" peap d'ange lace with a wide silver belt, was worn by her Majesty at an afternoon party for the wives of members of the diplomatic corps—many of whom also wore blue out of compliment to their hostess.

The Queen is making increasing use of bits particular shade"; the seamstress remarked and then showed a gorgeous gown of ice blue lame, with bodice solidly embroidered with sequin and diamante and wide gleaming shoulder straps. It is to be worn on several important occasions, including the state visit to Liverpool.

A day ensemble with redingote of navy wool lace, simply made over a straight-lined tailored dress of ice-blue silk and wool with navy soutache loped embroidery outlining the Peter Pan collar and oval vestee finished with a tassel and cord tie, was another recent choice of her Majesty.

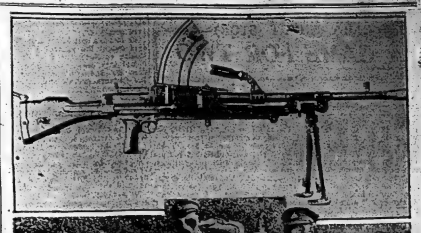
The piece de resistance at Handley and Sermour workrooms at the moment, however, is the ivory satin gown the Queen will wear at the Coronation. Designs for the embroidery were completed Jan. 1, but it will be some weeks before the work itself is finished. The material is a heavy white satin made form "silk from silf-worms born and bred in England and woven in England," the dressmaker explained proudly.

Using Maple Leaves.

The dress is very simple and on princess lines as it will be practically covered with heavy gold embroidery. There is a straight panel down the front, which is all in one piece. At each side are circular panels from the knees, which will join the circular train at the back. This train will be full-length and two yards on the ground.

In the embroidery which incorporates the floral emblems of the different dominions and colonies, extensive use has been made of maple leaves. "They lend themselves so well to decorative design," was the explanation.

Fine gold thread, appliqued lame and studded with brilliant touches of diamante are being used to give effect to the different emblems. At the foot of the dress lotuses of India will float on a shimmering wave of silver cloth, a panel of embroidery extends from hem to neck and the fern of New Zealand and tiny wattle blossoms of Australia appear near the square decolletage. The tiny sleeves will be slashed at the top and inset with flounces of fine old lace.



SUCCEEDS FATHER DIVINE

After having been captured by the police and locked in a follower's home at Milford, Conn., by police who were searching for him on an assault charge, George Baker, alias Father Divine, is said to have admitted "I am all washed up." At the same time Viola Wilson, above) known to followers of Father Divine as "Faithful Mary" took the opportunity to seize the reins of leadership and proclaim herself the new leader of what remains of the "Faithful Mary" has repudiated the Harlem Messiah, announcing that his "miraculous" cure of her was a hoax.

JAIL NEWEST "HEAVEN" FOR FATHER DIVINE

The clang of steel doors brought shudders to "Father Divine" self-styled "Messiah" and "God" to his several thousand colored and white followers, as he was jailed at Milford, Conn. He is waiting as a fugitive from justice while a felonious assault charge hanging over his head, since a process-server was beaten and a friend stabbed, trying to serve him with papers in his Harlem "heaven". Milford police, acting on a tip, found him crouching in the cellar of his Milford "kingdom" when they raided the place. Police had a slight scuffle with some of his followers here who insisted that they "can't arrest God!"

BRITISH ARMY E QUIPMENT TO BE USED BY CANADIANS

The plan of Hon. Ian Mackenzie some of which is to be manufactured in Canada, Contracts for the construction of large bombing and other types of aeroplanes have already been called for and it is expected contracts for the construction of four mine sweepers will be let, as was outlined before the House of Commons, is rapidly being pushed forward, according to reports from Ottawa. The Canadian armament plan calls for the use of much British army equipment, including arms which will be distributed to all units to replace the Lewis gun. The Bren gun, shown in the Upper photograph, is a light machine gun which can be fired from a tripod or from the shoulder. A Czechoslovakian arm, it has been adopted by the British army after four years of experiments. The British tanks, shown in the lower photograph, are of a lighter make than those used during the great war.

About the Goat

Canadian farm statistics do not list goats, possibly because so many people who are not farmers keep a goat or two on their grounds. As one motors around the county the number of tethered goats seen is increasing. There is no means of ascertaining the number in this country, but the United States Department of Agriculture does take a census, and at the last count the number of goats was over 5,00,000.

It is interesting to note, therefore, that the New Jersey College of Agriculture has undertaken the milk testing of goats and their general improvement and propagation, believing in the value of goat milk and goat meat. There is a good deal of prejudice against goat milk, yet it is highly esteemed by medical men for invalids and infants. Goats do not get the same attention that cows do, and the so-called "goaty" flavor of the milk is due to lack of cleanliness. Provided the udders are washed before milking there is no unpleasant flavor whatever. The milk is relatively rich in butter-fat and casein. Normally it is 85.51 per cent water, 3.50 casein, 1.00 albumin, 4.46 milk sugar, 4.78 butter-fat, and .76 ash. Unlike the cow, the goat is rarely infected with tuberculosis, hence its value for invalids and children. Goat cheese is palatable, mild and nourishing. The butter is white, but this is corrected by artificial coloring.

The goat has been the subject of jest, due, perhaps, to its quaint human-like beard, but its usefulness has been recognized for centuries. The Angora is valued chiefly for its coat, but the milch goats most suitable for milk counts as Saanen and Toggenburgs, the original home of which are Switzerland.

The supervisor of the New Jersey College tests, Dr. J. W. Bartlett, believes the records will show that for small families the goat is more useful than the cow." There are many families who could neither buy nor pasture a cow—we would recommend the goat to the owner of "Jessie" at Riverside, Windsor — and their waste could be more economically met by a goat.

So don't be afraid to "get your goat".—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Cutting the Potato Eye

The airplane, the potato and the rapid opening of Canada's Northland may unite as a triumvirate of new business.

Everyone who has had to do with a farm or garden knows that now or now-about is the time when the seed potatoes are cut in right-sized pieces, with the proper number of "eyes" for planting. That is all right for the home gardener or even for the farmer who has grown his own seed potatoes for the season's planting.

But imagine a far-northern mine, say a gold mine, whose working force is rapidly increasing. At the mine, or near it, is a new town, and around the town is a fringe of new gardens and farms. One of the most-needed supplies for such a community is potatoes. Transport is by airplane. This machine is a lady—it prefers not to put on weight. Potatoes are heavy and the freight charges are high.

The seed store faced this problem of transport right now, and solved it at least to meet a relatively small demand. But the rapid development of the North may greatly increase this business.

What is really wanted for planting is not the potato, but the "eye". By proper means, this can be separated from the tuber without serious injury to reproductive quality. Prepared for shipment, it weighs only half an ounce and can be supplied in the ordinary way for a cent or two—depending at the variety—freight prepaid. As the mining community is usually "flush" the settler on his new farm may find this new seed ideally suitable for his potato growing.

Experiments have proven that, even in a generally unfavorable season, seed of this form produces tubers at the average rate of one pound for each "eye" planted, and under more favorable conditions the crop will run from 200 to 600 bushels to the acre—the average yield for all Canada in 1933 was about 78 bushels to the acre.

This use of the potato "eye" may turn out to be a true invention, a combination for new purposes of device already known; like the railway, for instance, which combined the coach, the metal rail and the wait engine in proper relation to children every continent. —Ottawa Journal.

FIREMAN KILLED, TRAIN RUNS INTO WASHOUT

Stratford and Woodstock Face Big Flood Losses; Steady Rain Fills Rivers

Riverside Properties at Stratford and Woodstock Swamped

BRIDGE SUBMERGED

Motorist Rescued at Brantford—Five Feet of Water in Subway

Woodstock, Ont., Apr. 26 (CP)—An eastbound Canadian National passenger train was reported derailed at Beachville four miles west of Woodstock this afternoon.

The fireman was reported killed and the engineer pinned in the engine, critically injured. An emergency wrecking crew from Stratford worked desperately to release him. No other injured were reported although the train, the intercity limited running from Chicago to Montreal, was carrying a considerable number of passengers. They were given a severe shaking up but none was hurt. The baggageman was severely jolted, but was able to walk to the quary close by for assistance for the engine crew.

Engine Drops.

The accident occurred when the train hit a washout in the embankment which at that point is 10 or 12 feet high. For some strange reason, the engine, tender and baggage car dropped upright to the lower level. None of the coaches overturned.

The passengers who were unable to assist in extricating the engineer from his prison in the engine cab gathered in the two parlor cars on the end of the train which also carried several day coaches and a baggage car.

Undermined by flood waters, between 30 and 40 feet of Canadian Pacific Railway main line track threatened today to crash into a 30-foot washout. The roadbed was washed out for about 300 yards where the train overturned this afternoon. The line crew tearing away the bending rails suspended the a bridge.

Trains were rerouted from Galt to Paris and over Canadian National Railways tracks to London. Workmen attempted to save the signal box from being washed away.

Report Bridge At Risk

Throughout Western Ontario rain-flooded rivers overflowed their banks and threatened property damage.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen Science Service Meteorologist

The best climate! Ward has said that there is no place in the world, where, climate, is perfect all the time. The best climate in general is that which causes people to feel comfortable. He particular the best climate for most people is that climate which is not extreme and has frequent but moderate weather changes. We do not thrive on monotony, even in climate. The ideal weather would vary during the day and year. A breeze to keep it refreshing, but if continued would produce a gale. The temperature cannot certainly have great value if determined by the program of races residing there.

QUARTER MILE OF ROPE USED

Hydro Truck is at Last Drawn Out of Flood Waters

Dorchester, Ont., April 26—(CP) A quarter-mile of tow rope was necessary today to rescue a stranded hydro department truck from rising flood waters on the Hamilton Road.

The truck was stalled when it tried to dash through a half-mile strip of road covered with two feet of water. Water rose rapidly about the truck and covered the engine hood before it was dragged to high land.

Hydro men in a rowboat drifted down the road, pulling a quarter-mile rope for tow rope. They fastened it to the front of the truck, and then steered while a wreckers' truck pulled it out of the water.

About eight school children on Dorchester were faced with the prospect of a long journey to their homes after school today when the flood water coming up at the rate of five and a half feet an hour cut off their customary route home. Arrangements are being made to take them home by another route.

Ninety percent. of the houses in Dorchester Village had flooded cellars and continuously rising water caused considerable apprehension. The Thames River overflowed its banks on the southside, carrying with it pilings, outhouses, trees, and anything else in its path before it.

Busmen's Strike, It is Feared, May Cripple London on May 12

Men Adamant in Decision Not to Accept Board's Offer

STRIKE DATED MAY 1

By I. NORMAN SMITH

London, Apr. 26 (CP)—The almost fantastic thought London might be crippled by a bus strike on Coronation day was forecast in the minds of 10,000,000 people here today.

Unless the London Transport Board in the dispute between busmen and the London passenger Transport Board agrees to hold a meeting with both parties at 4.15 p.m. this afternoon.

From Empress Fears.

As the boss of Metropolitan newspapers indicated real fear the threatened strike would take place May 1. The men were adamant in their decision not to accept the board's offer to submit to arbitration their demand for a 7½-hour day, nor would they agree to a month's truce to carry the threatened crisis over the coronation period.

Many persons generally conceded that busmen work under strenuous pressure in the maelstrom of London traffic, but deplored their refusal to submit the question to arbitration.

The Times said that if the bus employees broke their contracts "they can do serious injury to the public which employs them and is deliberately chosen." The paper cited the board's retort that the average working time of the men actually was little more than six hours, including time spent sitting-on-the-job relief, etc., brought it to a little more than seven hours.

"Public Calamity"

The News Chronicle on the other hand, identified it by its genuine grievances but urged them to accept the arbitration offer "in spite of the goodwill and support of the public in a dispute which in the middle of the coronation celebrations would be in the nature of a public calamity." The paper declared any agreement arising from arbitration would be retroactive to February.

The Daily Express dismissed the situation quickly, saying the transport board has not admitted the case reasonably and that the business should be left to arbitration. "Or cattle-ride waiting a strike."

"WATCH JUNE 11" MARTIN ADVISES OSHAWA WORKERS

Agreement Signed Can be Terminated on That Date

ORGANIZERS PRESENT

Hepburn Criticized by Both Martin And Thompson

Oshawa, Ont., April 26 (CP)—General Motors employees, their 16-day strike ended, answered the call of the giant motor plant's whistles early today and trooped back to their benches.

Eighteen days ago—at 8 a.m., April 8—they went on strike for higher wages, better working conditions and Union recognition. An agreement signed Friday ended the dispute.

Settlement brought peace to this industrial city, 35 miles east of Toronto, and ended one of the most bitter disputes in Ontario's history. Premier Hepburn took the Ontario cabinet with resignation in his hand when Premier Duplessis of Quebec his labor post and Arthur Roebuck gave up the Attorney-Generalship. Premier Hepburn disagreed with Premier Hepburn's policy in handling the strike.

Recognition of the International Automobile Workers of America, which forms part of John L. Lewis' vast committee for industrial organization in the United States, was the stumbling block in all negotiations previous to the final conference in Premier Hepburn's office. It was at this conference that terms were drawn which the strikers on Friday found acceptable and which were signed on their behalf and by company representatives that same day.

Even Keel Now

Even as the happy ending was being written by men and women returning to their jobs however, and Union recognition was the chief issue, the stumbling block in all negotiations previous to the final conference in Premier Hepburn's office. It was at this conference that terms were drawn which the strikers on Friday found acceptable and which were signed on their behalf and by company representatives that same day.

Even as the happy ending was being written by men and women returning to their jobs however, there remained a suggestion that the hatches had not been completely buried. Hugh Thompson, C.I.O. organizer, who played a leading role in the strike, told a mass meeting of General Motors employees Saturday night to "watch June 11."

Thompson reminded the workers notice of termination of the agreement could be served June 11 on the same date as the agreement between General Motors Corporation and its United States employees. He suggested the Canadian agreement be carefully observed and they could proceed to make a dope out of him."

Homer Martin, president of the International Union, also spoke and the Union leaders were greeted on their appearance by the meeting. The workers continued their celebration throughout Sunday and Monday, hailing as a victory the agreement which gave them most of their demands.

British Gov't Protests Interference on High Seas

COINCIDENCE SEEN IN TWO EVENTS

Party And Suicide in Park Avenue Not Associated

New ork, Apr. 26 (AP) — The simple label of "coincidence" was placed by police today upon the suicide of a 25-year-old actress and the grilling of about 100 party-bound "mystery guests" in the lobby of her Park Avenue apartment house while she was inhaling gas.

The actress was Mrs. Helen Kim Mont, one-month bride of James Mont, fashionable interior decorator. Police closed the case, which at first appeared to have elements of a mystery thriller, with the assertion the phantom party and the suicide were unconnected.

"Mystery Guests"

The party guests assembled in the lobby as the result of a chain-letter hoax perpetrated by bored Park Avenue hunters, police indicated. The invitations were sent out merely naming the Park Avenue address, and not Mrs. Mont's apartment, and no "guests" were found who knew Mrs. Mont.

The actress was unaware of the crowd in the lobby, police said, and it was only coincidence she took her life as they gathered, wondering when the festivities would begin.

LOCAL BUSINESS MAN RECOVERS LOST PEN BY A COINCIDENCE

The pressure of business crushed the brow of the prominent local businessman as he signed the cheque on the dotted line at the counter of a downtown bank on Saturday afternoon turned to the wicket and said ill over the polished wood.

Behind him lay his fine expensive fountain pen thoughtlessly neglected.

It was later that evening and another cheque was in process of being signed this time by a customer of the businessman described in little accents.

"By golly, there's a pen I picked up somewhere today, but I can't remember where," commented the friend branching for new acquisition.

"I'd know it anywhere," suddenly commented the businessman, reaching out grasping the pen, identified it by its peculiar markings and remembering where he had left in, all in one brief motion.

EIBAR BURNED IS VAST FURNACE

Rebels Expect to Occupy Ruins of Town on Tuesday

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Boarder, April 26 (AP)—Government artillery and bombers shelled the town of Eibar, Spanish Insurgents declared today, and turned it into a "vast furnace" before evacuating in the face of a northern Insurgent advance against Eibar and Bilbao.

The troops of General Francisco Franco, a new drive against the Basque capital, expected to occupy the ruins of Eibar, one of Spain's principal arms manufacturing towns, tomorrow.

Occupation of Verris, communication centre, already had cut off Durango, key city to Bilbao, from Eibar, which is a short distance to the east. Durango is 12 miles southeast of Bilbao.

PEDESTRIANS KNOCKED DOWN

Brantford, Ont., April 26 (CP)—Police here today sought a motorist who knocked down two pedestrians at once last night. The driver stopped to ask if the two had been seriously hurt, then drove on. P. G. Hindes and his daughter, Annie, were thrown to the pavement and hurt about the legs, arms, failed to open. His fatal flight began with a jump from a plane at 6,000 feet before a crowd of 30,000 at Air races (Wired Photo).

Medical help was summoned and the injured youth had his wounds dressed. The dog was dispatched by Police Constable Wm. Evans.

Mr. Chant and his deputy, H. A. Craig, negotiated the purchase at Pekisko last week on a visit to southern Alberta, he said. The bull will not be handed over until August, after it has appeared in Western Canada exhibitions. It may also be shown at Toronto.

Mr. Chant declared the animal "the best bull ever purchased by the province and it will not unmindful of excellent purchases made in the past."

The purchase price was not disclosed, and Mr. Chant would not say whether the cheque would be made out to the rancher or to the Duke of Windsor.

BUSINESS HOUSES ARE FLOOD-SWEPT IN JOHNSTOWN, PA.

Residents Alarmed as They Recall Disasters of Past

OHIO R. SWOLLEN

Potomac Feet River Rises Six Above Flood Level

Johnstown, Pa., Apr. 26 (AP)—Swollen waters from the Conemaugh and Stoney Creek Rivers surged into low-lying streets of Johnstown today, inundating business houses and residences and threatening to flood the downtown area. An all-night rain sent the streams more than a foot above flood stage.

Alarmed residents, recalling the two disastrous floods which swept the city in the past half century began vacating homes.

Ohio Is Climbing.

Pittsburgh, Apr. 26 (AP) — The mighty Ohio River, swollen from rains over virtually its entire 900-mile watershed, climbed toward the 25-foot flood stage here today. The Allegheny and the Monongahela, which unite here to form the Ohio, rose toward their highest marks since last January. More than an inch of rain in some sections more than two inches—was recorded over the area.

Normally placid mountain creeks left their banks to become highways and rushed through streets of some villages.

Rain Still Falling.

Cumberland, Md., Apr. 26 (AP)—The Potomac River here rose six feet above flood stage today and continued to move into more parts of their storms in the low-lying business section of the town. Rain was falling on the headwaters of the river and the crest of the flood was not in sight. Water was standing in streets in the downtown districts from two to four feet high enough to stop traffic.

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

London, Apr. 26 (CP)—Sir Henry Chilton, British Ambassador at Hendaye on the Franco-Spanish frontier, received telegraphic instructions this morning to make formal protest to the Spanish insurgent authorities at Salamanca against interference with three British foodships when they were about to enter Bilbao harbor last Friday.

The actual wording of the protest was left to Sir Henry but the position of the British government was clear: Britain will not tolerate interference with British shipping engaged in legitimate business on the high seas. If necessary British warships will use force.

The British protest is a sequel to the sensational running of the Franco "blockade" by British foodships. While they were still outside territorial waters, a Spanish insurgent cruiser fired across the bows of the British merchantmen.

Britain's giant battle cruiser Hood, about three miles away, signalled a protest to the Spanish cruiser and cleared for action. The Spanish cruiser steamed away. The British ships entered Bilbao.

The incident claim that Spanish territorial waters extend six miles from the coast and that the British ships already were in territorial waters when stopped in rejection of the British government. Britain traditionally holds to the three-mile limit for territorial waters. Outside that limit lie the high seas.

Toronto, Apr. 26 (CP)—Mr. Justice Gillanders today confirmed a London judgment last week that liquidation of the Dyment Securities Loan and Savings Company were entitled to recover $2,504,422 from the estate of the late Simon Dyment which had been fraudulently converted by his son.

Today's order was made on the application of A. T. Sylvester acting for London and Western Trusts Co. No one appeared for Duncan F. McCrea and George Dyment, executors of the will of Mr. Dyment.

"SWAMP RABBITS" INFEST ZWICK'S IS.

Two pair of rabbits liberated on Zwick's Island late last fall when a paternal order to "get rid of the pests" was handed down to a local juvenile may be the progenitors of long-eared, nibbling families which will soon overrun the sparse-foliaged island and spread to the nearby marshes, or migrate to Prince Edward County. Latest reports of observers indicate that a new breed of "swamp rabbit" has been evolved from the two pair of domestic bunnies that were sadly liberated by their youthful owner last year, and that their numbers have increased by "leaps and bounds."

CHURCH GIVEN ITS PROPER PLACE

Rev. J. Semple Tells of Changes Church Has Wrought

"If some persons would read one history in the Church for every dozen novels, they would reap ample reward," declared Rev. Dr. Semple on Sunday evening, when he spoke on the subject "Would Jesus go to Church?"

The Church, he said, was the body of Christ, it must use His hand, His feet, His voice in this modern world. The Church is also called the Body of Christ.

Dr. Semple's sermon was a survey of what the Church has stood for throughout history, mainly in its social implications. The Church put the shackles on physical after generations upon slavery, it placed a new valuation on the individual human life, through it Christianity has given woman her rightful place, it has triumphed over the ages of persecution, of asceticism, religious wars, the indifference and conventionality of the eighteenth century and the age of scepticism of the nineteenth century. It has been responsible for missionary effort all through the centuries.

No Story Like That of Church

"To the contemporary the Church is second only to the scourge of collapse and yet it has grown stronger after each onslaught of the enemy. The Church has made mistakes, according to Chesterton, when the intellectual and conventionality of the eighteenth century and the age of scepticism of the nineteenth arose. It has been responsible for missionary effort all through the centuries.

Chapter 31

A LIES COMING CROWDS

At the end of the week, on Friday, Stanley Rye turned up at Louisland. David had been haunting the apartment meanwhile, and he and Irene had wrangled over Stanley and Stanley's intentions with such fierce jealousy and such fierce understanding that Anne was beginning to think of him as an issue rather than as a man. But she did not look like clipped, familiar voice, the voice that did most strange things to her stability, she forgot all that; she forgot that she had planned a campaign to gain his interest, she knew only that he was here and that she was happy.

"I couldn't stay away," he announced.

"Did you 'yeard in"? ?

She looked at his quickly, and his laugh, too, was quick, and quickly crossed. But his voice was easy.

"How you do take me up," he complained, settling his long, lean frame, dropping his head sideways because they would not fit under the table. His words meant nothing; it was his expression that puzzled her, an odd, wondering expression that brought the color to her face.

He thought her beautiful, infinitely desirable, with the flush on her cheeks and shining eyes, with her lovely were her soft, bright expectancy. The broken lilac in a vase was noticed hands — were slim, long-fingered, pale. A painted latticework, breaking into pale pink blooms, made an alcove for the table; delicately it was there, he snapped off one paper blossom and laid it on the doll's bodice between hands.

"I was thinking," he said inconsequently, "your hands—do you remember, 'paler than the lotus buds that float'?"

"They never dust the lotus buds here." Anne told him compendiously and took laughter.

"It was a foolish thing to say," Stanley conceded after a moment. "I mean it sounded foolish. But I thought it. I wanted—do you understand?—to say something nice to you, for you don't like my pretty speeches."

Floundering, he sent her an appealing glance.

"I liked it," Anne relieved him briefly.

"You did, eh?"

Another pause.

"Our party didn't go very well the other night, did it?" he remarked presently, "You didn't have much fun."

"I hardly deserved to." said Anne, reddening. "I behaved very badly."

"No; it was my fault, but I was worried about you."

Anne said nothing.

"You don't like Nancy, do you?"

"Why, of course," she was beginning. "Not very much," she ended honestly.

The man bit his lip. For a moment the girl saw that he meant to argue, meant to tabulate Nancy's charms and to win an effort to upset the openly confessed reverence. Her own face stiffened. Stanley shrugged and smiled.

"The point is that you didn't have any fun," he continued, gritty sidestepping the matter of Nancy Carr. "After all, that's the important thing. I want to ask you to another party to make up for that one, a party just for you. Not next or the night club, or we might drive out to Ben Talley's flying fun—what?"

"Hello, Anne. How do you do, Mr. Rye?"

"I'm afraid—why, how do you do, Mr. Talley," a shade uncertainly.

As a matter of fact, two rows before, with a number of other reporters, David had interviewed Stanley Rye, just returned from Russia. Afterwards, on occasion he met the man, but there was no reason thing you want. What kind of a party are you having, Anne?"

The solution of a problem which had troubled her for days was in her hands; she started to speak, and then it was her turn to hesitate. Her chin cupped on her elbows, she assiduously watched the shifting, colorful floor beyond Stanley's shoulder.

"Why don't we dance now while I think it over?"

They danced several times and then, flushed and damp, they strolled toward the table. David was sitting there. Anne had not seen him come in, but strangely enough she felt no particular anxiety; she only hoped that David would be pleased. And, to do him justice, David intended to be pleased.

He rose at their approach, a stolky man with big, square hands and a square, good-looking, solid face; why Stanley Rye should have recalled meeting a casual newspaper reporter, David did not really mean annoyed by his own slip than by Stanley's brief recognition. Stanley might have gone well except for Anne's swift, young color, which travelled from David to Stanley, a color which David misinterpreted as apologetic.

It occurred to him that Stanley Rye was pretty much of a snuffer, shirt, and this was as good a time as any to let Anne discover the fact.

"You won't remember me, Mr. Rye," he said, and added, "Mr. Blair. I'm David Blair. I work for one of the newspapers that print pictures of the Palm Beach girls. I'm glad to hop for Labrador."

It was his tone, Anne's heart began to sink. She dared not look at either man.

"And I'm sure you don't remember my interviewing you two years ago when you were in Russia, and you said, 'David was saying.

"I'm sorry," Stanley said, flushing.

Everybody in the office has good reason to remember that interview," David continued agreeably, as one man of the world to another. He chuckled in secret amusement about the article. "I've been raised about that interview plenty. Around the city room every statement on conditions in Russia has been used ever since as an example of what Americans in Russia aren't s."

Stanley politely joined in David's laugh, but he was not amused—like Russian trip was a sore spot. He almost been involved about his published opinions. He disliked David as completely and thoroughly as he disliked him.

"I was only a kid," Stanley explained, his voice pitched in a voice that he kept lightly indulgent. "I was in Moscow three times—once with the officials pretty much took me in."

"Cold braid does have that effect sometimes." David agreed. He shot Anne a triumphant glance at once and received in return a deadly look that seemed to question his parentage.

"Why don't you go home?" Why don't you go jump off a dock?" Anne wanted to suggest, but she could not. "Let's sit down," she managed nervously.

There were only two chairs. Both men insisted that she sit and then in the fashion of two strange bulldogs with a single bone, they stood over the recumbent object. David took one side, Stanley on the other. Both remained standing. At the same moment she hated both with an equal fervor. They were alike beyond belief.

"This is silly," she said abruptly, "I'll get Cora."

Before either could stop her, she sprang to her feet and fled. When she returned with Cora, David and another chair she knew from their attitudes that nothing had been said. They changed not one word during her absence. She firmly wedged herself in the chair between them. This was going to be terrible, she thought. She was glad they had to talk about!

David settled that.

He could talk well when he chose, and he chose now to take command of the conversation. He talked expansively, confidentially, steadily, and exclusively to Anne—talked of places they had been, of shows they had seen, of conversations they had had. "You remember that time you were the blue dress, the one I liked," or "You remember that night you came down to the office and we hung for hours on the telephone and Anne cried when your candidate lost New York State," or, "that time on Long Island when the drunk took you for his sister."

His memories were very exact, exhaustive and intimate. To Anne, in an agony of nerves and rebellion, they seemed to stretch back almost to cradle days. Had she ever met her little bad an adventure that did not include David at her elbow? Had she ever selected a frock he had not approved or criticized? Had she ever had a thought not shared with him?

Stanley's face grew darker and darker. His dislike of David mounted to hatred, a hatred so strong that even Stanley himself was surprised by it. Surely, he told himself, there was no reason for hating a man because he was rude and a boor. He never had before. But he hated David and disliked listened intently, avidly to every word he said. He was unwillingly and mysteriously fascinated by the picture of Anne that the other was drawing so skilfully and accurately.

Anne sitting a party; Anne in a kitchen scrambling eggs and dropping one into the soup; Anne in that special dress of deep blue that so perfectly matched her eyes.

Anne dreamily stopped listening. In the beginning she had tried to modify some of David's revelations, so suggest that she did have a part connected with him, but her efforts had been unsuccessful. She was only waiting now for him to go, and praying that it would be soon, radiating exactly what she would say to him the next time he called, plotting some horrible revenge. Suddenly a change in his tone caught her attention.

"Nick Baker lent me his car. You know the car," he addressed her, appearing to speak to Anne and with himself. "I thought you and I, and Irene, if she can get away, might run to Aunt Allie's place over the week-end, start early Saturday afternoon, getting back late Sunday."

Here was an opportunity to show him what she considered his baby-vice. Anne seized it.

"You know very well that I can't get away from Louisland over a weekend!" she said coldly.

David's bubble exploded. He knew that his conduct had been reasonable, that his hurry of impulse and hurt pride conquered his reason.

"Is that so"?

"It is, sir," the girl assured him in a freezing tone.

"You're getting off, aren't you, for the week-end every other week?"

It was one of those moments. Anne knew it, was only surprised at it again. The silence seemed endless, but it was only a few seconds before Stanley spoke.

Perhaps, that's because I asked her instead of you," he said pleasantly, with a glance at Anne that told her that he knew her secrets.

But she did not dismiss them. They remained after she had gone, after Allie on his departure, an uneasy, shamed departure that did nothing to allay Anne's anger or her burning humiliation. She blamed, him for everything.

"Do you feel like dancing again?" Stanley inquired, trying, she thought, to make things easy for her. He was trying to do that.

Nevertheless she misunderstood his feelings. He was curious, naturally, as to her reaction, but his chief emotion was relief that David had gone. Anne, he told himself, had in a fever of nervous dread. She had been frightened during the last awkward interval of his stay, never to be alone again with Anne Rye. She looked steadily at Stanley now, "Can't I wait to dance? I want to explain," she began bravely, proudly.

"There's nothing to explain."

"You say that. It's not true. There's a great deal to explain, but I—I don't know just how to tackle it."

She smiled wanly.

"Then don't tackle it at all." She shook her head.

"Girls are more dishonorable than men," she said, "they talk more about things they shouldn't talk about." she fumbled along difficultly and wretchedly. "I'm a kid, Stanley. I love her, her name's Irene Ives. And I mentioned meeting you and—and—"

Once more she paused. She could see him no worse had she been confessing to murder.

"Please," he begged her. "Please don't talk about it any more."

"Anyhow, I lied—I said that I was going to a party, and I was, even giving. And—and David was there."

Is he always at your place?" Stanley asked, his voice strangely certainly, but one she blessed him for.

"He did rather give that impression," she admitted. "Anyhow I'm not going to have him coming there any more. I'm not—I'm not that."

She could laugh now—an uncertain laugh, but a laugh.

"He wasn't like himself tonight; he was horrid tonight. Usually he's nice."

Stanley seemed dubious, and she felt further obliged to defend Dave's virtues, or one thing, to her tonight they appeared rather few. After all, he was with us once when we all they danced. Not until he was leaving, Anne, that you were like today."

"He were to have a week and party."

"So we're not to have a week-end party."

LOVE OF ENTERTAINMENT

The question of leisure would be one of the greatest problems if some efficiency engineers' plans were carried out—they say that enough production would be possible for the whole earth if everyone worked only four hours a day and so they suggest it.

But what to do with that vast amount of unrestricted leisure which would be every man's possibly, but not every woman's for no one yet has found a way to keep womankind from working longer than the hours that the husband and breadwinner works! This vast issue is something which has baffled social scientists, ministers, statesmen, editors and reformers, who are not yet within sight of the Utopian land of little work and much time on the hands.

A New York Times writer says that it is supposed, at least by moralists, that "if we had much leisure, we would devote it to reading, listening to uplifting music, contemplating beauty, doing good works, enjoying healthful recreation. Alas! for the innocence."

Prof. Edward L. Thorndike, a leader of experimental psychology, sees the joy of life as a prime factor in such a phase and he analyzes it to say that the craving for entertainment is so insatiable that most persons would yield themselves wholeheartedly to joyriding, dancing, games, sports, listening to the radio, going to the movies and other forms of amusement.

He figures out five to eight hours on care of the body and personal appearance, routine eating ten hours of a man's time and eight hours of a woman's, to leave forty hours a week for glorious leisure or self-development. He discovers that 25 hours of this time is now spent on entertainment, in gratifying a desire for companionship and in games and sports. He adds that the electric lamps which were supposed to lead men to study lead mostly to Main street.

A table by Prof. Nissen introduces Prof. Thorndike's article in the Scientific Monthly, and it gives an analysis of a day in the life of a chimpanzee in the jungle. The Times editor remarks: "Accepting it as it stands, the young chimpanzee bouncing with life makes a good showing, even though there is no evidence that he improves his mind or consciously basks in beauty or thinks high moral thoughts or does many good works. It is hard to conclude just what he does after he has slept eleven hours at night, climbed after food and prepared it for consumption, groomed himself or some companion, built nests, looked for water and fought off rivals in courtship; yet it is plain from Professor Nissen's table that he has less time for amusement than we have. But there is no denying that all his leisure is spent in getting all the fun possible out of life. Darwin would have found no difficulty in explaining why we like the movies, radio, Coney Island and dancing."

A NATURAL IMPULSE

He who takes pride in the summer appearance of his home has already started to work on his lawn, has begun to improve the lawn's appearance by levelling with fresh loam, and has been seen digging in the flower beds.

The very merry month of May will be here on Saturday and soon budding nature will be in full swing, somewhat tardy as spring seems to have been. From now on the intensity of activity in lawn and garden will increase by leaps and bounds. Man will be as active as the returned birds.

That recalls the health order which annually comes out advising clean up of property. Most people today take so much pride in the appearance of their homes or are spurred into activity by their neighbors' fine example that today the city, like all other cities and towns, looks better than it did in bygone days of tumble-down fences, ancient barns and sheds. Buildings on lots are reduced to a minimum, the house and the garage. In a few places antiquated greyish-black barns stand bent, ready to sink or collapse but these are slowly being eliminated year by year. Removal of all such makes for a finer appearance of lawn and home, adds to the garden or lawn space and the possibilities of development of shade by the planting of trees and the laying out of flower-beds.

The season is almost at hand, when the paint brush will be busy recoloring the exterior as well as the interior of homes.

With the coming of fine weather with its touch of warmth as old winter's and the old cold spells shackles are broken, with the new setting of greening grass and the budding of trees, this desire of the home dweller to improve the appearance of his property is one of the most natural instincts and impulses of man.

THE PRIMROSES

Easter Monday

I went into the fields and to the woods,
And Spring was there; and all the green was pearled
With primroses; and sang the birds to tell
How God loved the World.

Then, yesterday, I saw the primroses
By covered pavements where the choir-boys trod,
That man might praise God.

DAMON RUNYON SAYS THE MEANEST MAN IN THE UNITED STATES HAS JUST COME TO LIGHT. Damon is a well known journalist whose habitat is Greater New York City. See he: "The meanest minded man is Everett M. Dirckson, a Congressman from Pekin, Illinois, who has pronounced what amounts to a black curse upon our American representatives at the Coronation in London next month, in the event they wear silk knee pants, which is a rumored possobility. Mr. Dirkson says he hopes the pants split at the seams when the Americans make their courtseys to the King of England." Damon Runyon characterizes this sour puss statement as a crack, so to speak, that "discloses the sourest disposition since the old-time vaudeville performer who hoped all of a fellow-artist's children would be acrobats." Shocked at the possibility of the pants of the Yankee Coronation representatives becoming disintegrated before the throne Damon visualizes a very embarrassing series of moments.

WALT MASON, ONCE A TRAMP PRINTER, was the first to make popular prose poems such as the following old fashioned phillipic, a sample of a daily feature in the Peterborough Examiner, written by a member of the staff:

PUZZLED

(By A. R. K.)

My Cousin Ezra's car's no good, and it won't go like how it should, I think he's out of luck; he bought the thing way out of town, and took good cash and laid it down, I fear he has been stuck.

And now and then he makes it start, it roars like how 'tweren't none apart, and it gets rather hot; then Ezra tries to choke it down, so it won't scare the folk in town, and then it's sure to stop.

And Ezra asks most every man, just what is wrong with his old can, and most of them just grin; they turn their heads most every way, and then they all unite to say, there's nothing right within.

But Ezra got new sets of tools, likewise he bought a book of rules, he knows them off by heart; he has to name them one by one, and think of all that might be done, before the thing will start.

And Ezra uses wire and twine, he says it save him work and time, he ties it here and there; and when he finds it rattles new, why Ezra adds a bolt and screw, and drives them in with care.

My cousin has not gone far yet, nor is he racing for a bet, he's somewhat on the spot; for now and then the thing will go, but so far Ezra does not know—what causes it to stop.

THE DRUG HABIT IS NOT DANGEROUS ENOUGH, with human devils making fortunes trafficking in the curse, but new devilishness must be thought up in the introduction of Marihuana cigarettes among boys and girls in the United States. Detroit newspapers says that these deadly dope smokes can be bought with impunity in most states, and that they inevitably lead to narcotic addiction. That old devil Satan is certainly slicker than most people give him credit for being, and he certainly works with the greatest of efficiency when he selects as his raw material boys and girls going to school, anxious to look smart and sophisticated and to have mysterious secrets not to be shared with everybody. Eternal vigilance is surely the price of safety.

GIANT NEW GOLDEN GATE BRIDGE NEARING COMPLETION

The $36,000,000 Golden Gate bridge shown above which has been under construction for the past few years is nearing completion. The bridge is built over the Golden Gate straits, the entrance to San Francisco with the northern California counties. The Golden Gate bridge is the longest and highest single span suspension bridge in the world. The single span is 4,200 feet and its towers are 746 feet high. The bridge has six lanes for automobile traffic and two sidewalks 10 feet in width for pedestrians. The bridge is expected to be completed and opened to public traffic by the end of this year.

His boys' camp is perhaps the King's chief welfare interest; he relishes camp and amateur photography are part of a camp visit.

"Take care of the children and the country will take care of itself." This slogan, coined, it is said, by the King himself, gives a sweeping insight into his view of industrial welfare work. He is most closely associated in the minds of British people with his intense interest in the task of alleviating slum conditions in the industrial areas of Britain, and in particular with the job of making the lot of the younger generation more bearable. Most closely, of course, he is associated with the famous boys' camp which bears the title of the Duke of York's camp at Southwold.

To-day then we picture his interest in this setting. At the boys' camp each year four hundred boys selected from schools and from the poorer districts of England by the Industrial Welfare society, school boys, the other half from the poorer working sections, who in no other manner perhaps would be able to enjoy a summer in camp, or to meet on a common recreational plane the school boy who looms as such a large part of English life. They camp together, play together, hike and work and rest together on a basis of absolute equality. And each year in the past his majesty as the Duke of York, has been a visitor at the camp. Whether he will be able to pare time from the onerous duties of kingship is problematical, but certain it is that his interest will continue.

At camp as our pictures show, he joins heartily into the full round of camp life. He runs races he swims, he play games and he strolls with his "chums" who look forward to this visit as perhaps the highlight of the entire camp's experience.

The boys' camp is not his country's only welfare interest. Anything that tends to alleviate the grimness and drabness of much of England's poorer areas, draws him like a magnet. He was first president of the association which was formed to supply more and better playing fields and recreational centres for boys and girls. He has exhibited an amazing interest and an amazing knowledge of working conditions and the workers' problems in industrial centres wherever he has met them on his empire travels and while he is best know for his welfare work among the younger generation, every worthy cause tending to raise the standard of living for his subjects, young and old, will draw the new King's appreciation and assistance.

POLICE BLOTTER

"One of the busiest week ends in years" reported local police authorities today in reference to their activities over the past 48 hours. Reports were to the effect, that 17 persons were arrested between midnight Saturday night and 3.00 a.m. Sunday, all for alleged infractions of the L.C.A. and for infractions of the H.T.A. Chief Kidd today stated he signed no less than 29 informations to be sworn before the courts today.

A police raid upon the residence of Fred Day, 327 1-2 Front St., Sunday morning, resulted in nine persons being taken to the police station. Headed by Sergeant Havman the local constabulary swept down upon the apartment in question and seized a quantity of intoxicating beverage, including two full cases of ale. Eight other persons, including two women, were "found in". All were taken to the police station, but only Day was detained. Charges will be laid in each individual incident, police state.

Considerable excitement was observed at the intersection of Annany and Front Sts. early Saturday evening, when the trailer end of a transport, caught the rear fender of a car being driven by Wong Lee, local Chinese laundryman. The actions of Wong Lee, when his automobile commenced to move backwards after the trailer locked into the rear fender, were quite amusing, eye witnesses stated. The Chinese driver had stopped for the stop street sign before entering upon Front St., while the transport, driven by Roy Carleton, Kingston, was making a left hand turn off Front St. A frightened Chinaman and slight fender damage were the only results.

Twenty four tradients were given sleeping quarters at the police station over the week end, 14 on Saturday night, when the cell block was filled to overflowing, and ten last night, who slumbered under much more peaceful surroundings.

Fifty Panes of Glass Broken at Foundry

Mischievous small boys were reported responsible for considerable property damage at the Belleville Foundries, Station street, over the week-end when over 50 panes of glass were deliberately broken. Mr. Fred Hindle, president of the company discovered the destruction of property on Sunday and reported the same to the police. Investigations by P. C. Evans revealed that a number of small boys had deliberately thrown stones through all of the windows of the company foundry, some time on Saturday. All of the windows, over 50 panes in all, were broken and the glass had fallen inside and was deposited in and among the moulding sand, which also caused considerable trouble, as the glass would all have to be removed from the sand by hand, P. C. Evans and Mr. Hindle ascertained the names of some of the alleged guilty kiddies, all of whom were reported to be ranging in age from seven to nine years, and their parents were notified of the incident.

"Push and Pull" Driving is Out!

DRIVE TODAY...TOMORROW'S WAY

A flick of a finger . . . A touch of a toe!

TO SHIFT! TO STOP! TO GO!

Both hands stay on the wheel while gears shift themselves

YET . . NOTHING NEW TO LEARN!

STEP into a car with a clear front floor. Notice, there's no gear or brake lever in your way. Settle back in that broad front seat. Get ready for a wonderful new experience . . . driving a 1937 Hudson or Terraplane with Selective Automatic Shift.

Let's go! Slip through traffic without ever pulling a hand gear lever or pushing a clutch pedal. Change speeds with a flick of a finger and a lift of the toe from the accelerator. Start, shift, stop, go, with both hands always on the wheel.

The Car Does the Work

New? Yes . . . new in the speed and sureness with which you shift gears. New in the ease and safety with which you handle your car. Action of transmission and clutch is automatic . . . but you control the time and speed of shifting. And no "free wheeling."

There is nothing new to learn. Up under the wheel are the same familiar gear positions, but with the Electric Hand, a finger touch picks the gear you want. Remember, more than 100,000 Hudson and Terraplane owners are already driving with the Electric Hand. It has been tested and proved by over a billion miles of actual owner use.

The Selective Automatic Shift, with Electric Hand, is an optional extra on all 1937 Hudson-built cars. Of course, you can have the conventional gear lever if you wish, but we don't believe you will, once you experience the greater ease and safety of this new way of driving.

Canada's No. 1 Cars

You'll quickly discover many other advantages that make Hudson and Terraplane the real No. 1 Cars of 1937.

No. 1 in size, with the longest wheelbase in each price class . . . 117 inches in Terraplane; 122 and 129 inches in Hudson. No. 1 in power, too . . . ranging from 96 horsepower in Terraplane, on up to 122 horsepower in Hudson Eight.

No. 1 in roominess . . . 55 full inches of front seat comfort for three, more leg room and elbow room all around. No. 1 in performance and endurance . . . the only 1937 cars to bring you proof from official American Automobile Association records.

Some day, you'll drive this new and better way . . . why not now? There's a 1937 Hudson or Terraplane waiting for you.

Mr. V. P. Hunt Completes Thirty Years of Service

Has Been Organist of Bridge Street Church For Three Decades Retires as Leader of Choir—His Service to Community of Music in Belleville

Mr. V. P. Hunt yesterday completed 30 years as organist of Bridge Street United Church, coming to Belleville in 1892 as Director of Music at Albert College and organist of Bridge Street and with the exception of a break of eight years, spent in Edmonton, Alta., as organist of McDougall Church in that city, he has been in charge of the music in Bridge Street Church. The Philharmonic Society was very active under Mr. Hunt's direction and held many successful concerts. Handel's "Messiah" was produced in 1907 and 1924. Haydn's "Creation", Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise", also many shorter works and Cantatas were studied. The Cathedral musical festivals in 1908, when Sir Frederick Bridge, organist of Westminster Abbey visited Belleville, Mr. Hunt prepared and trained a large chorus, the same being greatly complimented by Sir Frederick in an autograph letter.

Bridge Street choir has had a notable record for the choral perfection of their work and many fine soloists have been brought to the city through their efforts.

Mr. Hunt was also supervisor of music in the four public schools of Belleville, for ten years and through his training many boys and girls have been given an interest and knowledge of music as a cultural subject. The very interesting and fine Empire Day concerts, and the competition festivals for medals and shields were instituted through his efforts.

Before coming to Belleville Mr. Hunt was organist in Toronto churches, and was one of the teachers in the Toronto Conservatory of Music at its beginning. He studied in Leipsig for two years, and his many pupils are scattered all over Canada.

He is retiring as organist but will continue to direct the choir for a time.

Rev. Dr. J. Semple made reference last evening just before the closing of the service to the faithful and efficient service Mr. Hunt has rendered the Bridge Street congregation in his record of thirty years in charge of the musical ministry of the congregation. It is a high honor, he said, to have served in the service of music for so many years and it is a greater mark of his work that he has served one congregation for so many years.

"He is a devoted artist. We are all proud of his record. Next Sunday he takes over the leadership of the choir and Mr. Alec Gordon will become the organist".

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Moscow, April 26 (AP)—Russia's second five-year plan, the government asserted today, has been fulfilled far ahead of schedule.

It was to end at the close of this year, when a third five-year plan is to be started. An official announcement said, however, industry equalled its goals of producing goods worth 56,000,000,000 rubles by April 1 and that the railway program was surpassed Jan. 1.

London, April 26 (AP)—The Duke of Windsor today won a fight to have a book referring to him taken out of circulation.

The publishers of "Coronation Commentary," it was disclosed, not only took the best-selling volume from English bookshops but wrote the Duke a note of apology. The Duke's solicitors had threatened legal action unless amends were made by today.

Peiping, China, April 25 (AP)—A report quintuplet sons had been born to a peasant woman at Luanhsien, 190 miles northeast of Tientsin, crowded a sensational day. Twenty-four hours of investigation failed to confirm the story, then word arrived by an obscure Chinese News Agency said all were boys and all were living.

London, April 26 (CP-Havas)—In Westminster Abbey today 20 pages rehearsed their coronation duties under the watchful eyes of Earl Marshal the Duke of Norfolk and Dr. Foxley Norris, Dean of Westminster.

The pages will carry the coronets of those peers who will bear the Royal insignia in the Coronation procession.

Salt Lake City, April 26 (AP)—Great Salt Lake, so briny that even ocean bacteria die in its wrath, is perhaps the purest swimming hole on earth.

Foreign bacteria simply can not survive the lake's bitter saltiness, agreed three former Utah scientists reporting in the Journal of Bacteriology today.

Even the native germs are "runts" of the microscopic world and very few in number.

The findings were published by Claude E. Zobell, D. Quentin Anderson and W. Whitney Smith.

Hamilton, N.Y., April 26 (CP)—Dr. Rodney L. Reid, of Colgate University's social science department, says, "dictators are here to stay, for a while at least, and the sooner we might feel we would know how they work."

So next year, said an announcement, there will be a course in "dictatorship" where students "will take up the actual operations of a government under a dictator."

West Plains Mo., April 26 (CP) —You can have your hens that lay double, triple, sunbonnet, or striped eggs, but Mrs. Clifford Curie who lives near here thinks the prize. One of her chickens recently laid an elongated egg with a "waist", resembling a peanut.

Port Arthur, Ont., April 26—(CP)—Speaking of speed: As a courtesy to Mrs. Byron Yhl, widow of a fellow Union member, the Carpenters Union held her a four-room house in a day's time.

Construction was begun at 8 a.m., and finished by nightfall, forty carpenters did the work.

KEEP GIRLS ON FARM

Montreal (CP)—Technical training of country girls in such occupations as poultry raising and growing strawberries was advocated by Mrs. T. W. Sutherland as a measure to relieve city congestion.

The Market Place of Industry

Domestic looms and local workshops supplied the simple needs of each community when the industries of Canada began. Customers were all friends or neighbours. The ability and integrity of every craftsman were well-known and created a demand for the commodities he made; his success was measured by the goodwill he enjoyed.

Communities grew and prospered; new settlements were established and thrived; the demand for manufactured products rapidly increased. Distant markets became accessible as transportation facilities improved. The scope of industry widened, goods were shipped farther and farther from every plant, and it became necessary to gain goodwill towards products and their makers in remote towns and villages where they were unknown.

The newspapers have provided this vital service to Canadian industry at every stage of its development. No other medium could ensure the frequent, friendly contacts with consumers, needed to establish confidence, or afford effective territorial control of merchandising activity, when local or national emergencies arose.

Today the manufacturing industries of Canada serve a national market; their products are on sale from coast to coast. Production has been centralized, distribution systems organized, but the success of every enterprise still depends on customer goodwill.

Therefore, progressive companies continue to use the local daily newspapers as an integral part of merchandising. Experience has proved that the daily newspapers of Canada, bought and read by more than two million families every day, provide the most economical and effective means whereby any industry can create public confidence in its policies and profitable demand for its products.

"Maytime" Another Triumph for Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy

Hollywood's first spectacular musical picture of 1937, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Maytime," delighted three especially appreciative audiences at the Belle Theatre on Saturday.

While the famous Jeanette MacDonald and the picturesque Nelson Eddy reunited in the starring roles, this extravagant adaptation of the successful stage musical is far more beautiful than the original. That is to be expected, of course, owing to the greater resources of the screen.

Miss MacDonald and Eddy surpass their starring performances in those brilliant pictures, "Naughty Marietta" and "Rose Marie." John Barrymore is excellent as the temperamental and tragic impresario, and Lynne Carver, a lovely stranger to the screen from Kentucky, is charming as Miss Brown to provide the juvenile romance.

"Maytime" is a gorgeous specials to view and a beautiful thing to hear. Rudi Stromberg and Robert Z. Leonard, who respectively produced and directed "The Great Ziegfeld" last year, occupied the same position in the production of the new picture.

Noel Langley adapted the story from the stage play by Rida Johnson Young, Sigmund Romberg, who wrote the original Broadway score, composed the songs for "Maytime" with Herbert Stothart. The latter has composed the first scores for "Theodora" which provides a beautiful sequence in the picture.

Miss MacDonald and Eddy rise to their full statures in the realm of stardom, adding to the laurels they already won in earlier films. Together they sing the original stage song "Will You Remember?" so effectively that those who hear it will be unlikely to forget it. Miss MacDonald also sings two excellent operatic arias and parts of others. Eddy sings three Victor-like novelty songs, "Student's Drinking Song," "Vive L'Opera" and "Virginia Ham and Egg." Together the duet is also a touching rendition of the folk-song, "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny."

"Maytime" is a brilliant picture. It is an auspicious beginning for 1937's musicals and sets a pace that even Hollywood will find it difficult to follow. An interesting newsreel precedes the feature attraction.

Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.15. For your perfect entertainment see it at the start. It is suggested that you please see it from the beginning at 2.45, 7.19 and 9.35.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Hands Across the Table" and "Rhythm on the Range"

Sparkling with bright dialogue, uproarious comedy and breezy performances by its stars, "Hands Across the Table" should be marked down on your list of "must" as a delectable bit of sprightly nonsense this week-end's mix. "Hands Across the Table" is shown as hit no. 1 on a grand revival hit show today and Tuesday at the Capitol.

This laugh provoking, entertaining vehicle also gives Carole Lombard a comedy role in which she completely overshadows the talented Fred MacMurray as a poor, but attractive and ambitious manicurist, and she emerges as an able comedienne, delivering her lines with a delightfully sarcastic, infectious gayety.

Miss Lombard plays a penniless young playboy, gives his most outstanding and finished performance of his short but promising screen career. This personable young actress possesses talent as a deft comedian, master of snappy patter. His lively performance is one of the most hilarious moments in the film as he has a rare gift of enjoying his role for the sheer fun of it.

Ralph Bellamy who appears as a wealthy but invalid suitor of Miss Lombard also does a commendable piece of work.

The story of "Hands Across the Table" centres around the determination and efforts of Miss Lombard to catch a rich husband. Love does not enter her scheme of things as her one desire is to marry money. As a manicurist in a beauty parlor in a swanky Manhattan hotel she meets Bellamy, wealthy, but a cripple as the result of a plane crash who takes an instant liking to her. Into her life comes also MacMurray, penniless, who takes her night clubbing and subsequently misses his boat to Bermuda.

FOREWARD FOR CH AMPION SUDBURY TIGERS KILLED IN ACCIDENT

Forward for the Sudbury Tigers, Allen Cup hockey champions, Steve Conick was killed and another player was injured when the automobile in which they were driving came into a collision with another automobile at Hamilton, Ont. Conick was in Hamilton attending a family reunion and had planned returning to Toronto to play against the Wembley Lions, a hockey player for many of the 25 years, he had played with two Hamilton teams before he went to Sudbury, later to join the Tigers. Steve Conick is shown at the left in a typical hockey pose and at the right is the light phaeton car in which he met his death.

SPRING SCENE

MARCH would be a dismal month indeed if man had no imagination. Fortunately, hope springs eternal, and each returning Spring sees new ideas, new aspirations brought once more to life.

"We'll do that in the Spring," is a familiar expression. Plans shelved during the Winter are dusted off. Now, the family talks about replacing the old car . . . buying new clothes . . . a new radio . . . dahlia bulbs . . . paint for the garage. A thousand things are needed . . . a thousand tasks must be done.

Here in the advertising pages of this paper is real Spring news. Articles you need, carefully selected and arranged, are paraded before your critical eyes. Read the advertisements thoughtfully . . . and so choose wisely. For advertisements, the maker's guide to good values, will be your guide to a happier, more cheerful Spring.

Dizzy Dean Bears Down to Score Second Shutout in As Many Starts This Season

Limits Cubs to Four Hits And Whiffed Ten Batsmen

A'S ON TOP

Connie Mack And His Boys Have Laugh on Rest of Field

By RED FEDER

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The fallen may be fed up with Dizzy Dean's whacky words and daffy doings, but it's safe bet no one in St. Louis is going to mind much as long as the great one keeps tagging 'em.

With all his eccentric antics, Dizz's good right arm is still the most valuable piece of pitching brica-brac on the business today, in spite of the Hubbell, Grove, and the Mungos. Without him, the Gas House Gang of Cardinals is a second division outfit. With him on deck, they're potential pennant winners all the way.

Just as Kirby Carl Hubbell demonstrated last year that he is back with all his stuff for this year's wars, so does Dean. Diz left little doubt in two starts that he is the No. One figure in the Cards' title hopes.

All of which adds up to a confirmation of the most fearsome pitching warfare of the current diamond era, between Dean, the right-hander, who pitched a three-hitter in his first start, and the Gas House Gang's other ace, Bill Walker, ace, with two victories to his credit to date.

Really Bore Down

His first time out, Diz just toyed with Cincinnati Reds and finished all the way on top, 7-skipper. But he was really bearing down against the Cards' dangerous rivals, Chicago's Cubs, but the result was unchanged. He allowed four scattered hits, struck out 10, let only one man get as far as third and waltzed in with a 4-0 shutout.

The victory left the Cards with four victories in five starts, just half a game back of Pittsburgh's powerful Pirates, whose game as Cincinnati was rained out.

The Giants, defending the National League pennant, lost a double defeat when the top with Pittsburgh by failing to get runs for their pitchers. Hubbell Cliff Melton turned in a six-hitter and fanned 10 men for the year's record, only to have Boston Bees catch up with him for a pair of runs in the ninth and get a 2-1 win. Victory ended Boston's 38-inning scoreless streak and finished a four-game string of losers.

A's On Top

The world champion New York Yankees found their first win at all their guns and battered the Red Box and temperamental Wes Ferrell for a 13-8 3-3 win before a crowd of 25,000. Boston rooters looking on. The victorious Yankees' Row a second-place league tie with Detroit's Tigers, who beat Vernon Kennedy at Athletics' at the top of the heap with three wins in four starts, while the A's went, lished out in Washington.

Brooklyn and the Phillies put on their customary queer ovortures of baseball doings, with the Daffy Dodgers finishing on front in a game of the day's two 11-inning games, after being on the short end of a 6-1 count as late as the sixth frame. In the other overtime tilt, Cleveland's Indians came from behind to nose out St. Louis Browns 4-3 in the first meeting of the two Brooklyn win were homers by Buddy Hassett and Heinie Manush.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Ellis Fletcher, Bees—His two-run double in ninth beat Giants 3-1.

Pat Malone, Yankees—His four-inning relief pitching stopped Red Sox for 8-3 Yankee win.

Dizzy Dean, Cardinals—Limited Cubs to four hits and struck out 10 in 4-0 shutout.

Julie Solters, Indians—Drove in winning run in 11th inning in 5-4 win over Tigers.

Vernon Kennedy, White Sox—Fanned nine batters and defeated Tigers 13-8.

Buddy Hassett, Dodgers—His homer in 11th inning started rally to down Phillies 10-8.

Dominion Championship Series

PENALTY HURT

Sudbury Runs in Two Goals When Defenceman Shewan is Hooksgow

Toronto, April 26 (CP)—Wembley Lions and Sudbury Tigers, two jaded hockey teams, will decide tonight who will be recognized champions of the International hockey here.

The edge seems to be with Tigers, Dominion senior champions, for they had a game lead in the best-of-three series. They topped Lions, champions of the National League in England, 6-4, Saturday after the first game had tied at 3-3 Thursday night.

However, if Lions win this third game overtime will be played with the International championship going to the team scoring first goal.

For Sudbury it means the end of a long hockey season that saw the death of one of their stars, Steve Oonick, in an automobile accident early Saturday. Even with the thought of Oonick's death weighing on their minds, Tigers went out Saturday night and won. But they won't be packing away their equipment for a while yet. As soon as this series is concluded they have to dash to New York and Montreal for England. There they still have to play in a Coronation hockey game.

A second-period penalty to Cam Shewan, Lion defenceman, won and lost the game Saturday night. While Shewan was off Sudbury made good their power plays for goals to take a 3-1 lead. The first period was scoreless and the teams divided six goals in the last.

Don Grosso and Mel Hill scored two apiece for Sudbury and their total was duplicated for Wembley by Jack Shewan. Other Sudbury scorers were Jim Dewsy and Jim Hastie, while Tom Dudley and Dick Irwin were other Wembley goalgetters.

PROPOSE CHANGES IN RACING BILL

Would Extend Time of Meets and Licence Besides

Amendments Touch

Baltimore, April 26 (CP)—Racing, the sport of kings, would be made increase its "tribute" to the State of Maryland under a bill before Governor Nice today as a means of increasing revenue for relief, in other words.

The bill receives a percentage of the "take" at race tracks. Under the bill now before the Legislature at next month, the race tracks would be allowed 25 days for their spring meeting, thus providing additional revenue to the State Treasurer.

Another section of the bill would permit racing clubs to accumulate away from the track. Such bookmaking would be legalized under a combined session and draw up a plan for presentation to the Legislature at the next session.

Change at Pimlico

Before Mr. Bill Boland Bowie and Havre De Grace will have complete charge of the spring and fall dates have been set it is not likely they will take advantage of the spring racing.

Pimlico—home of the preakness—opens on April 29 and additional time will be utilized. Turf followers will have a chance to change when they enter the historic plant. Workmen have improved portions of the track.

The Judge's stand no longer looks like a barn. A modern, additional grandstand occupants. It has been torn down and replaced by a handsome roof. The coop also will house the camera which photographs the finish of each race.

Another innovation will be a flagpole in the infield for the starter's use. The judges, placed at advantageous positions, will display a red flag for each foul while a white will indicate a clean race on the back stretch.

THREE STRAIGHT WINS

Edmonton, April 26—(CP)—Hollandon Orioles, International Women's Basketball Champions since 1929, added another successful defence of the Underwood Challenge Trophy to their lengthy record today when they completed a three-game whitewashing of Cleveland Fisher Foods with a 40-20 victory Saturday night. They were victors by 50-24 and 42-17 in the first two games of the best-of-five series.

CHIPS from the SPORT BLOCK

OLD and NEW

By George H. Carver

"It's a tough life but occasionally a referee gets a break", said Clarence Campbell of Edmonton, one of the outstanding referees of the National Hockey League, in a radio interview on Saturday night.

"The best break I ever got, happened in Chicago last December," he said. Canadiens were playing Chicago, and the Hawks hadn't been doing so well. In fact they had not won a game as yet, and the fans were yelling for a win.

"Canadiens had committed a rule infraction, and I called for a penalty shot. I took up my position, and Roger Jenkins let drive. Immediately I signalled that the shot was illegal. Imagine my surprise, when I looked around the red light on. Fourteen thousand fans were yelling their seats. I was at a loss myself. 'Campbell was on the spot'. But Mickey Ion skated up and said "What's wrong, Jenkins missed the net by four feet'."

"I skated to the goal judge and asked why the red light. He said 'I got nervous and turned it on'. I told him that this was no place for nervous people, and had him replaced. But boy, what a break! The condition of my nerves when I saw that light on!"

Campbell told of an amusing incident, which occurred when he was air debut. "I told a friend of mine, that I was going on the air at seven o'clock for a broadcast in which program. A few minutes later he started to tease with laughter. 'Here you are' he managed between gusts of merriment, 'Be polinted to a radio column in a newspaper he held. It read: "7 pm. The National Institute for the Blind" . . ."

Jersey Giants in Second Place by Defeating Rochester

(By The Associated Press)

"Like father like son" appears to go in the International League too. The Jersey Giants, Head offspring of the New York Giants look a lot like the parent club, when it comes to the ninth. The Jersey City team, with less than a week of play in the International League in the books, has scored only six runs in nine games and only five of them light hitting and a fast attack to win.

In Jersey Place behind Newark Bears and Toronto Maple Leafs, the Giants Glenn turned in a typical Giant win, Sunday.

Glen Gabler, brother of the Giants' Gabler, shutout Montreal Royals 1-0, with seven hits, while his mates got two-base singles by Hal Lee and Roy Anton and Smead Jolley's sacrifice to score their only run in the ninth. There were 15,228 paid admissions in the new stadium to see the game.

Newark Bears using tactics very much like those of their parent club, New York Yankees, walloped Rochester Red Wings 9-3, George McQuinn, Bears first baseman, tripled, doubled, and single and outdistanced Jack Seeds, with a triple and single accounted for all the Bears' runs.

In the only other game of the day, Toronto Maple Leafs, kept pace with the Bears at the top of the League by trimming Syracuse Chiefs 8-2. Frank Gatenbein, Syracuse outfielder, was the hero of the game with a triple, double, and single to account for all the Chiefs' runs.

Buffalo and Baltimore, scheduled at Baltimore, were rained out.

COACH PRAISES FLASHY LASH

Says Cross-Country Champion Just Starting to Run

Philadelphia, April 26.—(AP)—He is the latest Amateur Athletic Union cross-country champion, He holds the record for the distance. He has a share in the new world record of 17:16.1 for the five-mile route. He has to his credit victory at a mile over two score cross-country courses as well Recall of Italy and Gene Venzke of the New York Athletic Club.

He is Lash, who ran the 4:13.8, 4:17.2 and 4:24.3 in two days at the Penn Relay Carnival in Franklin Field last Friday and Saturday. Yet in the estimation of C. C. Worthington, coach of the Indiana University track team, Don Lash, twenty young cast athlete, has only started to run.

"Don could be really good in another two years," said stoodish, be-spectacled Billy.

"He's remarkable him." Lash is a senior at the big ten school—"he's always been pretty much a thinly-footed runner.

"We're beginning to break him of that. He can very well in this meet and, by new shortening of distance events, what his best distance will be then? I really don't say. He's tried almost all and he's improving in each one."

4 CLUBS READY TO FACE BARRIER IN THE C.O.B.L.

Belleville Club Given a Year's Leave of Absence

Belleville, a charter club in the C.O.B.L., was given a year's leave of absence from the league on Saturday when the Central League moguls convened with their semi-annual meeting at the Y.M.C.A. with President Max Dennison in the chair the league delegates met and decided upon opening schedule dates the system of umpires to be employed and other matters pertaining to the welfare and advancement of senior baseball in this part of the province. Belleville who represented the club definitely entered the league for 1937 competition, the Oshawa Club, 1936 league and C.O.B.L. champions, Kingston Penins, Peterborough and Napanee officially will face the barrier.

R. A. Elliott, Deloro, who was recently appointed to the honored position of Life Member of the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association, moved the motion, the second by Ted Wilson of Napanee, that a similar motion be forwarded to the Ontario Amateur Baseball group. Mr. Elliott informed the delegates present, that permission would doubtless be granted as the league is established ball games Verney, all-professional and big league clubs for charity purposes. The speaker expressed the hope the adoption of the Sunday baseball wherever sanctioned b y the authorities. This practice is more in locations in and around the border counties near Detroit, however

The umpiring system to be employed caused considerable controversy, President Dennison's suggestion of neutral umpires being denied the league adopting the same system, last year, which proved to be in C.O.B.L. for the past few years, namely the home umpire system.

Can Play in Napanee

Belleville players, who are of senior calibre, will be permitted to play with Napanee Club, while the Kingston plays at Napanee and Napanee players at Kingston and Napanee returns to Kingston and on May 24th, Peterboro goes to Kingston. The plan of drafting the league schedule was left in the hands of President Dennison, Wilson, who also read the minutes of the meeting.

The types of baseball adopted were Spalding, Reach and Worth balls. The league decided to retain the three club play-off system, which has proved very successful in the regular schedule, the second placed club will meet the first placed club in a three game series the winner to meet the club finishing first in a best-in-three series. The top clubs in each incident have the choice of games, if necessary.

After considerable questions the league decided to open the season before Labor Day, but made it known, they desired a two-week play-down game on that holiday date. Holiday dates were allotted to Napanee Kingston and Oshawa who would release the league schedule as soon as the complete list of dates of the clubs in the loop. The application of Cobourg was received by hence for Belleville from the C.O.B.L. was unanimously granted, thus bringing this city of retaining honor as being a charter member of the league, which was added to a "home brew club".

Secretary Dennison reported back from the annual meeting of the O.B.A.A. his report being accepted unanimously.

Tonight is a red letter night in the annals of Belleville sports, honored by the various service clubs of the city the Belleville Redmen, Intermediate O.H.A. champions, will be guests at a testimonial banquet at the Quinte Hotel, while at the same time the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" will also be honored and feted. The honors and laurels gained by Eddie Thomas' charges will be heralded and why not. For the first time in history Belleville enjoys O.H.A. championship. Skipper Thomas has sponsored hockey teams in Belleville for the past 20 years, some good, some exceptionally good, others not so hot, but eventually his dream attained realization this year. Other hockey clubs through the province, that did not gain the honors enjoyed by the Redmen, undoubted made more recognition at the hands of their supporters, but doubtless the fact the eventual titles came to this district in one season practically left the Back about 1922 or '23 the old Belleville Intermediates were honored in a similar manner and at the same hotel. "For they are jolly good fellows." "Hail the conquering heroes come" and all the rest will be the order of the night its evening. Hotcha.

Four teams will face the C.O.B.L. barrier on May 24th, Oshawa, Napanee, Peterborough and Kingston, the latter club being represented at the league meeting here on Saturday. Whether or not Belleville are not is doubtful But at the city we asked the league to grant Belleville a year's leave of absence from the league, thus retaining a charter membership in the Central Central loop. If Belleville refuses is sends out a year in the can with heads soof, because our request was granted by the league executive. The matter of opening dates, umpires and other incidents will be announced later. Victoria Day, May 24th, Kingston opens at Napanee and Oshawa goes to Peterborough, Napanee returning to Kingston on May 26th. June 28th Belle go to the Motor City for the inaugural on the 28th.

R. A. Elliott, Eastern Ontario grand man of baseball who was recently made a life member of O.B.A.A. was heartily thanked the C.O.B.L. for sponsoring the motion, which was passed to that high office. The league adopted a quadruped schedule.

Jack Dempsey claims the salvation of boxing is the rise and appointing of a "fight Czar" similar to that employed by the professional baseball leagues in Judge Landis. Landis, czar of baseball, has, if N sent done within a year, we just won't have any boxing," declared Dempsey last week in Reno, recently. Dempsey holds that boxing is no longer a sport of old "It's a lawsuit today," added the famous Manley, "and promoters are greats house-cleaning, the appointing of a boxing Czar, who will force managers to fulfill contracts. By so doing when articles are signed for a bout, the bout will be carried through without the nonsense such as marks the promoting.Braddock-Louis tangle of today. Maybe there's something in this Dempsey-Reno proposal and doubtless the former titleholder himself would make a good boxing Czar to return the game to its former lofty status.

Just who Matchmaker Jack Corcoran of Madison Square Garden's opponent here a week Tuesday night, we have not heard. "I'm trying to sign a suitable opponent for Clark and give the Belleville fans a wrestling show they will be the talk of the town", Jack assured us.

Unless the increase wagale of the baseball fever takes a decided smack different attitude towards the fellow clubs after the season has been completed for a few days, the success of the game generally, For instance, we attended the organizing of the new loop at Port Hope on Friday and all we heard was squabbling and wrangling over what had transpired during games and the depressed five years ago. If the lacrosse moguls are really sincere in their intentions of keeping the game throughout this area, let them wipe the slate clean, bury the score scratch and let every person put his shoulder towards the wheel of common sense for the betterment of lacrosse in this district. As long as each club is self-centered and selfish to the point where the needs of their teams and the league are secondary, well just then long lacrosse will remain in the doldrums.

Out in Peterboro they are taking their lacrosse very serious this year, and there is every sign of golden opportunity and we must either put the game over or else." Our correspondent Charlie Carson, secretary of the Peterboro Lacrosse Club, planned the annual calling of all sports throughout the entire Central Ontario area, "Sports seems to be generally on the decline although this part of the province, there is no lack of public interest or lack of interest being shown in the game of baseball and softball holding their grip around the country now is the time to get up to give them both barrels with our lacrosse gun and give them the works with a ring gamut," pointed out Mr. Carson.

"It's up to you newspaper men to put some pep into keep rumpling at 'em through your columns," added Charlie, and it's all very well for you to say, Mr. Carson, but always remember, you can lead a horse to water through, but you can't make it drink, and the same holds good in life, it's a two-pounds can publish and holy lacrosse from now until doomsday, but unless the fans take to the bosom of the fans, N'i remain just where it is that supplied by the judges and jury of sport nowadays."

Here'and there: "Old Dis" not only plans a game, but he can continues to perform as of yore from the bull's-eye. Witness his second consecutive win in as many starts over the week end....Bob Feller's sore injury is not as bad as first reported.....the local softball contingent meets Tuesday to discuss umpires, schedules, etc, they intend is fire their opening guns on Coronation day....Sporting a fractured nose, Jo Jo Graboski was a visitor in the city over the week end. Joey did not even bother to have it attended to, but our team mates, the Lions, take a 6-4 beating at the hands of the Sudbury Tigers.

DAILY SHORT STORY

The Brain Trust Busts

By Martie Ramson

When a guy can pick eight to one, fifteen to one, and fifty to one shots to win, day after day and week after week, there's something wrong somewhere.

Every once in a while we can all lay a couple of bucks on a long shot and collect, but there ain't anyone livin' that can pick 'em every day in every race unless he's got what we call "somethin' on the ball."

An' that's just what Charley Berman was doin'. Pickin' the longest shots in the field and cashin' in on 'em.

A month ago this guy was a bum. He was a cuckoo. He sprung up with a new car plenty of dough, and a bankroll to like pushed, but time you look at 'im. He had me stumped for a long day before I left after I spend a day at the track it came to me like a flash what this guy is up to. Of course I don't want to make things tough for 'im so I go to Charley an' puts it to him like this

"Now listen, Charley, I'm only your racket, see, but you know me. I always been a right guy an' all I ask is that yo tip me off on one a day so I can collect a piece a change, too."

Charley's pretty decent about it. He knows I ain't kiddin' when I tell 'im I'm onto the racket, so he says, "O.K."

The first crack at the field is a horse named Vagabond. Honestly I wouldn't give ya ten cents for the horse's chance to beat a field of healthy 1 mules, an' runnin' against a classy field like nags the Vagabond would have to break a record, pays ninety-four dollars on a two-dollar mutuel. But I was glad 'cause I got my money on it accordin' to Charley's say so. That's all I asked for was one a day, so I take my winnings and hit for home.

The next day he tells me to lay five on the Batman in the third race. I don't figger to have a Chinaman's chance with that, the horse is runnin' against, but I do figger that if the race was on the up an' up the horse wouldn't stay be in there. So five it is on the Batman to win and the last five I collect two hundred an' fifty good American dollars.

Well, it's a swell racket an' I'm not tied up in it if anything goes haywire so I'll just see what I can out of it before it blows up.

Well, for three days after that everything went smooth as silk. Incidental of pickin' me outa a day, Charley was givin' me two an' three a day. The horses we bet our dough on were naps of the rankest kind and no matter how many bets went on 'em, the odds never fell one way the same.

After six days I find myself with a bankroll of fifteen hundred bucks, all from a two-dollar Mutuel. Naturally I'm thinkin' maybe I'd better leave well enough alone and call it a day while I tell Charley.

"Sid," he says to me, "I'm pullin' outta here in another week my self, so if ya wanna hang on with me, we'll go on from here and pull the same racket."

"No, go, Charley," I says. "You've had two weeks prosperity, so I closed up a small fortune, ya better quit right now before somethin' busts."

"Nope, one more week. Me, I'm in, have all I want of this job."

Well, he had his one more week. An' if the figures are right, I think he dropped about seventy-five hundred bucks. When I met him in Chicago a couple weeks after the track closed all he had was his car an' he was tryin' to get rid of that without losin' too much.

I don't know how his racket couldn failed him an' I was kinda curious, so I asks 'im one day when the windup was, an' he tells me the whole story.

"It's me, Sid, it was like this. I pull into the track with a ten spot so my name ain't on information. I look so good at pullin' winners off the sheet so I wasn't my time. The thing I know, I run into Tommy Hicks who's ridin' for old man Lipton, Sham horse was on the level, an' I know with a little pressure I could make a deal with him. So I start paintin' a beautiful picture for 'im of collectin' a hundred an' two hundred an' maybe three bills a day if he can get a few more riders to see my point. Well, to make a long story short, he rings in Richard Kelly, Marion and Cete, all money riders. So we form a combination. Sort of a trust, ya know. Then we get 'em all supposed to pull their mounts so the long shots that we had our dough on, could win. I was gettin' a third of the profits and the first week we split two-thirds. It worked out swell for a long time an' wouldn've still been gettin' my thing found out they could do without me.

"Well, that would've been O. K., too, but they kinda have a guy on the inside to lay the bets for guy named Ed Gordon. Looks like guy named Ed Gordon. Looks like all five of 'em are completely outta look now."

Charley chuckled to himself, then added thoughtfully. "Gordon's an agent for the racing commission."

MARKET COMMENT

Last week will long be remembered by many people interested in trading for the reason that one of the severest breaks in years occurred. Close associates of the over-extended position had to be advised but the severity of the decline was greater than had been generally anticipated.

Many traders of the old school expressed their opinion to the effect that the mining market was "through". Such people remembered the type of mining markets prevailing several years ago, when mining was a hit or miss affair, and with no government supervision, was a ready tools of a few persons who exploited the public for their personal benefit.

Today, things are entirely different. Insight is definitely in the major industry class. In fact, all and sundry are that the recovery in the Dominion was considerably hastened by the ability of the mining industry to forge ahead during the worst period of the past depression. The Government, Federal and Provincial, are keeping a close watch on mining promotion and the public today is getting a better run for its money than ever in the past.

The Federal Minister of Mines propounded a "Five Year Plan" whereby he hoped that the mineral output of Canada will double during the next five years. This is a commendable effort as it should send further to bring about better times throughout the country through the absorption of a large number of the unemployed and tend to attract foreign capital to our shores.

Mining is definitely big business today with a tremendous capital invested. Although the element of risks on the part of investors is necessary, nevertheless the returns are commensurate when a property "clicks". Those who may have purchased stocks during the recent slump of the mining market disappearing every time their fears in this respect. Mining and the mining market are not only here to stay but can be expected to do big things in the immediate years ahead.

A financial journal in reply to an enquiry as to the best list of common stocks for an investment of $5,000, advises the purchase of the following:—15 Nickel; 15 Inco in Canada; 15 Building Products; 10 Steel Canada; 25 Brazilian Traction; 25 Dominion Steel & Coal "B" and 25 Cyprunn. In this group, 70 per cent. of the interest is in the people's paying class and the question of income and possible appreciation has been considered.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, April 26.—(CP)— Outside influences, chiefly weakness of London, New York and other markets, were responsible for transferring into another declining session for Toronto stocks. Selling appeared in the golds and base metals with Consolidated Smelters, Noranda and Hudson Bay leading the latter group downward. Nickel dropped four points and was off more than three points at the close. A moderate rally in the western list brightened the market in the last hour.

A number of substantial losses were recorded by the leading industrials. Brazilian, Abitibi common and Distillers-Seagrams were sold in quantity at losses of 1 to 1 1-2 points each and fractions to points were dropped by other paper, utility and some of the steel stocks. Power Corporation and Bellwood Power A were off a point to 1 1-4 and closing prices were down for Steinbrenick, B. O. Power A, Montreal Power, Union Gas and United Fuel Pfd.

Heavy industrials displaying definite weakness included Canadian Car and Foundry Pfd., Dominion Steel, Steel of Canada, Dominion Foundries and Steel and United Steel.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, April 26 (AP) —Stocks tumbled 1 to 5 or more points in today's market.

Activity was sufficient at times to put the ticker behind, but volume dried up frequently and dealings were light near the final hour.

A jump in steel production to a top mark since August, 1929, with actual tonnage at record level, was virtually ignored by the last as a whole. At the same time extreme losses were recorded in transactions before the close.

Weakness in addition was preparing to do something about the heavy gold inflow, brokers said, helped to down prices.

Transfers were about 2,000,000 shares.

NEW QUARTERS FOR BABY CLINIC

Kiwanis Provide Fine Nursery in Private Home at 157 Pinnacle St.

Through the efforts of members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club, the first club in the city to foster the local branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses, new and more suitable quarters for the weekly Well Baby Clinics held every Thursday afternoon for the city's children have been secured at 157 Pinnacle Street in a specially prepared private home. Rental and equipment of the new quarters have been furnished by the club members and their contribution marked better health for the city's junior residents.

Formerly held in the council chambers of the city hall, the clinic which is constantly growing, found the needs for larger and more convenient housing, rooms have been provided in the present location.

The new club welfare centre comprises two rooms, one to be used as a general waiting room for mothers and children, and the second as a conference room where the babies may be inspected and weighed. The conference room has been furnished with a specially designed nursery with soft tones of cream and blue for the walls. Adding to the brightness of the room, a brightly colored Mickey Mouse frieze extends around the walls. The weighing scales, table, chairs and cupboards also harmonize in cream and blue, while windows are equipped with crisp, dainty curtains. The entire waiting hall is another advantage over the quarters at the city hall.

Formal opening of the new quarters will take place on Tuesday, May 4th, when representatives of the National office of the Victorian Order of Nurses will visit this city as guests of the Kiwanis Club. An invitation for the general public to attend the official opening is extended.

In the meantime the centre is open to members of the city every Thursday afternoon of each week.

An expression of hearty appreciation for the splendid gift has been shown and the help given by the Kiwanis Club in this city, as expressed by Mrs. Thos. J. Holland, President of the local branch of the Victorian Order.

"We have long needed such a place and Kiwanis have indeed gratifying to know that through the help of Club this has at last been realized. The new quarters are the answer to our needs that have been held out for years past," stated President Mrs. Holland today.

It will be incidental to the regular events held by the club from time to time throughout the summer.

At a special meeting being held on Wednesday evening next, a full summer's program of races will be drawn up by the executive at their club house.

STRATFORD

Levels of the Avon, Nith and Thames Rivers rose above their banks while the muddy waters of the Grand River threatened to flood nearby property as the rain continued.

Worst flood conditions were reported from the Stratford district in the wake of a steady downpour since early Sunday. The Avon River flowed over its banks, inundated several bridges, flooded parts and threatened high water damage.

Water Pours Over Bridge.

Six inches of water poured over the bridge at the Huron street dam at Stratford. Cellars of homes were flooded and basements filled.

Woodstock, Ont., Apr. 26 (CP)— Between 20 and 40 feet of main line C.P.R. track just north of this city is expected to crash into a 10-foot deep washout caused at the 182nd line level crossing by today's floods. Bridges and culverts are also washed out for a distance of some 300 yards where it approaches the crossing, and the level of the water has cleared out all the roadbeds of the railway at this point. Traffic on the main line is also suspended like a bridge. Workmen are expected to save the situation nearby from being washed away. Trains are being re-routed through the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo to London.

Woodstock, Ont., April 26 (CP)— With damage unestimated, floods surrounded this city last night with rising rivers and swamped industries, homes and low-lying ground in the north of the city, including playing parks, crossing No. 26 Highway and the C.P.R. main line, making it impossible except for large trucks.

5 Feet of Water.

Traffic was blocked on Dundas Street west and several cars were abandoned when they encountered more than three feet of water. Trains on the C.P.R. were also delayed.

The old section of the Oxford-Perth Co-operative Company, which was partially damaged by fire, was flooded through the choked bridge near the mill and the water, which at one time had reached the depth of a foot and a half, covered the floor of the office of the Wood Mosaic Company.

Worst Flooding in Years.

Stratford, April 26 (CP) — Worst flood conditions Stratford has known in years followed today in the wake of a steady downpour of rain which has lasted since early Sunday. The Avon River, breaking its banks, crashed over bridges, flooded parts of the city streets, and caused damages to riverside properties.

The Avon rose, then several feet by o'clock and the continued rain threatened to send the waters still higher.

A survey of the situation showed: Six inches of water pouring over the bridge at the big dam near Huron street, the highest point in the Lions swimming pool near the dam; cellars of the Collegiate Dundas Street flooded to the extent of seven inches; cars trapped in flooded garages on Ontario street; flooding the land at the foot of Queen Street bridge, which rises, several feet by the bridge leading to it from the main-line, the water half submerged; the small island west of Huron Park covered, just the top part of a small building is visible; and the swirling muddy waters.

Bridges Opened

Residents along Ballantyne Ave. watched with apprehension as the muddy waters rose higher and higher than they had ever seen the water rise in the past.

Residents of William Street found the city crews busy all night and early while along Douglas Street the water continued to rise, entering cellars and flooding garages.

All dams were opened to let the flow pass freely, and because of the steady rainfall sent the water level higher than normal. So far most quickly than the flood gates could allow it to escape.

Debris of all kinds, including at least one bridge from the Country Club Golf Course, was carried by the dam as the high waters rushed against the bridge structure.

CRAWLED UPSTAIRS ON ALL FOURS

Owing to Rheumatism in Her Knees

It was not a very dignified way of going upstairs, but' she had rheumatism in her knees, and it was the best she could do, at the time. Since then, she has been taking Dodd's Kidney Pills, and now feels much better. Read her letter:—

"I had very painful rheumatism in my big toe and could only get upstairs at all from crying to Providence in my knees. It is over three years since I commenced taking Dodd's Kidney Pills. I am now on them days I still have a little gout, but my knees are quite better. I am nearly 80 years of age, have a complexion like a girl's and feel very fit. I have fully repaid for taking a half teaspoonful of Salts each morning in a cup of hot water."—(Mrs.) M. Hay.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are frequently caused by deposits of uric acid in the muscles and joints. The numerous pills in Dodd's Kidney Pills stimulating your liver and kidneys to healthy, regular action, and help them to get rid of the excess uric acid which is the cause of so much suffering.

and farmers and gardeners were hopeful for warm weather to help growth after the rainfall mark change in the level of the Grand River here. After the rain had there were no snowflurries.

Damage At Hamilton.

Hamilton, Ont., April 26 (CP)— Swollen by more than twenty hours of rain, the Grand River here and its tributaries rose to the crest of what theretened to be one of its most extensive rampages in recent years.

From the long valley of the big waterway in the south-western Ontario peninsula of rising waters flood had not been reached.

Chatham, Ont., Apr. 26 (CP) — Fearing possible repetition of the disaster which occurred in 1934, when marsh lands of Kriens were inundated by the raging waters of the river, men of the Village today organized to prepare for any eventuality.

Continued rains and the presence of a stiff easterly wind, which piled heavy seas against the dyke protecting Kriens with the flashland, Lake St. Clair and the Thames River, water in the marsh land ditches and creeps cuts were filled to overflowing and rain water was gradually, despite capacity pumping operations carried on for days.

POLICE COURT

"These men who operate push-cart businesses have to be watched up everything that isn't nailed down and quite a few things that are nailed down," commented Crown Attorney R. G. Donnan, K.C., in the police court police court after Mr. Assistine, 56-year-old operator of a push-cart, had pleaded guilty to the theft of 51 daily newspapers, the property of the Intelligencer. The proceedings were heard by Magistrate E. J. Butler, Bench.

The papers in question had been deposited at the corner of Bridge and Highland Avenue by a delivery truck, Assistine picking them up and placing them in his push-cart, where they were later discovered by P.C. Arnold. "I like to read papers, I'm guilty I guess," was the plea entered made by the accused in court today.

"I do not want to send such an old man to jail, so I will give a fine sentence for three months, but I must be careful what you put up in the future," cautioned His Worship.

Hugh Quinn, Belleville, appeared on a charge of vagrancy, his arrest following a disturbance on a street car on Dundas street a few days ago. Quinn was arrested on a number of charges, including drunkenness.

A juvenile, who gave his home address as Toronto, appeared on a liquor charge and pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness. "Where did you get the liquor, from the bootleggers?" queried His Worship. "No, I got a ride with a man on the highway and gave a ride, gave me the drink," tearfully replied the youth.

"That strange man with either red hair or a wig insisted on riding with us again. It's a long time since I heard of him," commented the Crown Attorney. The usual "ten and costs" was assessed.

Two charges of theft of bicycles were heard today, the majority of cases having been held over until Friday, by request of counsel.

Charged with the theft of a bicycle, Ralph Shaw's car, stolen Saturday, and attempting to break into the Belleville Fruit Company. The former youth pleaded guilty. Sergeant Det. D. Arnott, appearing for Weaver, asked for an enlargement of bail. Friday. A charge against Shaw was all laid over pending further investigation. The investigations leading to the recovery of Father Lescoy's car were conducted by detective heard.

Three residents of Deseronto, Ray Ketcham, 21, Lloyd Ketcham, 19, Maracle all pleaded guilty to charges preferred by the O.P.P. of having driving seven days for driving a motor car while intoxicated, the other two receiving ten days in default of payment of a fine of $100 and costs, the proceedings collated.

GOVT MOVES TO AVERT STRIKE

Walkout of Busmen in London Would Paralyze Traffic

London, April 26 (AP)—The government moved today to avert a threatened strike by London's 40,000 busmen which might bring a major transportation tie-up while the city entertained the coronation crowds.

Officials of the Ministry of Labor's conciliation department scheduled conferences with members of the city's streetcar and subway men with representatives of the Transport and General Workers' Union.

They hoped at least to get the busmen to agree to a truce until after the coronation is crowned May 12.

The government feared if busmen adhered to their announced intention of quitting work at midnight Friday the dispute might spread to the city's streetcar and subway workers.

A walkout by those employees would virtually paralyze the compilcated system of service planned to handle the coronation crowds, unless a settlement could be reached before then.

Some 2600 Bobbies have been hurriedly trained to supplement the new bus routes. The bus employees want a 47½ hour working day, retained with their present eight hour day.

"This is no spectacular failure," an official of the Transport and General Workers' Union said. We intend to go through with it unless our demands are met."

Officials of the Traffic and Transport Board argued the 7 1-2 hour day is financially impractical.

FAITHFUL MARY REVOLT LEADER

Ousted From Father Divine's "Heaven" by Cult Leader

Kingston, N.Y., April 26 (AP)— The "revolt of the angels" in Father Divine's "heaven" in nearby Sayville, Long Island, was led by a woman the Negro evangelist announced the angels "have gone heaven" and a long-range economic program.

Mary Lewis, jewels, once called "Faithful Mary," conceded defeat in her efforts to win control of the following of the negro "god," but announced she would leave for the Kingston area as soon as possible "to carry on the work there." She said Father Divine's followers are loyal "angels" yesterday.

"Pete which destroyed the cult's heaven at New Paltz, near here, was of incendiary origin, the Divine spokesman asserted.

"Let these buildings burn," declared Angel Rachel Nelson, "Blood Divine's New York City lawyer, "We're going to tear them down seven times, and erect modern dwellings in their places."

TROUBLED ASPECT ON LABOR FRONT

Two Walk-outs in Nova Scotia Affect Total of 10,000

Halifax, April 26 (CP)—Nova Scotia's labor front presented a troubled aspect today with two walkouts affecting some 10,000 men scheduled and an unsettled situation in the Pictou coal fields.

Major walkout was at the Dominion Coal Company's No. 12 Colliery at New Waterford. Thirty-four hundred employees decided last night to quit work in sympathy for men turning up for work today. The decision was reached at a mass meeting.

The Barshead men claimed coal output at the mine had increased considerably since the strike two years but no extra help had been taken on. Their demands included men's demand they be placed on seniority list and that increased wages posed rates should not exceed the highest at present paid. The decision to quit at the mine followed.

At New Glasgow 200 employees of the Scotia Spinning Plant walked out in protest against a sign posted an hour before they were due to quit work Saturday, stating the plant would be closed indefinitely. The company's action was due to disagreement over a wage increase demand.

5 DEAD, THOUSANDS HOMELESS IN FLOODS

Conditions Unparalleled At London by Flooding, Worst Since Year 1883

Water And Hydro Services Interrupted at London

HEALTH MEASURES

Five Thirty Miles in Length in Many Places Deep Under Water

After carrying a picture of death and property damage in the valleys of the Thames and Grand rivers, flood waters today gradually slipped from their crest. Thousands of dollars damage to homes and other property, with five lives claimed by the swollen streams was the total wrten of the worst floods in the province's history.

Undermined by spring freshets, a 10-foot embankment gave way on the Canadian National Railways line near Beachville, four miles west of Woodstock, yesterday. The Chicago-Montreal train ploughed into the yawning gap as flood waters whirled three men died.

26 Miles of Land Flooded.

Swollen by four days of rain and snow, the Grand and its tributaries with their tributaries drew a flood map 30 miles from London to Brantford in a northeasterly direction and stretched eastward for 40 miles to Brantford. Thousands of acres of flood waters rolled 50 miles southwest to St. Thomas.

The Thames ran loose in London, driving 1,000 persons from their homes in the western part of the city, disrupting water and power services and blocking the sewage disposal system. Fear of a water famine arose as medical health authorities warned citizens to boil all water before using.

Flood Victims Helped.

Red Cross officials and the Royal Canadian Legion joined with firemen and policemen in helping the flood victims. 300 of whom were housed today in the armouries after the south and north branch of the Thames broke over in London West, suburban Broughdale, the southern part of the city and Chelsea Green in the east.

Twenty-eight feet above normal, the Thames swept over the $70,000 West Lorne bridge, destroyed seven houses and buildings to cross it, one of the most anxious nights in the city's history.

Flood Levels Drop.

North branch of the Thames dropped five feet today but the southern branch advanced. F. E. Barnum, general manager of the Public Utilities Commission, announced.

Lowering of the north branch levels eased the situation in the west of London considerably, but the situation was most serious.

Mr. Buchanan said the Springbank water-pumping station was open and was expected the east pumping station would operate shortly.

Unprecedented Catastrophe.

London, Ont., Apr. 27 (CP)—Faced with a situation almost unprecedent in the city's history superintendents of all departments of the Public Utilities Commission held an emergency meeting and discovered that the water supply was in most precarious condition, that power is facing serious difficulties after dark and all electrical companies throughout the province are speedially in this district have offered every available assistance.

Immediately following the meeting E. V. Buchan, general manager of the Commission issued a statement that "the only reason that water and hydro services are being maintained is to meet emergencies." He indicated that if all residents did not cooperate in conserving both water and light it may be necessary to cut off both.

Water Must Be Boiled.

All water must be boiled, since the present supply hinged on the Springbank sources. Closed since early last evening, the Springbank pumping station was opened before dawn and it was learned that it is expected that extra gangs of men will put the east end pumping station in the water pumping station time this afternoon. But only a limited supply can result from this method of the city and it will be heavily chlorinated in order to prevent disease.

The Ridout street sub-station has been completely flooded. To meet needed 10,000 horsepower from the city's quota of 15,000 horse-power. All demanded power is being supplied from the other sub-stations.

Pumps Stand In Water.

Dynamos, pumps, and instruments valued at $50,000 in the Ridout street station are standing in three feet of water, but have been put on a 15-ton transformer on a crane to keep some of the power in the station.

Toronto, Apr. 27 (CP)—Two sanitary engineers and an epidemiologist were sent to the London flood area today by the Ontario Department of Health to direct precautionary methods against the possibility of disease.

Dr. R. Hardman, of the public

6 KILLED IN CAR STRUCK BY TRAIN AT LEVEL CROSSING

Five of Victims Members of Stesco Family at Sudbury

BURST INTO FLAMES

Miss G. L. McDonald Engaged to be Married to Car Driver

Sudbury, Ont., April 27 (CP)—Investigation proceeded today into Northern Ontario's most disastrous level crossing accident as preparations were made for funerals of the victims.

The six, all but one members of the Stesco family, were killed last night when their automobile was struck by a westbound Canadian Pacific Railway train at the Copper Cliff depot crossing. The sixth, Miss Gladys Laverne McDonald, was engaged to be married to Alec Stesco, driver of the car.

When the auto was struck by the locomotive it burst into flames and was carried 300 feet along the track. Only the bodies were recognizable, doctors said they believed death was caused by the impact.

Alec Stesco's brother, W. J. Stesco, and Miss Stesco and their two children were with the engaged couple. The children were Patrick, five, and Robert, seven months old. The brothers were employed at the Frood-Stanley mines and it is believed the party was going to a dance after they finished work. Miss McDonald's father is engaged in mining at Sudbury office of the C.P.R.

The Stesco car was travelling toward Copper Cliff on the Sudbury-Sault Ste. Marie highway when it came to the crossing in the path of the train, described by officials as extra No. 190. The automobile somersaulted and was pushed along the tracks in flames, splitting off a switch standard as it went.

Pole Forgotten 2 Weeks in Jail

Detroit, April 27 (CP)— Nick Barbato, 36, Detroit, was a free man today after spending two weeks in county jail awaiting trial for robbing a pole. He made a garbage can. It seems Banko speaks only Italian and the pole made his plight known.

The pole-robbery prisoner was arrested April 13 after he neglected to respond to a summons which, police said, had been delivered to jail with several traffic court prisoners who had been taken with them. No court sent for him and he was made himself at home in his cell.

His plight was discovered accidentally when an assistant turnkey discovered a warrant against Banko with no record of disposition of the case. Taken to or before the bench, police said, he had difficulty making himself understood, even through an interpreter. He was immediately released.

The first thing he did? He hied to a store and bought three garbage cans—a big one, a medium one, and a little one.

Duke Files Injunction To Recover Damages

Action to be Started Again st Author And Publishers of "Coronation Commentary" Although Apology Has Been Made And Amount Account Book Would be Withdrawn.

London, Apr. 27 (AP)—The Duke of Windsor today filed an action for alleged libel damages and an injunction against the author and publishers of "Coronation Commentary," a best seller dealing with his reign and abdication as Edward VIII.

The writ was filed through the Duke's London solicitors, despite the fact that both author and publisher had proffered an apology and the publisher had announced the book was being withdrawn.

On advice of counsel, it was learned, the Duke decided to proceed with his threatened suit for damages and for an injunction against further publication.

The action is directed against Geoffrey Dennis, author, and William Heinemann, publisher. The book purported to describe, among other things to describe Edward's "mudding, fiddling and meddling" while king.

Allen and Overy, London solicitors, filed the writ.

New York, Apr. 27 (AP)—Officials of Dodd, Mead and Company, American publishers of "Coronation Commentary" said today that the Duke of Windsor in filing suit for libel against the author and English publishers of the book had not changed their plans to release it here.

They said they had received no word from the English publisher in regard to the Duke's filing the action and that "there has been no change in the situation so far as we are concerned."

The company decided yesterday to release the American edition.

EDWARD THREATENS SUIT

Suppression, by the publishers, of the book "Coronation Commentary" over which the Duke of Windsor is said ready to begin a libel suit, has caused a scramble among Londoners to obtain what few copies remain on the market. Edward has reportedly demanded, through his solicitor, that the publishers suppress the book and publish an apology. The book, written by Geoffrey Dennis (above) devoted several chapters to the Duke's abdication and his forthcoming marriage to Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson. Whether other editions of the book will be published without the offending chapters has not been announced by the publishers.

CANADIANS BET ON PROSPERITY

Purse-String Loosening Noted on Withdrawals From Accounts

Ottawa, April 27 (CP)—Canadians are showing confidence in the new confidence in the economic future has resulted in a loosening of purse strings as shown by an increased spurt in withdrawals from bank accounts in March.

March bank debits across Canada jumped to $3,384,000,000 from $2,731,934,000 in February and $2,595,-310,000 in March, 1936.

There is more money to spend. At the start of the month total bank deposits were $2,296,000,000 compared with $2,330,260,000 in February and $2,152,000,000 in March last year; saving accounts were up to $1,562,800,000 against $1,546,800,000 and $1,517,000,000.

That alone does not account for the upsurge in amounts drawn out by cheque, however, compared with what they have, people are spending more, too. Bank debits are likely to the total amount on deposit for the beginning of the month, but had difficulty making himself understood, even through an interpreter. He was immediately released.

The first thing he did? He hied to a store and bought three garbage cans—a big one, a medium one, and a little one.

Brazen Thieves Steal Pump, Dismantle Rakes, Cultivators

Farmers Aroused by Epidemic Thefts For Metal Parts

MOWER, BINDER TAKEN

Increasing with alarming rapidity is the theft of iron steel and other metals throughout this district, Provincial Police today revealed.

The most audacious of the robberies are being committed in nothing short of brazen, police know it.

The latest victim is Hastings farm machinery is being dismantled under the cover of darkness and the metal parts stolen with abandon by unscrupulous thieves and doubtless sold as scrap the next day.

J. F. Brennan, Lonsdale farmer, was quite chagrined yesterday morning when the broke to find his horse rake dismantled and even an iron pump taken off his property. The thieves had removed all of the metal from the rake and added the pump to their loot during the night. A few miles down the road in Tyendinaga Township, Russell Glass was the victim of the same unfortunate circumstances. His horse rake was stripped off all metallic materials and when the owner arrived he suffered the same damage. Provincial Constable William Hall is investigating both thefts.

Over in Sidney Township, former Robbin's Mills, Norris Whitney suffered a more severe loss when a mower and binder and a ton of an automobile were stolen during the night recently. "Whenever thieves go dismantle our farm machinery and cart it away for junk it is time we took matters in our own hands. I can assure you a "hot reception" will be waiting for the next trespasser on my property," one of the enraged above mentioned farmers promised the Provincial authorities today.

Tillsonburg Isolated As Two Dams Give Way; Supply Water from Wells

Bridge Collapses And Carried 100 Feet Downstream

DETOURS NOT PASSABLE

Artificial Lake Drained by Gap 150 Feet Wide And 50 Feet Deep

Tillsonburg, Ont., April 27 (CP)—Tillsonburg, 26 miles east of St. Thomas, was an isolated community today, cut off by road from all other communities with the exception of Brownsville, a small village nine miles to the west. Its water supply, in the heart of the town's oldest residents, two big dams have burst one bridge has been washed away and the highways leading out of the town were blocked to through traffic either because of inundation, or because of trouble in the ingersoll district.

In the valley of the Otter through which runs No. 3 highway just south and west of the town, the Borden Milk plant was flooded out of operation Monday. The highway at this point was flooded to such a depth motor traffic could not reach town from the west.

Bridge Collapses

On No. 3 highway east of the town, White's bridge collapsed, Monday night and was carried more than 100 yards down stream.

Traffic to the east of Tillsonburg was effectively barred thereafter, no detours being passable.

The Lake Joseph dam broke last night and the domestic water supply conduits for a quarter to top snapped as a gap some 50 feet wide was created. The town's drinking water was supplied in the emergency at low pressure and is limited in quantities from wells on a farm to the north.

Lake Lisgard another artificial lake in the northern part of the town, from which the town obtained water for its fire hydrant system, was drained almost empty when the Canadian Street dam, creating the lake, burst. A gap about 150 feet wide and said to be 50 feet deep, was worn out by the rush of water as the dam burst.

Water Receding

Woodstock, Ont., April 27 (CP)—With flood waters receding appreciably on all sides today, city officials today endeavored to restore some semblance of a return to normalcy after the week-end's disastrous floods.

In the 12th line, where the washout of the railway crossing caused the derailment and wreckage of the C.P.R. main line yesterday, a work crew completed a temporary fill and it was expected that trains would be running there by today.

One concession across, where the 11th line forms a part of No. 2 highway it will be necessary to replace the bridge. It was announced by provincial authorities. Here the approaches to the present bridge have been almost washed away.

Far-Sighted Policy Advocated For Major British Industries

After Rearmament Program is Completed, Danger of Slump Seen

'SHOCK ABSORBER'

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON

London, Apr. 27 (CP)—Warnings against the danger of a disastrous economic slump unless a far-sighted policy is followed by major industries are being sounded daily by British statesmen and businessmen.

All are agreed on the need of bold measures to guard against disturbances which might arise when the nation's rearmament program has been completed.

Latest to sound a note of caution is Sir Robert Horne, former Chancellor of the Exchequer. Addressing members of the Constitutional Club, he denied returning prosperity was to be taken at its face value, however, but agreed it was essential to adopt some form of a "shock absorber" to take care of the period of industrial slack as a later date.

"I do not claim I must be made for that event. In the meantime it would seem obvious to all of us that the process of general work which can be delayed should be given the go-by till the time when people will demand them as the end of the rearmament program," said Horne.

The country was enjoying a record of manufacturing products, he said, industries had revived to such an extent that retail sales were higher than ever before and all classes of the community were living in conditions of great prosperity and more people were employed than ever before.

Jim Fax's name is still recalled in Belleville by old-timers. His brother George conducted a tailor shop and both were noted entertainers.

670 Out of 4,991 Vote on Wet Day

Brantford, Ont., April 27—(CP)—Brantford's cost of elections, particularly when rain rules and roads are seas of mud, was emphasized in Brantford yesterday when a J. McCann and Albert Page ministerial slate for council seat made vacant by the resignation of Councillor Charles E. Hamilton, defeated the 1936 election and just 670 voted out of a possible 4,991. But that last 670 — it cost more than $2 a vote in some subdivisions. The cost per booth, without printing of ballots and other supplies was about $12. In subdivisions with 200 voters, it is three others no more than 10 voted, and in only two of the 16 did the figures reach into three figures.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist
Canada and the garden!

The subject is a perfect one. The best climatic advantage can be done ideally only when the home site is well selected. For most purpose a southerly slope is most desirable. Shelter from cold winds can be most advantageously obtained by a wall of trees. The windbreak. A north wall reflects heat to the sun's rays and the cell near it thus gets heat two ways. Birds will be glad to provide variety of metal and decorative handling by the practical artistic garden-er. The southerly slope receives considerably more sunsets than a northerly one. Northerly slopes and even the north side of a house are planted with shade-loving plants and shrubs.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, April 27 (CP)—A moderate trough of low pressure lies from the immediate southwest of the 97th Meridian to Georgian Bay, with occasional rain to the more southern districts. Ontario. HEAVY RAINS LIKELY TO RETARD SEEDING

The soft grimis of rain which was penetrating the ground of the district today and during the night is just about what's needed to the benefit those of the rural areas, in the opinion of agricultural officials of the city.

Mitchell of the Dominion Seeds Branch, local office, "as it is the ground is already well saturated, and this rain is going to hold up seeding for another period, but to get the best results and have crops on schedule, some seeding should be done in April."

Now on what is reported their "second run" upriver following the recent warm weather, thousands of the fish have been swept up the swollen rapids finding quiet resting places in backwater eddies and along the banks of the river.

Garnet Wants Dog to Replace Pet Victim of Motorcar

Thirteen year old Garnet Quinn is a sad and forlorn boy today.

His pet dog, Buster, had to be destroyed, the officials say, but Garnet was brave, even if his eyes were filled with tears and his heart heavy, Buster was run over by a motor car and sustained two broken legs.

The veterinary tried to save Buster, but eventually Constable Evans had to destroy the unfortunate dog and Garnet really wants another dog for a pet.

After the dog was put out of its misery, Garnet related his tale of woe to the policeman. "You see Buster was run over by an automobile. He and I were explaining". The woman driving the big car stopped and said she would pay me for it or get me a new doggie if Buster died. I did not want Buster to die, but now he's dead and the woman didn't come back to fetch me another dog", confided Garnet to the interviewing officer.

What Garnet wants more than anything else is a dog. Any kind will do, he says. So if some philanthropist desires to practice his better ideals, Garnet resides on East Dundas St., opposite the Bridge St. Restaurant. He really does want a dog.

Red Tape Gone, None Used Here

The red tape supply in this city presents no problem to officials a presents no problem to officials of the city hall—local documents don't need this fast-acting of crimson his hold them together in orderly fashion.

String, elastic bands and, even pieces of gilt paper, do just as well as tapes . . . well red tape went out with copper plate penmanship and the Dumbbell beach one worn by the city fathers, it was remarked today by Chief Inspector A. Wilfred Holmes. It simply isn't requisitioned for anymore.

It's just an expression now. Cities don't use it anymore like they used it in the days when the days when they did use it we of course were not documents and papers that are tied and bound with bits of string and cord, and even sections of the station tied many years ago."

And the important, legal-appearing red seals which are affixed to the corners of the important bills and by-laws by the city clerk? Well, they too are being used less and less, according to the office.

"We use fewer and fewer of them every year. Nowadays about the only time we are called upon to have them is when some by-law is passed officially enacted and sealed and then put with the rest of them. You'd be surprised how few we do use of them in a month."

The meeting was presided over by Mr. H. M. Carr, M.P.P. of Northumberland, chairman of the central group.

Chief among the subjects dealt with was the proposed legislation intended to be enacted whereby all creameries of Ontario would come under the jurisdiction of the Milk Control Board of Ontario. It was unanimously agreed that "some control" over creameries and cheese factories which, would also be included under the new legislation, was needed.

Boys of 11 to 15 Confess Breaking Street Car Boxes

Windsor, Ont., April 27.—(CP)—Police today rounded up five boys from 11 to 15 years of age, who confessed they broke open the coin boxes of six street cars in the Sandwich, Windsor and Amherstburg Railway yards.

The boys used a switch iron to smash the boxes and caused about $12 damage, but for their trouble obtained only a dozen street car tickets and ten cents. They said they broke open the boxes to steal rides. After confessing, the boys were delivered back to their parents. It is likely that the street Railway Company may prefer charges in Juvenile Court.

Thorold, Ont., April 27 (CP)—Falling into the old Welland Canal near his home, Gordon Preston, five, was drowned yesterday. The boy was playing with his little girl on the canal bank when he slipped into the water.

AVOIDED WRECK BY QUICK ACTION

Switchman Throws Switch Derailing Engine And Tender

WINDSOR, Ont., April 27.—(CP)—A switchman's split second action in pulling a switch and throwing a heavy freight engine, tender and one car off the rails avoided a possible tragic train wreck yesterday at the intersection of the Pere Marquette and Michigan Central Railway lines at Pelton Junction, 12 miles south of the city, it was learned today.

From his tower above the tracks the switchman saw a passenger train bound for Windsor on main line, clicking along at top speed. On the Pere Marquette line, which crosses the C.N.R. almost at a right angle, there was a freight with 18 box cars, and it took the switchman only a second to realize that they were going to meet if nothing was done.

The trainman set the signals against the freight and then, apparently fearing it would not be able to stop in time, or that the engine crew had not seen the changed signal, he pulled a switch that ditched the freight locomotive off the rails. When it left the rails it landed on the highway, close by the railway line at that point.

With the freight off the track, the fast passenger train slipped through the intersection without harm. Some reports had it that the switchman also set the signals against the passenger train. However, it stopped after passing the crossing, but proceeded in a few minutes.

After the derailment the freight was blocked all traffic on the highway, and wrecking crews hastily summoned tried to move it.

W. H. MORTON, PUBLISHER

GOODWILL FROM U. S.

Christian Science Monitor has issued a Coronation number, which gives it the opportunity to indicate how sympathetic this newspaper is to the kindly relations which exist between Great Britain and the United States. In the leading editorial appear these paragraphs:

"To those who have never quite perceived the underlying foundations of British-American friendship the extent to which the Coronation engages the attention and affection of Americans must appear strange. To millions of good republicans, the crowning of "the King" is the event of the year. Those who cannot get to London are following every step in the proceedings by pictures, press and radio as no inaugural is followed.

"This interest includes of course much of what might be called a curiosity, a childlike love of pageantry, a republican reverence for royalty, and ties of trade and tradition. But it goes further. America's share in Britain's feeling today springs from a sharing of basic ideals and purposes, some of which have been plainly at work in events of the last few days.

"There is indeed one of the foundations of British-American friendship—a mutual love of order, or peace. Devotion to democratic processes, to settling things by discussion rather than violence, is part of it. Insistence on equal justice is another meeting ground. Love of liberty is another. Similar concepts of Deity lie deep. Not in military alliance, not in any materialistic sense of race, not in any joint enterprise of selfish idealism, not in unstable sentimentality, but in the like-mindedness of common spiritual aspirations are the surest foundations of British-American understanding and co-operation laid. And those bases are not exclusive; they are broad enough to offer a common meeting ground for all humanity."

The number is one which will be widely read because of the completeness with which it sets before the reader the symbolism and the facts of that great ceremony so soon to be enacted when King George Sixth will receive the Crown. The issue is fully illustrated with photographs of the members of the Royal family and carries numerous articles on the preparations for and on various phases of the ceremony.

TIME AGAINST TIME

Dr. of some complexities have arrived over the daylight question as the summer-time goes into force in a number of urban communities in Ontario. The protests which appear at this season annually at Belleville's attitude on "D. S. T." are heard, with the reply of the proponents of standard time that the fast time benefits are mainly visionary. With the war between the two the people will be entertained. Meanwhile Belleville rises, works and sleeps on standard time.

HELP THE BEACHES MOVEMENT

Officers of the Quinte Beaches Association have been encouraged during the past few days with the expressions of willingness to support the plan with wholehearted effort which numbers of citizens have given.

It is this spirit which ought to animate all—to help in whatever way is possible what will, no doubt, prove what is destined to be something of which the city of the immediate future and the long-off future will justly be proud.

The effort is in line with the efforts of those who have vision and try to lay plans which will work not only for a day or a month but into the far-distant days to come.

The officials should receive more of this encouragement of a very practical kind for the project is one which cannot if carried out as planned but become of value to every citizen of Belleville.

Belleville is fortunate in having just the leaders who can put this plan across. The time is opportune and the land along the shore, almost as if it were destined not only by nature but also by fate to become the great park and the extensive beaches awaits developments.

"Now there is nothing too practical for the academic and nothing too academic for the practical. The old nominal barrier between the academic and the practical has been broken down."—Nicholas Murray Butler.

A SOLITARY WAY

(Anonymous)

(Proverbs 14:10; Corinthians 11:51)
There is a mystery in human hearts,
And though we be encircled by a host
Of those who love us well, and are beloved
To every one of us, from time to time
There comes a sense of utter loneliness.
Our dearest friend is stranger to our joy
And cannot realize our bitterness.
There is not one who wholly understands,
Not one to enter into all I feel."
Such is the cry of each of us in turn,
We wander in a "solitary way";
No matter what or where our lot may be,
Each heart, mysterious even to itself,
Must live its inner life in solitude.
(Psalm 25, 7:17; Matthew 10:39)
And would you know the reason why this is,
It is because the Lord desires our love,
In every heart He wishes to be first.
He therefore keeps the secret key Himself,
To open all the chambers, and to bless
With perfect sympathy and holy peace
Each solitary soul which comes to Him.
So when we feel this loneliness, it is
The voice of Jesus saying, "Come to Me."
And every time we are "not understood"
It is a call to us to come again;
For Christ alone satisfies the soul.
And those who walk with Him from day to day
Can never have a "solitary way."
(Isaiah 14:3; Psalm 34:22)
And when beneath some heavy cross you faint
And say, "I cannot bear this load alone,"
You say the truth, Christ made it purposely
So heavy that you must return to Him.
The bitter grief, which "no one understands,"
Conveys a secret message from the King,
Entreating you to come to Him again.
The Man of Sorrows understands it well,
In all points tempted, He can feel with you.
You cannot come too often, or too near;
The Son of God is infinite in grace,
And those who walk with Him from day to day
Can never have a "solitary way."

MAY IRWIN IS DYING—says the Teletype, busy every minute recording the news of the world in newspaper offices—saddest news of the day to the generation of theatregoes, before moving pictures, who knew and loved this jolly fun generator of the stage. May Irwin was born in Whitby, Ontario, and she became the darling of theatregoes from coast to coast, in Canada and the United States. She played with Tony Pastor, King of the variety stage and she played in Augustin Daly's Broadway company, the top notchers of sophisticated drama, the real cream d'la creme of Broadway and Boston, the John Drews, Robert Hilliards, and all the smart stage set. May Irwin quit Daly because the pay was so much smaller than she could earn in variety, not that she wasn't at home even in that high brow atmosphere, for May Irwin was at home anywhere. She loved the Thousand Islands and spent her summers quietly upon her own island, a beautiful dream spot of green and gold near enough the frivolities of Alexandria Bay and the Thousand Islands Club, and sich like saciety places, but far enough away to enjoy peace and quiet if she so desired. May Irwin gave much laughter to the world, for she was just bubbling over with fun, on and off the stage, and for that she deserves a prominent niche in the hall of fame. When she was eight years old, it is said, she sang soprano in the Episcopal Church at Whitby. She said singing came naturally to her, that her voice never had any cultivation, May and her sister Flora made their debut on the variety stage at Buffalo, N.Y., when they were little tots in short dresses, in December, 1875, and the salary they received was thirty-five dollars per week. Their first song was as "Sweet Genevieve." Old timers will remember Richard Golden's "Jed Prouty" may remember May Irwin in that play as "Martha". May Irwin was associated with Charles Frohman and other prominent producers, and she was one of the first stage stars to sense the menace to the legitimate stage of the moving picture movement and she promptly became a moving picture actress. Hail! all hail! here and hereafter, May Irwin, passed through life on a gale of laughter, and her pathway was strewn with the roses of appreciation by the sunshine of her irrisistible good nature of those whose lives were made brighter.

Stray Bits

WHEN SWALLOWS COME—

Clinging rain drops which sparkle in the finely interlaced twigs of the spirea, like rhinestones in young girls' hair, are said by weather prophets to foretell fair and cool weather. But the heart of him made glad by blue skies, flower clouds and balmy breeze is not easily downcast. There is evidence to support his cheer.

The shrill intannabulation of the frogs' chorus at the edge of the swamp unmistakably proclaims the season. The brilliant epaulets of the red-winged blackbirds and their musical whistle add to their testimony. Toward dusk, the splashing and frolicking of muskrats among the cattails prove that these denizens of the marsh know that the time of the singing of the birds has come."

Robins perform their odd assortal antics between periods of grubbing for worms. Flickers add their quaer call, and peavees sound their plaintive whistle from the high branches of elm and beech. Wrens and bluebirds are already househunting.

Green blades of vegetation pierce the mould and herald Nature's perennitity. Black sticks of shrubs that were thought dead now bear roses of buds, promising fruit in due season. Even when winter was severest, the evergreens, with their holiday bells of forsythia, the shy hepatica in the woods, the dog-tooth violet, and peache blossom pushed to the world. Lo! The winter is past.... and flowers appear on the earth."—Christian Science Monitor.

"No, No, no" exclaimed Giovanni Martinelli, the opera star. "The pipe, the cigar, the cigarette!"

Reporters who had come to interview the famous singer hastily extinguished the three evils when he explained that the smoke made his throat sore.

"But, didn't you endorse a cigarette once?" asked a reporter.

"I did," admitted the smiling tenor. "But remember what I said. I said, 'These cigarettes never make my throat sore' And that is true They never do."

"Because," suggested a reporter, "you never smoke them?"

"Si, si," laughed Martinelli. "I never smoke them. I never smoke anything in my life."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE DIGEST OF DIGESTS—

All persons who have occasion to enter the premises of newsprints these days must have been struck by one sudden development. That is the sudden and extensive increase in the number of pocket-size "digest" magazines. According to the New Republic, there are now thirty-nine of these publications being issued, and more are in the making. Apparently the majority of the digest publishers are thrifty, which suggests that if their numbers increase and their circulation rises, they will soon threaten the very publications whose pages they have invaded for their contents. Already the leading pocket-size magazines are finding it necessary to buy more and more original material. Will the parasitic arise of the digests die having eaten their fill of digest? Will the digests then become the digest each other? Or will they become to an increasing degree the conveyors of first-hand material?—Ottawa Citizen.

Canada Abroad—

Figures may be dull reading at times, but often they are not only important, but of special interest. This is the case in connection with Norman Hepwich's article elsewhere that every sixth person living in Massachusetts is either a Canadian by birth or descent; that they spend $15,000,000 in Boston alone, and $36,766 in the state.

It is particularly interesting to note that more than 90 percent. of the Canadians now resident in Greater Boston are from the Maritime Provinces, while among the supplied many to other parts of the state.—East John Telegraph Journal.

Warns of "Gyp" Gymnasiums

Speaking of streamlined gymnastics and bending alone" in the April Commentator, John B. Kennedy, one of the editors, informs all comers that among them you'll find the health racket at its worst.

About 3,000 "sleep-foundries" are available to the conscientious citizen who feels deep creeping up on him, he finds, but he warns against believing their claims "unless they have a competent physician to examine you before you start the course."

Some of these "gyp gymnasiums," continues the Commentator, have actually killed their clients. "They take a sedentary citizen, whose only vigorous exercise for 40 years has been with a shore-horn in the morning and a corkscrew at night, and shove him through more strenuous antics than Strangler Lewis gets in a bout of semi-it and waltzy called wrestling. The customer goes home feeling a hero, only to flop over at some early date because a flabby heart can't stand the gaff.

For all anybody knows the exercise racket may have killed as many of the nostrum thieves who've sent the American public into orgies of dandruff-scraping and hormone-hunting.—Kansas City Star.

DUKE OF NORFOLK EARL MARSHAL OF NOTED FAMILY

Director of Ceremonies at Coronation Comes of Family of Many Times of Fortune.

By THOMAS T. CHAMPION

Canadian Press Staff Writer.

LONDON (CP)—Nominally at least the whose of the arrangements for the Coronation rest with the Duke of Norfolk, in his capacity as Hereditary Earl Marshal of England.

The holder of this, one of the most ancient offices in the realm, is responsible for all the great functions in which the sovereign performs the principal part.

The present Duke of Norfolk, 16th holder of a title created in 1483, is 59 years old. His figure became familiar to thousands outside of England through the pictures taken at his wedding early this year to the Hon. Lavinia Strutt, daughter of Lord Belper.

Not only is Norfolk (Bernard Marmaduke Fitzalan-Howard) Premier Duke and Earl Marshal, but he also holds by virtue of his succession as 16th Duke the ancient post of Chief Butler to the King, an office which now carries merely of the ceremonial handing of wine at the coronation.

The Howard family, who are Roman Catholics, claim descent from Hereward the Wake. Anne Boleyn, whose marriage to Henry VIII ended as tragically as Queen Consort, was the child of the second Duke of Norfolk's daughter. After his marriage with Jane Seymour Henry turned again to the Howard family for a bride, choosing as his fifth wife Katharine, daughter of Lord Edmund Howard and Catharine, his her unfortunate cousin. Anne Boleyn was brought to the block only 18 months after her marriage.

Few noble families of England have undergone greater vicissitudes of fortune than the Howards, and few had to pay so dearly for their religious and political convictions.

Got Estates Back

Time after time in the grim past their titles and estates were forfeited, and imprisonment and the executioner's block took toll of their best and bravest. Prosperity definitely descended upon the Howards in 1661 in the Restoration, during the reign of Charles II, when by Act of Parliament all their privileges, titles and estates were restored, including the office of Earl Marshal.

The present Duke succeeded to the title on the death of his father in 1917. He has three sisters—Lady Rachel Leigh, Lady Sibell Lee and Lady Winifride Alice Fitzalan-Howard. All are children of the previous duke's second marriage with his kinswoman, daughter of Lord Herries, who is now a baroness in her own right.

Arundel Castle in Sussex, the duke's chief home, is one of the largest and stateliest of the ancestral houses in England. It overlooks almost rivalling those of Windsor Castle. He also owns a fine house in St. James' Square.

The Duke's most important task as Earl Marshal prior to his present heavy duty was when he faced and carried out successfully the detailed plans for the funeral of King George V.

Plainview, Neb., April 27 (CT) —Russell Sonsenay plowed his garden plot here today in an attempts to find a lost billfold. Then he turned loose a flock of chickens and they scratched up the billfold in the freshly turned soil.

Hockey Champions Honored By Service Clubs of City; P. J. Mulqueen is Speaker

Sport Banquet at Quinte Hotel One of The Finest in City's History

LARGE ATTENDANCE

Men Prominent in Sport Seated at The Head Table

It's always fair weather when good fellows get together.

This statement was never more substantiated than last night at the Quinte Hotel, when the four service clubs, Rotary, Kiwanis, Kinsmen and Y's Men united in honoring three hockey teams, Belleville Redmen, champions of the intermediate "B" series of the O.H.A., the R.C.A.F., champions of the Intermediate "A" series of the O.H.A., and the Ki-Y juvenile champions. A galaxy of the sporting fraternity joined with the service clubs in this banquet, included being P. J. Mulqueen, chairman of the Olympic Committee and chairman of the Ontario Athletic Commission, who was the principal speaker, "Dit" Clapper of the Boston Bruins, "Pat" Walsh, former goalie of the Montreal Maroons, "Toots" Holway, a local boy, who made good in big time hockey, Fred Marples, secretary of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, Orland Finnison, a local boy and now secretary of the Athletic Commission, George Propper, Canadian motorcycle champion and W. J. "Penny" Mills also a local boy, who is a member of the Athletic Commission, Gerald MacInnes, District Governor for the Kiwanis Club paid an unofficial call and was royally welcomed by all. Charlie "Chuck" Conacher and Frank "King" Clancy were unable to be present due to other engagements.

PUBLISHER DIES

President and Managing Director of the Southam Publishing Company and Director of the Hamilton Spectator, Richard Southam (above), well-known newspaperman died at the Toronto General Hospital following an illness of several months. Mr. Southam, born in Hamilton, Ont., first entered the grocery business but later joined his father in a job printing shop. From this point the Southam interests grew until they became known as one of the foremost publishing houses in the Dominion with newspapers from coast to coast.

Joe Shortt Presides

Joe Shortt, secretary of the "Y" and a hockey and local sport, and president of the Rotary Club, presided over the banquet with Eddie Logan, president of Kiwanis assisting, while Dave Wilson, president of the Y's Men and Norman Gerbutt, president of the Kinsmen were on hand to help in the festivities. Leo B. Hins presided at the piano with Alec Gordon and Phil Huddleston, also Wally Sandford, Burrows, Rochester and executive member of the O.H.A., led in the community singing with Joe Imlah, Charles Spalding acceptably filling the role of accompanist with Joe assuming home a few more fans for the good of Kiwanis. A most interesting musical program had been outlined and only went further to show that Belleville's talent cannot be duplicated anywhere. The guests were most delighted with the program arranged which included a piano solo by Phil Huddleston, and Ernie Beckett, an ocarlete and an instrumental quartette all of which were delightfully received and after each number an encore was eagerly demanded and as eagerly given. Of course "Sandy" Burrows and his musicians had to give "Brown Colonber Ale" and as of yore, it was the highlight of a wonderful program. Joe Shortt sincerely thanked the artists for their contribution to the enjoyable evening.

Valuable Acquisition

E. V. Illsley was given the honor of introducing the R.C.A.F. hockey team, who stated they were a well trained squad and gentlemen on and off the ice and a valuable acquisition to the sporting life of this district. He complimented the team on their winning the honors in O.H.A. competition and hoped they would go on to greater heights in the succeeding years. The members of the team were introduced by Squadron Leader "Z" Lawrence, who on behalf of Wing Commander E. A. Godfrey, who was unable to be present, thanked the Service Clubs for their fine gesture. He stated, that the club had a very excellent year in competition and a successful one from a financial point of view. The players are in the sport for the love of the game", said the speaker, "and will be ready, when the rings of frost rolls around next winter to continue where they left off." Squadron Leader Lawrence dropped a hint, that the team would be strengthened for the next month.

Mayor Proposes Toast

To Mayor R. D. Arnott, whose father the late Richard Arnott was a force in hockey for many years in this city, was given the honor of proposing the toast to the Belleville Redmen. "Ritchie", a hockey player of note in his younger days told of the struggle Belleville Arena put up in trying to win a championship for this city but always the opposition was a little too strong. He referred to many of the players, that in former years had worn the Belleville livery. Eddie Thomas, manager and coach of the present champions was praised by the speaker for his interest in the sport and his untiring struggle to produce a winning hockey team for this city and district. "Belleville owes a lot to Eddie Thomas", said Mayor Arnott in proposing the toast. The team was introduced by Mr. Thomas, who afterwards thanked the club for the splendid banquet and his pride in bringing a championship to Belleville. He praised the members of his team, whom he said worked hard with perfect harmony prevailing among them.

The Intermediates

Juvenile Not Forgotten

P. C. MacLaurin was given the privilege of proposing the toast to the Ki-Y juvenile champions stating from these boys will come the stars of the morrow. He praised the meeting for the fine sportsmanly spirit shown and believed it was the only way to foster any project. Belleville has been put on the map again by the activities of our hockey teams the past winter, said the speaker "and they not only played the game on the ice but they carried out the true precepts of good sportsmanship in their daily lives and that is the benefit of training and sport." He praised the Hawks for their winning the title of the city, in their class and hoped they would stick together and have their names engraved on the Aird Cup, the highest amateur honor in Canada. Jack McVeigh in replying for the team stated, that he had enjoyed the year with the boys finding them gentlemen on and off the ice. He believed the training was a fine effort and hoped for bigger and better things in the coming year. The team was individually introduced by Mr. McVeigh.

District Governor Heard

Gerald Marticeau of Quebec City, district governor for Kiwanis, called upon for a few words before leaving for Toronto, extended his welcome in French and repeated same in English to the delight of all present. He congratulated the various teams being honored and opined that effort was a helpful agency along the road of life. He discovered, however with the suggestion, that the Airport team would win next year the Allan Cup because he said "that cup belongs to the Quebec Aces next year and the Airport can have it the year after", which drew a hearty laugh from the audience.

Given Hearty Reception

The principal address of the evening was delivered by P. J. Mulqueen force in amateur and professional sports for years and who holds many important offices. The speaker was introduced by Orland Finnison, former Belleville boy, now secretary of the Ontario Athletic Commission, who in a few well chosen words expressed the opinion, that P. J. had done more for sport than probably any other man in Canada. He stated he was the first chairman of the Athletic Commission and always willing to advance the true ideals of sportsmanship. Mr. Mulqueen was given a hearty reception and as above delved into his account of sporting activities during his years of connection with sport. He compared the three teams on their fine showing and stated "that from such support as has been witnessed tonight we get returns".

Mr. Mulqueen was of the firm opinion, that Canada did not "blow its own horn enough" in connection with the prowess of their athletes because he stated everyone loves a winner and the fact is overlooked, that the boys are playing the game for the game's sake. He praised Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, in charge of the Athletic Commission for the very fine work that is being done at the Athletic Camp near Orillia and pointed out that all the camp was not for the "rich man's son" but for any boy, who could qualify in junior, intermediate or senior competition. He defended also the action of the Olympic Committee in their selection of athletes to represent Canada at the Olympics, stating they were invariably chosen in keen competition.

Defended Action

The speaker also defended the committee against extravagant expenditure at the Olympics showing that the cost of taking 150 to the last Olympics was less than $500 a head, which included transportation. Referring to the feats of Ned Hanlon, Mr. Mulqueen voiced the opinion, that the souller did more to advertise Canada and bring Canada before the minds of other nations than any man, who ever lived in Canada. "That is a broad statement, but I believe it to be true", said the speaker, Mr. Mulqueen ran the gauntlet of commending the various honors won by Canadians on the field of sport and those included were Walter Knox, Bill Sherring, Bobbie Kerr, the seven girls, who won the world's title at Amsterdam, Percy Williams and the various hockey teams. He also pointed out that in Toronto at the present time were four winners of the Diamond Sculls, the highest award for amateur rowing. "No other country in the world has a record as great as this," said Mr. Mulqueen.

Mr. Mulqueen praised the effort of the government although not speaking politics, for their interest in livestock and other departments but stated, that "the government should give no more for a bull than a boy". Boys are the future men of this country and a life of sport only fits them for the hard knocks, that are sure to come in later years. Jack Wilson, president of the Y's Men, expressed the appreciation of Service Clubs for the fine address. Before the meeting closed Fred Marples, secretary of the C.A.H.A. "Pat" Walsh and "Toots" Holway spoke briefly all expressing their pleasure at being present. At the conclusion of the meeting the boys gathered around and autographs were asked of the principal guests at the banquet.

FINANCIAL TRAGEDY AVERTED BY POLICY

A Flagstone, B.C. woman recently found what she feared was a financial tragedy. Her husband was killed in an automobile accident and she was apparently left without funds with which to maintain her children. Her husband had insured with The Mutual Life of Canada in 1922 under Policy No. 172,035, but premiums for the past three years had not been paid.

Investigation by the Mutual Life agent revealed that the policy contained a valuable automatic "non-forfeiture" provision, the effect of which was to continue the insurance in force. There was also provision for double indemnity in case of the assured's accidental death, so that twice the amount of the policy was payable to the widow, who received a net amount of $3,456, acknowledged as a veritable "godsend."

If interested in obtaining the maximum amount of insurance protection at minimum cost, you are invited to consult the representatives of this "mutual" company or to write the Head Office direct for information.

Presentations Made To Departing Friends

The L.U.D.O. class of Scott's held their regular monthly social evening at the home of Mrs. Frank Moon on Tuesday night of this week, with about 30 present.

Mr. Elmer Smith, president of the class, called the meeting to order and a splendid program was given consisting of hymns and readings by George Sather, Angus Donald, Hilson Sine. Community singing consisting of several old favorites was also indulged in.

Mr. Sine, superintendent of the S. S. was then called on to take the chair. After a few preliminary remarks explaining that the neighbours of the community had gathered to with Mrs. Scott and Mr. and Mrs. Campbell every Sunday in their new home the following address, was made by Mrs. Morley Sine:

Tonight we are reminded of that poem in the old reader "We men may come and men may go, but..I go on forever."

Nothing in the world ever stands still, even the lowliest forms of life change, e.g.—grass, flowers, animals, but they all obey universal laws, guided by the Master mind, and the oftentimes these changes seem harsh, yet they must be in order that good may come.

For a good many years we have enjoyed the friendship of Mrs. Scott who has always been ready to lend a helping hand and who has showed us what it means to be a good neighbor by her presence and deeds of kindness. She has always had a kind word to say to everyone and could always be depended upon to give some good advice. In her home she has been a model wife and mother and it can be said of her "She went about doing good."

Ida, you have grown up in this neighborhood and we all know your sterling worth. In your own quiet way you have made a place for yourself in our affections, more especially since coming to reside here with your husband. LOCAL RED CROSS BRANCH ACTIVE

Work of Past Year Under Review is Fine Showing

The period of service during its past fiscal year extending from October 1st, 1936, to September 30th, 1936, in addition to its regular program, shows a very responsive need on the part of the local branch of the Red Cross Society. To the unfortunate victims of the flood, groceries, and liver oil, milk and clothing were delivered free in addition to a large quantity of blankets, cots and mattresses which were loaned to the Red Cross by the Department of Militia and Defence.

In the workroom, approximately 2600 articles of clothing and bedding were made up by volunteer workers for relief purposes. Yarn and flannelette were distributed to members to make up for their needy children. The distribution of these articles was done in close co-operation with the Civic Relief Department, V.O.N. Hospitals, Children's Shelter and the city churches.

Over 1000 articles of clothing were distributed to needy families by the clothing centre. Five sick and needy veterans and 21 dependants of veterans were assisted with extra nourishment clothing, food and layette.

Thirty-five families were given assistance in the firm of household equipment, groceries, milk and drugs. Each case was properly investigated before relief was given.

In the Home Nursing Department seven courses were organized with an enrolment of 126 members. Thirty-three women took instruction in the dietetics and economical cookery under the leadership of a graduate dietitian whose services were voluntarily given.

Thirty branches of the Junior Red Cross carry on an active health program in the city schools with a total membership of 1050 children.

Three beds are supported in the Outpost Hospitals of Northern Ontario.

Bridge Street Church Fire-Side Hour

Colours and decorations marking the coronation formed a noble background for the closing meeting of the season of the Bridge St. Church Fire-side Hour. Coronation atmosphere dominated the entire program arranged by Miss Lillian McGuire and Mr. Elmer Dixon. The traditions pertaining to the symbols of the coronation were very capably explained by members of the Fire-side Hour. The Crown, and the Orb, the Sceptre and the Throne Spurs were described by Mr. Ken Bird, the Coronation Chair and Stone of Scone by Miss Pearl Campbell, and the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Qualities of a Knight by Miss Grace Houston. These speeches were followed by patriotic songs. "The Maple Leaf Forever" and "O Canada". Miss Evelyn Reddick and Miss Anna Armstrong gave a duet "Land of Hope and Glory", accompanied by Mr. Alec Gordon. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

SCOTT'S W. M. S.

The April meeting of Scott's W. M. S. was at the home of Mrs. Carman Frost with 14 ladies present.

Mrs. Chapman, president, occupied the chair and minutes of last meeting adopted. The ladies replied to the roll call by using the names of the books of the New Testament. Some will evidently have to brush up on these.

The program was then taken over by Mrs. Ross Dafoe.

The chapter of the Study book on rural evangelism took the form of a debate. Mrs. Dafoe taking the affirmative side and Mrs. Sine the negative.

The answers to 5 questions were prepared and passed to members present. The chapter proved very interesting and different members entered into discussion. This method evidently created more interest and the ladies received a greater knowledge of what the missionaries are doing and what is left to be done.

The prize was given by Mrs. Lott entitled "It's not the church, it's the Christians" and Miss Dorothy Reid and Miss Ruth Sine are planning a great Temperance rally.

HALLOWAY Y.P.S.

Halloway Y. P. S. held their usual weekly meeting at the home of Miss Dorothy Reid. Miss Dorothy Reid read an address to Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Smith, who were leaving for their new home in Stirling. Miss Marie Townsend presented them with a tablecloth and towels. Mr. and Mrs. Clapp very graciously thanked the young people for the gifts. The meeting was then taken charge of by Miss Marie Townsend. Mrs. Arthur Reid gave a reading after which Mrs. Coleman Townsend gave a piano solo. A contest was then indulged in after which the ladies served a delicious lunch of sandwiches, cake, tarts, ice-cream, coffee, and candies. A social hour followed.

A visit to a coal mine means a visit underground

Coal mines are not as a rule pleasant places to visit; yet men work in them for long and tedious hours. Therefore they are pleased enough to greet King George VI on inspection tours. Britain's collieries have been made better places in which to labour in recent years, despite the depression's cloud which settled like a pall on the coal and iron industries, but they still can hardly be regarded as places for a royal reception But to-day we picture not only the King, whose interest in industrial welfare is comparatively well known, but also her motherly figure, during a visit to the Glenzia pit of the Ebbw-vale coal mine at Durham some years ago.

Their majesties were not content with inspecting the workings of mines and the pithead; they wanted to go underground So donning miners' garb, while the Queen draped the shawl of a real Lancashire lass over her head, down they went, the King George (the Duke of York then, of course), seized a miner's pick and went to work on the "face". He wanted to feel what it was like tolling down there in the bowels of the earth at a job which has been a great factor in Britain's industrial progress.

The action is typical of the man. His official report of carefully prepared description can give as good a picture of the workers' life, his problems and the labor is being actually in touch with the job, and the knowledge of these by the King in industrial and business matters is not satisfied with words.

Without ostentation or fanfare, a vast parade of the empire's business, industrial and economic life has come under his keen vision. Much of it he sees personally. His early training in mechanics has not been forgotten; his studies at Dartmouth and later were directed specifically to the economic conditions of the country and particularly to the relation of industry and labor. He drove a train in New England and a factory in Glasgow and in shipyard, textile mills, steel factory, iron foundry, packing plant and food factory he has studied at first hand the production line of the British Empire.

And his interest throughout has been less with the product and the profit than with the employer and the employee. England's workers can feel that they have an intimate friend in the present holder of the sceptre.

Meening we better start going, which we did, and we stopped and looked through the front window of the new Spick and Span restaurant, and there was a lot of ladies in there with nobody sitting at them, and 2 men was standing in front of the door, one being a thin man with a worried expression and no hat on, saying, This restaurant business isn't all it's cracked up to be.

What bisness is? the other man said, and the first man said, The trouble is people won't come in on account they see nobody in there first, and if everybody feels like that how are you going to get anybody in to start the ball rolling? and the other man said, Search me, I hope you find out. And he wawked away and I had a idea, and I whispered to Pods, Hay, maybe if we go in and sit down maybe he'll give us each a free cup of coffee and then if he's sitting there to attract other people. Sure, I said.

Sure, G, go ahead and ask him. You start in first, Pods said, and I said, You ask him, I thaent of it.

And we went up to the man and stood there and he looked down at us saying, Well boys, what's it all about?

Pods not saying anything, and I not saying anything, and I not saying nothing, and the man said, Well I've got plenty of time to listen to him, I'm sorry to say.

And he looked at Pods, and Pods said, He's the one wants to see you, mister, that's all.

Well get it off your chest, the man said looking at me, and I said, Well never mind, thanks, it must've spoil our supper.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"Theodora Goes Wild"

Theodora Goes Wild," a rollicking production that serves to introduce Irene Dunne to motion picture fans in her first starring assignment, will be shown, locally for the first time at the Capitol theatre starting Wednesday for 4 great days.

Supported by an exceptionally strong cast, Miss Dunne is permitted to run racy thru the story with sprightly tale of a small town girl who finds the city man in a big-city way. Melvyn Douglas appears opposite Miss Dunne in the leading male role, with Thomas Mitchell, Thurston Hall, Rosalind Keith.

For years Miss Dunne has been known as a dramatic star, previously she was cast as Sabra Cravat in "Cimarron," the forgotten woman in "Ann Vickers," the blind widow of "The Magnificent Obsession" and "Sweet Adeline," and Princess Ravenal in "Showboat." In "Theodora Goes Wild," as the demure, prim little girl, Miss Dunne indulges in a wild spree of sophisticated comedy which will undoubtedly rank her as one of the screen's finest comediennes.

The story unfolded in "Theodora" tells of a small town girl who writes and sells a pen name for her own amusement. Her novels, of the sophisticated variety, result in the best-selling class overnight. Her neighbors had organized to protest the young author's identity, but it is discovered by the handsome young illustrator of her books, the carefree Douglas. Douglas follows her to her home town, manages to win a job there as gardener, and soon finds himself in love.

When the love is reciprocated, the illustrator disappears. Instead of Douglas, Miss Dunne finds letters into her own hands. Following the sophisticated instructions outlined in her books, she hastens to the city in quest. There she engages in a series of hilarious escapades that bring out the type of humor for which the home town newspaper last seen during the Green Wave.

Splendid in every sense of the meaning, Mervo-Goldwyn-Mayer's first lavish musical offering "Broadway Melody" again delighted capacity audiences at the Regio last night and will be the picture shown Thursday and Friday.

A description of the original theme would be superfluous to readers of the Ontario but it could be written here without fear of contradiction that the studio has gone far and beyond any beauty which the stage attempted. Elaborate is a mild word to describe the magnificent production.

Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy have not been seen together in a singing story as many times before as they did last night. Their's is a unique dual stardom in "Naughty Marietta" and then "Rose Marie."

In the supporting cast of "Broadway Melody" Eleanor Powell plays a picturesque role as the temperamental dancing star. Robert Taylor, the memorable "Romeo and Juliet" which was one of the sensational pictures of 1936. There is a newcomer in the cast, Lynne Carver, a delightful beautiful young singer from the Kentucky Blue Grass regions who acts unusually well. She and Tom Brown provide the juvenile romance in the story.

In love with Nelson Eddy, a young singer, Jeanette MacDonald is the object of many a plot to be taken sense of duty, marries John Barrymore, a has-been, to whom she owes her career. When circumstances brings her and the younger singer again, they realize that their love is stronger than before. She even has to endure over the problem of the younger love. The story is full of romance of love and a career.

The MacDonald and Eddy sing the song numbers in full tune, "Will You Remember?" so effectively that the two have to sing it again. Miss MacDonald also sings two complete operatic arias from memorable picture, "The Great Ziegfeld", by all means do not miss this picture. It is recommended by the Belle until Friday, matinee daily.

Saw First Gold Rush, of '98' Now Sees Yukon Join B. C.

Premier Pattullo, 40 Years Ago Held Post on Yukon Commission

TO GOVERN YUKON

Ottawa, Apr. 27 (CP)—Forty years ago a young newspaper man from Galt, Ontario, trod the "trail of '98" as a minor government official and at that time got the greatest gold rush in history, the rush which made the Yukon territory world famous.

Last night as Premier of British Columbia, the same man, Thomas Duff Pattullo, announced the Yukon would become a part of that province. Thus Mr. Pattullo may come to govern the country he knows so well and the country which saw him start on the road to high office.

Pattullo Held Post.

Mr. Pattullo was Secretary of the Yukon Commission in the turbulent years of 1897 and 1898 which saw 30,000 adventurous gold seekers from all corners of the earth pour into the rock-bound and arctic country which forms the northwest corner of Canada.

For three years as assistant gold commissioner he watched the trickle of yellow metal ooze out to the fringes of the world and make millionaires of a lucky few of those 30,000 pioneers. He also sat on the city council of Dawson, still the principal town in the Yukon, though much depleted in population.

Few Traders Made Fortune.

Few traders blazed the trail for the white men into the Yukon in the shadow of the last century but it was prospectors who put the country on the map. In the 17th of January, 1896, placer gold was discovered on Bonanza creek, and the fabulous quantities as to set thousands of men on the long hard trail into the Sub-Arctic.

This was not the first discovery as many years before gold had been found and mined in the Yukon but it was one of the great discoveries of the time. The first prospectors reached the Yukon in 1873 and in the years following gold was mined on the Forty Mile and Sixty Mile rivers but not in startling quantities.

Celebrated in Poetry.

The rush of '98 has been celebrated in song and story as have the other events in the world's history. Robert W. Service has immortalized the scenes and typical characters of those eventful years in his rollicking poetry.

In such poems as "The Shooting of Dan McGrew" and "The Cremation of Sam McGee" he has distilled into a few words and verses all the heroism, the sin, and the hardship encountered by the men who staked their lives against the cold and hard silence.

Visitors to the Yukon today travel by modern transportation, motor cars and encounter none of the hardships which met the gold-seekers. Now when the chief entrance to the Yukon is through Skagway, Alaska, a picturesque relic at the head of the Lynn Canal.

800 to Gold Days.

Skagway was the original wild and woolly city of the northwest where Soapy Smith and his gang of bandits held away and where Soapy and Frank Reid shot and killed each other in mortal combat.

Today Yukon Territory has an area of 207,076 square miles and is situated on the south by British Columbia, on the east by Alaska, on the north by the Arctic Ocean and on the east by the Northwest Territories.

During the gold rush days the population exceeded 30,000. The territory has appeared in the census of the Canadian census in 1901 when 27,219 persons were found there. The 1921 census it was down to 4,230.

DR. MACDONALD DROWNS IN CAR

Swept Away in Torrent as He Was Proceeding to Wreck Scene

Woodstock, Ont., April 27 (CP)—Dr. Harold Leslie MacDonald, 34, of this Oxford Dairy District, investigating a fatal accident on the Belleville washout-wreck that cost four persons their lives yesterday. Two passengers in the car with the coroner were swept from the Otter Creek Bridge on Highway No. 4, roaring eastward, when the loose-footing suddenly gave way and in a 10-foot embankment. He and Fireman Norman R. Allen, also of Sweaburg, escaped with injuries from the wreckage. The body of the man was found in the rods and whose identity was unknown was not known, but a wedding ring would have been swept away in the flood.

Car Swept Into Torrent

Dr. J. H. MacDonald, Ingersoll's public health officer, was speeding eastward on No. 2 Highway and crossing a bridge near Beachville, when the two drivers knew saw the machine suddenly swept from the roadway. They seen to wave his hand frantically as the torrent caught his car like driftwood. He and Allen were landed safely on an all-night search, but the car was found in the wreck of the bank bank of the swollen Thames River.

Two passengers aboard the Flyer were hurt, but the baggageman, William Oyler, Brantford, and a second trainman, Alyre Jokmar, a French-Canadian suffered minor injuries. Guernica, Spain, April 27 (AP)—Hundreds of civilians were killed and this ancient city, one capital of the Basque country, left a blazing mass of blazing ruins today after Spanish Insurgent aerial bombardment.

The raid started yesterday when bombing planes identified as German manufacture roared over the city in groups of five seen to wave his hand frantically as the torrent caught his car like driftwood. Second Consecutive Expulsion in Two Days For Dodger Pilot

(By Bill Bond)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Once again in first place in the American League, the Yankees already are a step ahead of their blistering 1936 pace.

As they man-handled their way to victory in the opener, circuit permanent race and, subsequently, in the World Series last year, the Yanks skipped few teams and individual batting honors.

Take two of the prodigious power of Murderers' Row—Gehrig, Dimaggio, Selkirk, Powell, Dickey, and Co. Little, if any, attention was paid their offensive strength, as the slugger rifles trailed only the White Sox in fielding efficiency with an average of .977.

Now they have achieved one slippery play they figured to bring record-breaking 1936 climb. For inscribed in Ruth-ese credit is the unique triple play of the year in the week-old season. Last season the American League set records, to tie the all-time record, but the Yanks didn't have one.

Credit for setting the three-ply killing in motion goes to Tony Lazzeri, the star of the Pacific Coast Francisco, whose instinctive ability around his second-base station more than makes up for his aging legs.

Need Play by Lazzeri

Tough Tony has done a lot of neat jobs for the Yanks, but few easier than the one he pulled off in the eighth inning or yesterday's 7-1 defeat of the Athletics. That defeat shoved them out of the lead and moved the champions into it.

With runners on first and second, Chubby Dean, rookie son of Johnny Bronca's offerings straight at Lazzeri. It would have been simple for Tony to play it safe. Instead Tony elected to gamble, trapped the ball, then flipped it to shortstop Frank Crosetti, his fellow San Franciscan.

Before the A's or the frantic fielders customers knew what was about, Bob Johnson had been forced at second, Crosetti had pivoted at first and Wally Moses was tagged by Red Rolfe as he came into third.

Though the weather man washed out all but three games, those three provided ample excitement to go around. Boston Bees 9-5 trimming of Newsboy Brown by Cincinnati Reds, Brooklyn Manager Burleigh Grimes' ground-rule interference ruling on a fly ball, and Dodger Bob Hospital for X-rays and observation.

FIVE IN ROW FOR TORONTO LEAFS

Bunch Seven Hits Effectively to Defeat Syracuse 6-3

By The Associated Press

The International League's "1451" teams, Toronto Maple Leafs and Newark Bears may be short on experience, but they're "long" on the stuff that wins ball games.

The season is less than a week old, but so far the standing shows these two well out in front, each with five straight victories.

The Toronto "kids" made only seven hits off Syracuse flinging but bunched them effectively for three run rallies in the fourth and seventh, limiting to beat the Chiefs 6-3. Two experienced Maple Leaf sluggers, Gene Nebiolo and Joe Berly, worked so well in the clutching that the Chiefs couldn't win on it in the five frames of errors.

Marius Russo, one of Newark's rookie pitchers, had some trouble marking up the year's fifth triumph yesterday but his teammates gave him plenty of batting support to defeat Rochester Red Wings 8-7.

Two other games yesterday, Buffalo-Baltimore and Montreal-Jersey City, were postponed because of rain and cold.

New York, April 27—(AP)—Big league scouts are flocking to Winston-Salem, N.C., to watch Archie Templeton mow 'em down for the Methodist Children's home team.... Archie, 15, has the Dizzy Dean's agog with his strike-out exploits.... In five innings this season he has fanned 68 batters.... Woof!.... May be another Bob Feller or another Babe Ruth, for they say he can pour the pine into that leather-ad-mess as well as he pitches.... Glutton for work as baseball career in a home for boys, too.)

Yankees are mighty interested and so are the Cardinals.... Our own operatives reported one big league club offered Templeton $10,000 to sign a contract.... Another said it would better say $40 the kid received by $1,000.... One report has it the Cardinals gave the hillbilly track and that if Archie hasn't already made up his mind to cast his lot with St. Louis, he will soon.... Branch Rickey made a personal visit to Winston-Salem to watch the youngster in action.

No less than five gum shoe men were in the park the day Archie did his stuff.... Frank Ricker (Branch's lieutenant), Charlie Barrett and Oliver Prumich....President of the Rochester International League club, Joe Cards....Paul Krichell and Gene McCann were there for the Yankees....They are a busy all right. Templeton obliged by fanning 18 in a row....Who's going to be Bucky Woolfe, 17, of Richmond pitcher, who has turned in 14 shutouts in as many games.

One "rookie" who is more than living up to expectations is Manager Leroy Grimes....He has been kicked out of two ball games in two days.

SUDBURY TIGERS WIN IN OVERTIME

Hastie Scores Goal, That Brings International Title to Canada

Toronto, April 27 (CP)—Sudbury's Rookey-Rookey Tigers posted an additional title today—International championship—to bring the proud one of Allan Cup champions of Canada. To do it they took the measure of Toronto Marlboros, Ontario champions, by the slimmest of margins.

Lions won last night's game 2-1 to set the score at a win apiece and a draw in their best-of-three series. Then the teams went into overtime with the first goal to count and George Hastie, rangy centreman of Tigers, got it.

Only 2,000 fans saw the last game of the series that was far from a financial success. In seven games, including four preliminary contests (both Winnipeg Monarchs and Hershey Bears taking part, there wasn't a crowd much over the 2,000 mark.

In the regulation time last night Bobby Walton and Lou Bates gave Lions a 2-0 lead while the only Sudbury counter was from Don Grosso.

Lions today for New York from whence they will embark for England late in the day. They still have to play a coronation series in London.

Yesterday's Stars

Tony Cuccinello, Bees—Hit two doubles and drove in three runs and scored twice as Boston trimmed Cincinnati 9-5.

John (Footsie) Marcum, Red Sox—Gave Senators 10 hits but bore down in pinches to beat Washington 12-5.

Johnny Vander Meer, Tony Lazzeri, Frank Crosetti, Lou Gehrig and Red Rolfe, Yankees—Broncs held A's to six hits as Yanks won 7-1; Lazzeri and Gehrig led batting attack with three hits each; Lazzeri, Crosetti, Gehrig and Rolfe executed season's first triple play.

PRACTICE CALLED FOR KIWANIS JRS.

Players on Team Must Forego Softball During Summer

"Batter up"

"Play Ball"

All those familiar salutation will be heard at the Fair Grounds on May 24th, but prior to which the Belleville Kiwanis kids must go through their practices and hard period of spring training. Coach H. G. "Pop" Woodley has called the initial spring practice of the Kiwanis juniors at the Collegiate grounds on Thursday night and he subsequently announced, that all positions are vacant on the team. Coach Woodley, substantiated by Manager Bill Cook added, however, that the practice of the local junior team this year would be confined purely to the playing of baseball.

"We have no objections to any boy playing softball but if he desires to play softball, we are not at all interested in that individual player's anticipation in the baseball realm. We have no axes to grind with the softball game, but let's quit kidding—ourselves, the two games do not mix nor can you mingle softball with baseball and for many obvious reasons," definitely stated Coach Woodley as he invited every junior baseball player in the Belleville baseball circuit to turn out and earn himself a position on Belleville's only baseball club to be represented in the ball diamond of 1937.

Practices, without discrimination will be held at the Collegiate campus starting Tuesday night and will continue until the grounds are available at the Exhibition Park. The Belleville Baseball Club has been accepted in the Ontario Boys' Baseball League and an open league schedule at home, versus "Doc" Wetsh's strong Latta team, here on May 24th. In the meantime Coach Woodley hopes to be instrumental in whipping together a formidable team of teen aged players, who will be an asset to the city, but their success remains in the hands of ambitious junior baseball players, who are desirous of playing the national summer pastime of baseball.

All positions are open and with a lengthy playing schedule on their hands, the local Kiwanis club are looking forward to providing some really good baseball for the forthcoming season.

"Who's going to be on this party?" she questioned him after awhile.

"It'll be small, thank heaven. There'll be couples, of course, and three bridge players, that think, talk, eat and sleep bridge. You'll probably catch a glimpse of them every time they come crouching over the table—one of the dummies might condescend to tell you how he made six no trumps last hand, doubled, redoubled and vulnerable. That'll just about wash up mother and the bridge players."

"Then there'll be the Brewsters—she was Alice Satterfield and can't quite forget that there have been Satterfields in Virginia since the year one, and Jim's a comedy guy. When he's sober." Stanley added.

"And Bob Mark and his kid sister, Alison, have been at the house since yesterday. A couple of chaps I play polo with, Arch Sheets and John Flanders, get in tonight. They are both Ex-R.—.—ne Officers, and don't believe anything Arch tells you!"

"I won't," Anne promised meekly.

"It's a funny thing," Stanley observed suddenly, "but I don't like the idea of introducing you to Arch and John and Jim Brewster. They don't mean half they say, but they say too damn much, and they'll all get potted as the clock strikes seven —they always do."

He stopped the car in the middle of the road.

"I wonder if I'm falling in love with you," he said in a rush.

Anne's heart gave a great leap. There was a breathless, electric quality in the silence. Dust shunted up by their wheels revolved in the sunshine like specks of gold dust and from a field nearby came the sharp, delicious scent of clover and drying grass. Somewhere far off a lawn-mower whirred, whirred again, was silent.

"I wouldn't know about that," Anne said unsteadily. And then, when he continued to regard her intently: "Go on Stanley, with your list. Who are the girls?"

He started the car.

"An several more or less is nothing in your life is it?" he stated rather vexedly. But there has been no several; he knew it and Anne knew it.

Both felt oddly shaken, oddly ill at ease; both were wondering at that quick spark which had leaped from one to the other, had seared and died.

"Nancy's coming" Stanley contributed a little tamely. Then, glancing at Anne: "You're wrong about Nancy. She likes you."

"That's nice."

Anne would see Nancy—Nancy's being generous and kind, assuring the credulous Stanley of her affection for his friend, thus convincing him sobbedly and sorely that Nancy was a good sport, a girl he could depend upon. But she was not inclined to point out Nancy's possible motives; she decided ironically that she would be as kind as Nancy.

After several more miles through the rolling countryside they reached an iron gate, where Stanley turned in, honked. A man in overalls raking a garden in front of a small house ran to open it.—He touched his hat at Stanley's greeting and they putt-putted up a winding road past a tennis court dappled with sun and shadow, past a long sweep of velvety lawn, in and out among oak and beech trees. At every turn they faced the sapphire bay.

The 50-ton an enormous structure of gray stone, buried in ivy, sprawled along a hillside in terraced levels. Its swinging windows and colored slats roof flashing in the sunshine. Smoke curled from one of the chimneys in the back and trailed slowly in the still, clear air.

On the lawn under a beach umbrella four people, two men and two women, bent over a bridge table. True to Stanley's prediction, Mrs. Bye was engaged at her favorite sport. As the car wheeled to a stop, she reluctantly laid down her hand, excused herself and hurried toward them, a smart, thin woman, less interested in Anne than in keeping her play in mind, but more interested in Stanley than in anything else in the world.

"You needn't have taken out that horror again, Stanley," she began fretfully. "You know, I'm not in any mortal terror that it will blow up with you some day!"

Stanley made a deprecatory gesture. Mrs. Bye had turned to Anne. "Don't ever have a son," she said somewhat surprisingly. "You'll live to regret it. The trouble, the worry, the labor, you're no idea . . . ."

Stanley seized the pause to introduce Anne, who was feeling decidedly guilty at adding to her hostess's labors. Mrs. Bye did nothing to alleviate that feeling.

"Now, I'm sure you'll want to go to your room," she continued in a vague, pained way, and at once succeeded in making Anne conscious of dusty clothes.

"I'll just show you—"

Here she glanced longingly toward the bridge table.

"You're going to get back to those cut-throats," Stanley accused her.

She laughed indignantly at her own weakness.

"Perhaps I am. Stanley, if you'd be a dear boy? It's the blue room. Anne, I'll—I'll Miss— Miss Lee won't mind—"

Anne wouldn't.

And Mrs. Bye finished a sentence. As she retreated she tossed off remarks relating to the activities of others who were swimming, or boating or perhaps on the links. Anne would have known quite which. Within a minute she was plunged deep into the intricacies of bridgeing or extra trick out of a game hand.

Anne and Stanley entered the house, Stanley carrying Anne's suitcase. He led the way through spacious, airy rooms and up a graceful curving stairway. How many people must it take to keep a place like this? An army, an army of servants with swarming, flying feet, and every woman might sit amid beauty that never saw, bending her mind, her attentions, her energy upon a card game.

They came to the blue room, so called because of wallpaper of pale blue and flittings and draperies of pale blue, and there the decorator who had decided that the room should be keyed to one window which caused the bay like a picture. A beautiful room, but Anne scarcely saw it.

Once the door closed behind Stanley she sat down; she felt very strange, weak somehow. She had dreaded meeting Mrs. Bye, dreaded the meeting was over, had braced herself for rudeness, had braced herself for nothing, had come to that meeting determined to prove herself, but there had been no conflict, there had been no rudeness, there had simply been no interest in anything she might have to offer. It was apparent that, to Mrs. Bye, Anne Lee meant nothing at all.

She wouldn't recognize me if she met me on the street," Anne thought rebelliously. "She doesn't know I'm on earth."

Her clothes grew hotter as she remembered the scene as she had imagined it would be, and compared it with the actuality. Presently a maid tapped on the door and entered to unpack her bag. She asked if mademoiselle would need her. Anne said no and was alone again.

Only a few minutes passed before Stanley knocked, then opened the door to see him trim and neat in a bathing suit, a towel over one arm.

"How's to swim?" he invited.

"I didn't bring a bathing suit".

"That's all right. A roomful somewhere. Or, if there isn't, here will be said, after opening a number of doors. "And here's Alison —Alison Mark."

A gray-eyed girl with a very black bob turned from a mirror to grin at them. She wore a red bathing suit.

"You might have 'knocked,' she complained.

"You had plenty of time to scream," Stanley retorted, grinning in turn. "And this is Anne Lee, I'll wager, but both of you downstairs."

He banged the door in the middle of Alison's offer to accompany him immediately. She looked disconsolately at Anne, who was examining a pile of bathing suits scattered on the bed.

"They're all terrible," Alison offered, after a moment. She twisted to observe herself in the mirror. "This one is at least two sizes too large."

Anne thought that if anything the suit was two sizes too small. But she entered a polite demurrer, which appeared to settle Alison's doubts. She sat looking at herself, lighted a cigarette, offered one to Anne, and then sat down.

"What was it Stanley said your name was?"

"Anne—Anne Lee."

"Oh, I believe Nancy told me about you."

Alison did not volunteer what it was that Nancy had told her, and very shortly she left the room.

BRIEF TRIUMPH

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

When Anne, wearing a turquoise blue bathing suit, wrapped in a turquoise bathing cape, had managed to thrust into slippers many times too large, came downstairs, she found Stanley one of the glassed-in piazzas dancing with Alison. As she stood watching them from the door, Stanley instantly stopped dancing.

"Let's finish the record out, anyhow" said Alison, annoyed.

"Not a chance."

He looked around the house and trailed down to the pool, where boys and girls sprawled on a surrounding rail or sat on the edge of water. Their arrival caused little stir, for they were not there for the new introductions. Alison promptly collected a group and went off into the water, Nancy, poised at the diving board, called a cheery greeting to Stanley and Anne, executed a great splash, came up, shrieked a challenge to Alison and Stanley and fell mell for the other end of the pool. Like a flash he was over the side and in the water.

Anne was not a good swimmer. She swam with a fair if unusual swing variety, unused from one season to the next. She had always promised to fall one and if ever to become really proficient, but in a girl such as Anne opportunity was easily deferred. She seated herself on the cement edge of the pool, dangled her feet in the water, regarded Nancy's careless, graceful possessiveness, her obvious claim on Nancy with Stanley, Stanley duckhad her; Nancy eluding his grip, in turn ducking him.

Suddenly Anne looked away, She had selected a window on the ramp near two of the other girls, Alice Brewster and Joyce Sewell, but they were so engrossed in their low-voiced conversation apparently unconscious of her presence. Anne kicked her feet back and forth in the water and watched the swimmers maintained with expression of smiling, interested amusement. But, suddenly, she knew that her nervous fears were going to be justified.

The girls were like Mrs. Bye: they were not what they were simply disinterested. She was an outsider, and that was the end of it. Any girl would have felt the same, and men are the real arbiters of popularity, for every woman knows men are too timid or too lazy. Anne knew that no matter what miracle she might be able to work on the men, no miracle was going to make the girls accept her. They would spoil her week-end, would succeed somehow in convincing the man that she was queer, that she didn't belong. What was she doing, here, a girl who didn't swim, play tennis or golf—a girl who didn't know the people they knew, speak the language they spoke?

"Why don't you come on in" someone shouted and startled her. It was Arch Sheets. He and three other men were playing a rough game of water polo with a large red and white striped ball.

"I can't swim well enough."

"Sure you can."

Everybody among Arch's acquaintanceship could swim perfectly. He imagined that Anne was leading him on. Anne glanced toward Alice Brewster and Joyce, and she imagined that both were watching. She took a long breath and started out, making a dreadful commotion, panting like a small active dog, praying that she would keep afloat. She had advanced nearly five yards when she saw the red and white ball flying through the air, straight at her head. It struck Arch's comment on her method of locomotion. The ball struck her on the side of the face; she gave a frightened yip and at once sank.

Arch was distant by more than 15 yards, but he caught the expression in the blue eyes as she went under. He covered the 15 yards in much less time than she had taken for five. In a twinkling he fished her up and conveyed he to the edge of the pool, where he hung beside her, his arms on a level with hers. The others crowded around, questioning, snickering: What is it? What happened?

"Gosh, I thought you were fooling!" This from the stricken Arch.

"Anne, Anne, are you all right?" Stanley bobbed up after a breathless dash from the springboard. His voice was touched with panic.

The girl was still breathing extravagantly, deeply, still clinging desperately to Arch's hand. Her arms ached, her shoulders, her nose and eyes stung.

"All right now. I—I was scared."

Her lips trembled, her eyes dark with remembered fright, she attempted an uncertain little smile. Stanley tightened his grip on her fingers.

"What a nerve!" he commented admiringly. "I dared her, I thought all the time—" His was beginning anew for Stanley's benefit, when Nancy, who had swum in a broad leisurely fashion, joined the crowd in the water and hoisted herself to the edge of the pool.

"What in the world induced you to try it?" she demanded acidulously, and contrived to inject into her question a hint that perhaps Anne had done this to attract attention. Anne failed to answer. Her fear had departed as swiftly as it had come; she only wanted now to think no more about it.

Stanley guessed."

"Let's all get out," he said abruptly. "I've had enough swimming for one day."

Nancy looked at Nancy decided, taking his remark to herself. "It's time to dress for dinner anyhow."

They all clambered out of the pool and straggled toward the house, Anne accompanied on one side by Stanley, on the other by the subdued Arch. Already she felt silly. Her performance had been inexcusably foolhardy. Worse, it had made her conscious in just the way she desired not to be.

She reached the blue room and shut the door. Dinner loomed before her, large and formidable. The incident at the pool had proved once and for all that she could not meet these girls on their own ground. She would have to work, to think up some line of her own, to stick to it; she would have to pretend every minute of tonight and tomorrow and tomorrow evening that she was having a marvellous time.

She surveyed her wardrobe and was faced by another problem. Nancy had spoken of dressing for dinner. What had she meant? A dinner dress? Anne had brought two: one she had borrowed from Irene, an informal flowered chiffon that fit rather badly in the sleeves, and another, more formal, of stiffly starched net that was becoming. The net would be just the thing in town.

The problem grew with her hesitation. She tried to recall what she had read in magazines and newspaper fashion columns of correct country dress; she recalled nothing. Normally she might have been amused by the dilemma, but she was in an abnormally sensitive frame of mind. The decision became one of the most important of her life—for which future events to depend upon it.

Joyce Sewell was dressing in the next room, but Anne thought that she would rather die than appeal to Joyce, or Alice Brewster, or before she would ring for the maid to ask advice. Suddenly she remembered over the final choice, an answer came to her from out of the past. Long ago Irene, interested in talking with her gay, wise little mother, had asked hopelessly unsuccessful high-school dance. Her mother had said: "Probably it's that you tried too hard, my dear. You weren't yourself. Any girl who is natural and sweet and well bred is bound to be popular, and—if she isn't—she knows she's done her best; she hasn't any regrets."

Anne marched across the room and put into her evening net, and then, after moment, she stepped into the hall, closed it softly behind door, and, her heart pounding, she knocked. The door was opened quickly; Joyce looked surprised but not unfriendly.

"I—I was wondering," Anne stammered, for the first time to meet each other. "Do you think my dress is all right?"

"It's swell," Joyce assured her. After that instant of surprise. She hesitated and added: "Why don't you come in till I finish dressing? We can go down together."

"I was worrying myself sick," Anne confessed, after she had gone inside and sat down on Joyce's bed. "I've never been in a place like this before and I—I didn't know."

"Everyone does pretty much as he pleases here," Joyce said comfortably, as she combed her hair. "But I know how you feel. I've felt like that myself. I've been thrown with a bunch of strange people, and always treat anybody new like a leper."

Just being herself, not a line at all, and the thing worked like a charm. Anne was herself, but Joyce herself; it was natural that the newcomer into the circle of Joyce's two were talking easily and animatedly, and after they had gone downstairs Anne discovered that Joyce had done her a real kindness. She was not the only one in three gowns. The other girls, gathered about the living room fire in long tails and canapes, had only changed into sports dresses, fresh and comfortable. Anne's sophisticated pink dresses, cotlons and striped tub skirts looked out of place.

Stanley left off fiddling with the dials of a radio and crossed to Anne.

"See, you look great," he said boyishly, admiringly, regarding the pale-blue net girl in her long, full skirts, her bare arms, and shoulders lightly powdered and gleaming in the lights.

"I'm afraid I look a little as if I were dressed for the firemen's ball," Anne replied composedly. "But Joyce Sewell was too tender-hearted to tell me, and I was too proud to ask the maid."

Stanley threw back his head and roared.

"That's just where you are clever," he began earnestly, subduing his mirth. "The other girls should take a lesson from you, forget about tennis and golf at night, even if we aren't going to town. You—why, you look beautiful. You don't look like a boy. You look like a—a lady, I guess it is."

MARKET COMMENT

Current weakness in the London market has been reflected on the local Exchange, though certain latter-listed stocks such as International Nickel, Canadian Pacific, and Brazilian Traction. While a slight decline in recent weeks in base metal prices has contributed to the drop in such stocks as Nickel and Smelters, there are many experts who believe that this decline has been over-discounted by the stocks representative base metal producers. This would seem to be the correct opinion in view of the fact the world statistical position of base metals is entirely satisfactory and may be said to favor the sellers of these metals since the world demand is still slightly ahead of supply. Moreover there is no comparison whatever between the present situation with regard to base metals and that obtaining in 1929, at the latter date metal stocks were piling up all over the world and it was obvious that even if business remained at the peak levels of those years there was bound to be a surplus of stocks which would accrue or later cause a depression in base metal prices. Today such a position does not exist, and business demands for metals are only at the beginning of their upward curve.

Kerr Addison Mocks With Good Results

Kerr Addison Gold Mines is continuing to meet with good results in the diamond drilling campaign with the latest hole designed to cut orebodies around the 900-ft. horizon, expected to be intersecting similar conditions to those at the 800 ft. mark. Hole No. 366 put down 200 ft. and at 500, 504, the first of the deep holes, and directly below No. 350 which cut orebodies on sections at the 300-ft. horizon, encountered the orebody between 490 and 500 feet. It yielded a core length of 140 ft. or a true width of 85 ft. from 20 to 520 ft., which averaged $39.91, uncut, or $7.48, after particularly high values were reduced. The hanging wall ore section from 20 to 420 ft. averaged $36.05 uncut or $11.20, cut. True width is about 27 ft. Footwall ore section from 415 to 520 ft., a true width of 34 ft., averaged $116.56 uncut, or $15.50, cut. Meanwhile additional drilling is being done to test the easterly extension at a depth of 900 ft.

Attractive Yields Are Now Available.

Investors seeking a return of 5 per cent. or better on their money can now secure the same from issues that have a seasoned background. National Breweries common might be mentioned in this connection, so might International Petroleum, Montreal Power, Dominion Textile or B.A. Oil.

Calves were steady to firm while sheep and lambs sold near previous levels. The hog market was unsettled by early afternoon. Cattle holdover from Monday, was 800 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 1,200; calves 560; hogs 1,300; sheep and lambs 810.

Medium to good weighty steers brought $7 to $8.25. Good butcher steers and heifers were from $7.25 to $7.50, a few reaching $7.75. Common butchers sold down to $5.50. Cows ranged from $3.50 to $5.50, some up to $5.75. Good bulls were $4.50 to $5 and bologna from $3.50 to $4.25.

Choice veal calves were priced at $9 to $9.50 with tops at $9.75 to $10. Common to medium grades were from $6.50 to $8.50.

Indications were the hog market would open near previous levels at $8.00 to $8.75.

Good Ontario feed-lot lambs are scarce. Most sold at $11. Sheep moved at $5 to $6 cwt. for good light ewes. Spring lambs sold slowly at $7 to $9.50 each.

Montreal Livestock

Montreal, April 27.—(CP)—Calf prices dropped 25 cents in early livestock trading today while other divisions held steady and unchanged.

Receipts: Cattle 95; calves 1783; sheep and lambs 15; hogs 891.

Choice steers and heifers calves made $8.50 while mediums sold from $6.50 to $8. Bulk of sales were made on plain to fair kinds and sold $5 and $6.25. Common light calves sold at $4.

Spring lambs averaging around 70 pounds made $7 each with lights around $6 each. Sheep went from $5 to $6.

Bacon hogs, fed and watered, made $9.25 with selects at the same $11 premium. Butchers, also again although it has stopped raining here. The north branch is from the St. Mary's and Stratford area and the waters have been receding in that district since Monday.

"All artesian wells have been declared unfit for use because the supply is contaminated," said Buchanan. "We're giving it pretty strong doses of chlorine and the water is very good but that's just that much better because the people won't drink it without boiling it."

Industries Co-operate.

"Industries co-operated by practically all shutting down during the height of the flood. Massey-Harris and Morton streets went out, cutting our available labor force by nearly one-third," he said.

The Brantford Street bridge leading north out of the city was opened today after having been closed since Saturday and it is hoped is possible along Highway No. 22 to Hamilton. The highway was impassable four is open to Wingham and Goderich districts, and number seven to Sarnia. Meanwhile the water service was opened this morning. It had been closed yesterday and last night because of high water pouring along the streets of St. Mary's but the line has stabilized there.

Road to Windsor Closed

"The road to Windsor is closed because all bridges across south Talbot Creek and the Thames river are closed, and the bridge at Delaware was barricaded last night when it became apparent it was unsafe. But traffic to Windsor is possible by following the North Ridge road about 10 miles to Strathroy and then cutting down through a good many side gravel roads to Dorchester, crossing the bridge there and continuing east along the gravel road," said pennard. "The gravel road is in fair condition between Dorchester and Ingersoll but in poor condition between Dorchester and London. There is a slight detour at Woodstock. Several change through London to Toronto by way of Highway 2 today."

Food Floats Out of Stores

A tour by boat of the West London section, home of 8,000 persons affected, showed curious incidents in the flood. Food-stuffs floated out of stores filled with water to within a few inches of the ceiling. A truck loaded with beer had stalled as it came out of a gasoline filling station. An icehouse truck loaded with six new motor cars floated down the main thoroughfare road and two cars had toppled off the top of the truck. High water marks showed the flood had receded in that area by three feet during the day.

A freckled-faced blond boy of nine called out to the newspapermen in the boat about his two dogs. "We took them up to the second floor but we had to leave them," he called. "They wouldn't take to the water."

The lad gave explicit directions as to where his home was located and it was found the family had been rescued through a hole chopped in the roof. But one dog had been rescued and the other was still missing. The boy alternately smiled and cried, torn between pleasure that one dog was saved and the sorrow that the other seemed lost.

CORONATION ODE BY MASEFIELD

London, April 27 (AP)—Poet Laureate John Masefield's "Prayer" for the Coronation of England today in the official Coronation souvenir program.

The poem, which is in addition to a previously announced Sonnet by Masefield, follows:

"O God, the Ruler over earth and sea,
Grant, Thy guidance in the reign to be!
Grant that our king may make this ancient land
A realm of brotherhood, working mind and hand
To make the life of man a fairer
God grant this living glory to the king.

"Grant, to our queen, the strength that lifts and shares
The daily burden that a monarch bears
Grant to the both, Thy holy help and grace
The hopeless hope, the workless, the light to see, and skill to make its see Where we are bad, what better ways may be;
And grant, we give to working minds and sent.
To the unseeing things beyond their beg.

"Grant to them peace, and Thy diviner peace,
For by that peace human wars to cease
Make we the councils of the men who sway
Make here, the Britains far away;
And grant us all, that every right-in this beginning reign may be fulfilled."

BLOW-OUTS STRIKE FAST

GET PROTECTION NOW!

Yesterday's tires can't stand the terrific heat generated inside the tire at today's high speeds. Rubber and fabric begin to separate, a tiny blister grows—until some day—BANG! It's a BLOW-OUT!

Goodrich engineers invented the Life-Saver Golden Ply and built it into every Goodrich Silvertown tire. This layer of scientific rubber and full-floating cords is scientifically treated to resist internal heat. It keeps rubber and fabric from separating. Prevents blisters that cause high-speed blow-outs.

Why not get Goodrich Golden Ply Silvertowns on your car now. They cost not a cent more than other standard tires.

DAILY SHORT STORY

In a Name

By Daphne A. McVicker

"What can you do?" the brawny Courtney, black-haired giant sneered. "What can the cops, what can anybody do? Take this prize bandit, this dirty per Beedon that shot up the hotel the other night and got away. Suppose you ran across the guy, right. What would you do? Chauffe him meekly wherever he wanted to go, that's what you'd do."

The small girl in the white coat whirled, her dark eyes blazing.

"Is that what you'd do, Gouri?" she asked this lazy huddle that was Courtney Fraser, back in a corner of the country club porch.

"Not at all," his good humored voice was careless. "I should use guile on this bandit. That's my middle name—Guile. Courtney G. Grenier, Guile, Inc. I should outsmart Mr. Bandit, being chief physical prowess, and—"

"Oh!" the girl stamped a white kid pump. "You all make me sick. Ted makes me very sick. A great big he-man like Ted saying he'd let a little runup off with him. Men make me sicker making a joke out of everything Court. I'd be ashamed to own to your name, if you don't mind making fun of it."

Presently Virginia was ... at the wheel of a powerful red roadster, spinning up the long hard stretch of sand with all of the motor's strength purring under her fingers. When she slowed down to turn into the main road she shifted and took the car lurched. A voice came from the rumble seat.

"And don't jerk the car around that way," it said. "It upsets my complexion, and other important details. Oh, did I frighten you, Jinny? Didn't you know I was back here disguised as a sultcase?"

"The disguise was impenetrable," she told him between clenched white teeth. "Just something that has to be carried. Full of empty air."

He had climbed over into the seat beside her and he bent a look of whimsical remonstrance upon her.

"Now Jinny, a mouth like that was made for sweeter things."

The car lurched violently as the figure of a man loomed up in the darkness. It was a white, scarred face, with the angry impatience of a trapped animal and the voice that came from it was an animal's tone-less snarl.

"O. K. there, stop the car," he said. "Move over, sister. — Get out, Buddy. I'm taking your place and make it snappy."

A small sound came from Virginia's pallid lips. But Gouri's voice was steady.

"I wouldn't do that," he said. "There's a car coming."

The man pressed into the seat beside Virginia. "Scram," he told Courtney.

The moonlight showed Courtney's face, blacked off from white places his eyes shining blue and confident. "Sorry, Mister," he whispered. "We can't drive. I was just teaching her. Move over, Jinny. If he wants her, he will have him. All right Brother, keep the peace. I'll take you where you want to go."

Viciously the car ate the miles farther, farther, Virginia seemed to herself, from home and safety.

Suddenly the car slowed. There was a barrier across the road, a row of flaring scarlet torches. Black forms loomed up beside them.

Then a man spoke as the car came to a stop and Courtney's arm moved Virginia's head down against her knee and he bent over her.

"Jasper Beedon?" Virginia heard the voice say, and the creature beside her threw himself up into the car and tried to climb over the car.

"Get him!" Court called and then there was a scream of terror, a great thudding in Virginia's head.

"He was killed," the other motorist said, sighing thankfully. "I don't know he's a bandit, but it's rather the state would see to him, not my car. But I dropped him neat as a whistle till those other fellows could get him. Not why did he try to run?"

Court laughed. "He thought he heard his name," he said. "Some Japanese Beetle inspection along here, you know. All cars stopped to see if there's any vegetation. I thought they'd say Japanese Beetle! — Of course I could only guess that he was Beedon but I thought it was worth taking the chance."

When they had answered questions and turned the great car back toward the direction from which they had come, Courtney laughed. "And still they say, 'What's in a name?'"

"Tigers a lot in yours," Virginia told him meekly. — Besides the Guile that's your middle initial. Heavy—and decency—and—"

"Why Court Lanehill, embarrassed, "all that in a name? Well, then, have faith, will you?" More than silence gave consent.

Fatal Train Derailment in Washout Near Ingersoll

Two persons were killed and a baggage car and one day coach third, a transient, was reported plowed into a ten foot gap in the drowned, when the Chicago-to-roadbed and sank in several feet Montreal flyer, crack Intercity of water. The fireman, Norman Limited on the Canadian National Aiken, Sarnia, was instantly killed; Railway line, struck a washout two the engineer, Malcolm Isbister, miles east of Ingersoll, Ont., and Toronto, died three hours later. He was partially derailed. The engine, had been pinned in the mass of wreckage by twisted steel. The washout was caused by swirling waters of the Thames River, swelled to all time high, by continuous rain. Western Ontario, where rain fell for two nights and a day, was suffering heavy flood damage with 10,000 persons evacuated from the city of London, Tillsonburg, Woodstock, St. Marys, St. Thomas, and Ingersoll all reported heavy floods. The photograph above shows the derailed Chicago-to-Montreal flyer after it had struck the washout caused by the rising flood waters.

Worst Flood in 54 Years Photographed at Ingersoll

Swollen to torrential proportions by heavy rains, Western Ontario witnessed the worst flood since 1883, with almost every village and hamlet in the London, St. Marys, Ingersoll, St Thomas, Woodstock and Tillsonburg districts reporting flood waters rising, homes damaged, main streets submerged and outlying districts flooded. Scenes such as the one shown above, are common throughout the western portion of the province. The above photograph, taken near Ingersoll, Ont., shows the flood waters completely covering what was a roadway. Note the trees and homes in the background isolated by flood waters.

NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN AND HIS BUDGET BOX CAUSE 'HEADACHE'

Pictured at his desk is Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, with one hand in the famous budget box, out of which recently came a gigantic headache for the British people, in the form of a big tax increase. The box has a history all its own. It was carried by Chamberlain's father, "Old Joe" Chamberlain, when he was chancellor, and by uncounted holders of the office before him. scuffed and battered as it is, it holds the key to Britain's huge armament program, for its latest contents comprised budgetary recommendations to pay for British preparedness. The huge tax increase it is claimed by observers, has materially damaged the chances of Neville Chamberlain becoming prime minister following the expected resignation of Stanley Baldwin after the coronation.

ANN HARDING RETURNS

Ann Harding, blonde film star whose secret departure for England last May provided headlines all over North America, returned by way of Quebec where only two days previously Judge Roy had quashed a warrant issued for her arrest 11 months earlier. The star, was accompanied by her husband, Werner Janssen, noted orchestra conductor and her daughter, Jane Bannister, in the Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of Atholl, in which vessel she sailed last May aboard the Empress of Australia. Miss Harding transferred to the Duchess of Atholl while her former husband was flying to Quebec in an attempt to prevent the departure of the child.

Rain-Swelled Rivers Surge Over Banks in Western Ontario

WATER 28 FEET DEEP

Mounted Police Detailed For Rescue Work in Area Affected

By The Canadian Press

Rain-swelled rivers surged over their banks in a score of Western Ontario communities today, sweeping into running streams and rivers into torrents brought the flood waters to the valleys of the Thames and the Grand. These rivers, with their tributaries, drain most of Western Ontario.

The area affected forms a ravaged circle, the radius lines of which stretch 30 miles northeast from London to Stratford, 30 miles east to Brantford, 50 miles southwest to St. Thomas and 15 miles north to London.

The flood waters wrought their greatest damage in London where the north and south branches of the Thames join in the centre of the city before the river stretches out to the west and crosses through 100 miles of farm lands to Lake St. Clair.

Water Mounts Breakwater

In London the Thames rose 28 feet above its normal level surmounted the $70,000 West London breakwater and rushed through London west and the swanky suburb of Broughdale to the north. London south and Chelsea Green, on the east, were affected in the worst flood the city has experienced in 60 years.

Hundreds of volunteers went through the flooded districts in boats taking the thousands endangered to safety. Evacuated families were housed in the armories private homes and in refugee centres set up by the Red Cross.

A detachment of troops from the Royal Canadian Regiment was detailed for rescue work in the London West area which suffered most. One unidentified man was believed to have been drowned.

Most of the flood's death toll was taken in the derailment of the Canadian National Railways' Chicago-Montreal train at Beachville, four miles west of Woodstock yesterday. A washout of the 15-foot embankment sent the speeding train plunging into the muddy flood waters.

Malcolm Isbister, engineer, and Norman Aiken, fireman, both of Sarnia, were killed and it is fairly definitely established a transient riding behind the tender also lost his life. Dr. J. H. MacDonald, Ingersoll, was swept off a bridge and drowned while hurrying to the accident scene in his motor car.

Tracks Washed Away

Thousands of acres of pasture lands in the Woodstock district were under water and 300 yards of trackway on the Canadian Pacific Railway line north of the city were washed away, leaving the rails and ties hanging like a bridge 30 feet in the air. Work was halted in several manufacturing plants when water invaded them. Flood waters swept into artesian wells that serve the cities of London and Stratford and drinking water in both will be dangerous for some time. London was also sure to face a famine of pure water for some time, health authorities said.

At Stratford authorities saw hope of improvement of conditions as the Avon River began a slow recession. Some streets were still several feet deep in water.

Traffic was impossible east and west of Tillsonburg after a highway bridge was swept away and the other valley was flooded when a dam burst.

The business section of St. Mary's was flooded and 80 persons evacuated their homes. Low-lying sections of Ingersoll also felt the flood waters and the damage at St. Thomas was estimated at many thousands of dollars. Many persons were rescued from flooded homes there.

HIGHLAND SCOTCHMEN TOAST FORT WILLIAM MAYOR AND WIFE

With one foot on the table, in traditional highland manner, three gentlemen of Scottish birth toast two Canadian visitors from a Canadian city bearing the same name as the Scottish city they visited. (left to right) Provost MacDonald, The Canadians, Mayor and Mrs. R. Baille D. Gardner and Baille E. K. B. Pow, of Fort William, Ont., are Malcolm, all of Fort William, Inat Left. They are being toasted by verness, Scotland.

JAPANESE HOLD MOCK AIR RAID WITH REALISTIC EFFECTS

Searchlight, mechanical "ears" and the grim snout of an anti-aircraft gun are the watchful sentinels of the night as Tokio holds one of its regular air defence manoeuvres. These war games are conducted with all seriousness and are participated in by all military bodies and civilians. During the mock air raids, the entire city is darkened and placed under martial law.

ONTARIO FLOODS AT A GLANCE

London — One man believed drowned and 6,000 homeless. Every highway flooded and skeleton railway service maintained with difficulty, city almost isolated. Water shortage considered inevitable. Damage estimated in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Stratford — Authorities say situation showing slight improvement with rampaging Avon River beginning slow recession. Streets still several feet deep in water. Loss to business places and homes placed at thousands of dollars.

Woodstock — Probe under way of train wreck which took four lives, caused by Canadian National Railways flyer hitting track washout. Accident believed due to bursting of dam, releasing flood waters over right-of-way.

Tillsonburg — Traffic east and west of here impossible as highway bridge swept away. Otter Valley flooded as dam burst.

St. Marys — Sixty persons evacuate homes. Business section flooded.

PLAYWRIGHT VACATIONS

Seeking "a new outlet for my talents other than the theatre," Noel Coward, celebrated British playwright and actor, recently announced his retirement from the stage for the next two years and went to Hamilton, Bermuda, for a long vacation. He is shown lapping up sunshine outside the home of Major R. A. Reid, Bermuda, of the naval intelligence department of the British navy.

FLOOD VICTIMS INOCULATED AGAINST TYPHOID

Inoculations at London Free, Not Compulsory; 12 Doctors Aid Red Cross

Efforts Made to Discourage People Returning to Mud-Covered Homes

WATER SHORTAGE

City Workmen And Firemen Join Flood Victims in Scrubbing Homes

London, Ont., Apr. 28 (CP)—Officials moved to check appearance of disease in flood-ridden London today as 12 doctors began inoculating citizens against typhoid fever, announcing Dr. C. M. Dillon of the Red Cross.

Twelve doctors will assist the Red Cross, Dr. Dillon said, at the academy of medicine. Inoculations will start at two o'clock this afternoon.

"We are trying to discourage those who have returned to their flood houses until they have been inoculated," he said. "If they will not, we will have to continue looking after most of them for two or three weeks until their homes are again habitable."

Acute Water Shortage.

"Inoculations start today and will be free but not compulsory," added the Red Cross official.

Water shortage situation in London was relieved on the 6,000 West London flood victims prepared to return to their homes, still mire and mud covered.

"The situation is extremely acute," said E. W. Beobadet, manager of the Public Utilities. "Unless we receive abundant rainfall we may have to discontinue all service this afternoon."

Clean-Up Begins.

Several hundred department of works employees and firemen joined flood victims today in clearing London flood zone as the waters of the Thames River receded.

West London began the task of cleaning floors of stores, homes and business establishments. The muck averaged eight inches deep on floors close to the river and a foot thick on some streets.

Motorized snowplows were brought into service to shove the thick mud slime from the streets while men

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thomson
Science Service Meteorologist

Structure of the atmosphere. What is meant by such a phrase? It is considered by meteorologists to be the management of the parts of the atmosphere and their physical properties. There are two main parts or divisions, one is the troposphere, "which extends from the earth up to 7 miles. In this layer, it is believed, all the mechanics of our changing weather takes place. Second, the stratosphere, of that part which is above the troposphere. Its extent and properties are little known as yet, but they are very different than we supposed 40 or 50 years ago.

Roosevelt Views Are Expressed

Washington, Apr. 28 (AP) — "Administration authorities, guided by statement of President Roosevelt's views, cast about today for new means to check climbing prices in the United States and prevent monopolies.

The president, before leaving on a southern fishing trip, expressed his views to three men:

1. He advised agricultural speculation in the stock markets.

2. He made public a report from Attorney General Cummings saying violation of anti-trust laws was desirable "in the face of the present tendency to increase prices".

3. He wrote Vice-President Garner of "the present hazard of undue advances in prices", voicing opposition to a bill by Senator Tydings (D., Md.), to legalize certain price maintenance understandings.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement on stock market speculation came as an aftermath to his recent request that government agencies sell their security holdings.

Asked whether this advice also was good for the general public, he replied he had been saying so since 1927.

SIMPSON DECREE FINAL ON MAY 2

That is Date Expected Unless Complications Arise

London, April 28 (AP)— Mrs. Wallis Simpson will be free next Tuesday, May 4, to become the Duchess of Windsor, if her decree nisi can keep to schedule in the courts.

The final decree, making her divorce from Ernest Simpson absolute, will be granted on that date unless there are last-minute complications which her lawyers believe is beyond the realm of possibility.

Mrs. Simpson's attorneys filed notice in Somerset House today that an application for the final decree was being made.

When Mrs. Simpson and the Duke would marry remained their secret, however. A report in the Southern Daily Echo, a Southampton newspaper, said they might on May 12, Coronation Day, was decided by the Duke's friends who characterized as a possibility as "fantastic."

The newspaper said it learned "exclusively from most reliable sources" that a Coronation Day wedding "is not considered out" but had not been decided on definitely.

Charges Roosevelt Regime Seeks Permanency of Power

Virgil Gordon Complains of Mass Delusion, Led by Demagoguery

"IRREVERSIBLE"

Washington, Apr. 28 (AP)—President Virgil Jordon of the National Industrial Conference Board condemned today the Roosevelt administration has built "a vast political organization designed to maintain it in permanent power."

His general denunciation of President Roosevelt's policies, prepared for the convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce, was the first of the meeting.

"State Capitalism" Forecast.

Asserting that governmental machinations forged by the administration are designed to bring about "a system of state capitalism," Jordon said:

"The most important thing to remember about this governmental juggernaut is that it is irreversible. No matter how many there are who may desire it reversed, no political leader or party may do so and live to reverse it."

Describing various administration policies, Jordon said these set up governmental machinery "that has grown progressively stronger for four years to undermine and destroy the last vestige of private order.

"It is practically complete, but a few more years will bring into place a mesh as all constitutional obstacles are removed.

Claims Engineered Out of Error.

Jordon, in engineered out of error, forged out of falsehood and driven by the power of mass delusion mobilized by demagoguery."

Social forces generated by the administration, he continued, "have driven the American people toward a destination that can only mean for them impoverishment, suffering, conflict, disillusion and demoralization."

60,000 Irish Great War Dead Memorialized by Public Park

By JOSEPH DENNIGAN

DUBLIN, Apr. 28 (CP)—Fifteen years after the Armistice, Ireland's Memorial to her 50,000 dead in the great war is approaching completion.

The memorial takes the form of a public park laid out by the government on the south bank of the River Liffey in full view of Magazine Hill and the great Wellington Monument in Phoenix Park. Included in the park is a garden of remembrance designed by Sir Edwin Lutyens and paid for out of the Irish fund created in Ireland at the close of the great war.

Delays In Completion.

The scheme to commemorate the Irishmen who fell in the great war by a suitable memorial in the capital of the country has not been brought to this stage without its difficulties and delays.' William Cosgrave's government in 1927 vetoed the original proposal to purchase Merrion Square, raze the government buildings, and erect in it a memorial to the combatants and gates, but arrangements were made in 1931 to provide the present site at Longmeadows, the state to bear the cost of the public park.

The work has been carried out by workmen drawn 50 per cent from British ex-servicemen and 50 per cent from ex-servicemen of the Irish Free State army.

Forty Controversy Dusted.

Progress was reported to a meeting of the original executive council of the Irish National War Memorial held in Dublin. Sir Dunbar Plunket Barton, the chairman, said that never for a moment had the scheme been made the subject of party controversy. Since the inauguration of the Irish Free State a change of government had been no change of attitude of the government to the undertaking. The generous attitude of leaders of Irish opinion, he said, offered a fine example and happy augury for the future.

Help from the north, which contributed to the fund, came from Sir Herbert Dixon and the late H. M. Pollock, Minister of Finance in the Northern Ireland government.

AIR MASSACRE IS BLAMED UPON GERMAN PLANES

Liberal and Labor Opposition Unite a Demand For Protest

GUERNICA TRAGEDY

Capt. Eden Says British Government Deplores Such Events

(By George Hambleton)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 28.—(CP Cable)—Liberal and Labor Opposition parties in the House of Commons this afternoon united in an indignant demand for a collective protest against the air massacre of Guernica. Correspondents of British newspapers widely charge it was the work of German machines.

Clement Attlee, Labor Leader, raised the question, would not Foreign Secretary Eden, he questioned, take immediate steps to address a collective protest to General Franco and Chancellor Hitler against the "bombardment of civilian populations now being conducted in Spain".

Deplored by Britain

"His Majesty's Government," Eden replied, "deplore the indiscriminate bombardments of civilian populations in the Spanish Civil War wherever they occur and no matter who may be responsible.

"We have in the past taken steps to make our attitude clear to both parties and to promote agreements to safeguard the civilian population His Majesty's Government will continue to exercise every effort to see whether further steps are possible, so as to prevent a recurrence of such deplorable events."

Terrorism Charged

Sir Arthur Salter, Independent, asked whether it was correct the machines were foreign and had entered Spain recently.

Eden said he had seen press reports, that the machines were foreign. He thought the best course would be to endeavor to get agreement under which such practices would cease to be made.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal leader, charged "Civilians were deliberately murdered by Italian aircraft machine guns."

Eden said in case of civilians being killed in the course of an ordinary bombardment of military objectives effort to use air power as an instrument of massacre and terrorism", Sir Archibald's point was already being the case, will the Foreign Secretary take some steps to enable us to make an effective protest?"

"I think what I said represents the views of both sides of the house," Eden replied.

Dance of Northern Lights Affects Telegraph Services

Aurora Borealis Heaviest in Ten Years State Astronomers

DISCONNECT CIRCUITS

Aurora Borealis, the enemy of telegraphic communication, appeared in fashion throughout the Dominion today. Not for ten years has the magnetic pole's interference been so pronounced.

From the prairies to the maritimes and into the United States telegraph wires were gripped by the excess current induced by the North Pole's magnetic pole. Wires were grounded as operators in Canadian National and Canadian Pacific offices fantastically fought to maintain connections.

Telegraphically, the services could not recall a time when the Aurora Borealis reached into so great a territory. From Halifax to the prairie country the northern lights danced across the sky, setting into new services communication lines for hours at a time.

Excess current became so great in the Canadian Pacific operating room at Sudbury all circuits were disconnected to prevent blown fuses. It extended to the Lakehead, thence south to Sault Ste. Marie and into Western Ontario where wires to Stratford, Kitchener and Guelph were disrupted.

Between Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal the Aurora had its fling, delaying transmission of telegraphic news by tying up commercial service for a while. An unusual feature was the appearance of the interference on the shortdistance circuits in Ontario and Quebec and down to Halifax.

Cliché Aurora, it was the description given by the telegraph officials to the latest attack. It charges the wires and appears with peculiarities like regularity, they said, especially persons on high-speed signals of the mechanical telegraph systems.

Wires running from east to west with Canadian Pacific Railway Cable Aurora but today it hit the northsouth communications also.

Thamesville Villagers Leave Houses in Boats, Trucks as Water Rises

Village Sees Peak Reached at Noon Today, on Business Streets

RIVER BREAKS BOUNDS

Farmer Wades to Wait to Rescue His Stock

Thamesville, Ont., Apr. 28 (CP)—Practically the whole of Thamesville, about fifteen miles northeast of Chatham, was under water today as the waters of the Thames River burst their banks.

Thamesville is situated on the north side of the river. A little after noon today the main business intersection of the town was under five feet of water. The intersection is where No. 21 highway meets No. 2.

Telephone wires in the district are threatened by the waters, raising the possibility the town might be isolated. Hugh Campbell, proprietor and manager of the Thamesville Hotel, said practically all the village with the exception of high places, was flooded.

The population of 2,000 is anxiously watching the antics of the Thames which seems torrent are pouring south towards Chatham.

"Chatham, Ont., Apr. 28 (CP)—Boats and motor trucks were used to remove people from their homes in Thamesville today as flood waters of the Thames, which rose 36 feet since last night, filled the streets as the rampaging river surged onwards, Chatham and Lake St. Clair.

Further wild words of the flood situation which has caused untold damage in the Thamesville area, would be passed during the afternoon.

Worst In 38 Years.

The flood at Thamesville was described by residents as the worst in 36 years. Business was suspended as people flocked to vantage points to watch the boats and canoes carrying timbers and sections of buildings swept from their foundations in its upper reaches. Telephone operators were worried to a point of nervous exhaustion as they kept pace with the deluge of calls for the switchboard. No serious accidents, however, had occurred this morning.

Stores in Water.

The section of the village first to be affected by the rampaging stream was Victoria Street, connecting link of No. 2 highway. Stores and business places under several feet of water were those of Alex. Campbell, David Black, Austins, J. H. Howell and Mrs. Hardy. The post office was also under water.

As the river broke its bounds in Thamesville it spread out, being forced over extensive areas of farm lands, causing damage to farm crops, buildings, and creating a serious problem for farmers in the removal of livestock.

Parts of the district resembled a lake.

Removed In Boats.

As the water steadily rose, village authorities decided that residents in

DEATH OF GIRL HAS INDICATION OF FOUL PLAY

HEAD PULVERIZED

Police Find Thin Piece of Metal Pipe Near Body

Windsor, Ont., Apr. 28 (CP) Death of Ethel Rickert, 23-year-old housekeeper, was an indication that Tuesday night, a search of the farm township home was being investigated by police today with definite suspicions of foul play urging them on. Miss Rickert died in hospital yesterday from what was believed to be a fall in the basement of John Geraldine home. A postmen examination showed the right side of the skull was pulverized, as if from a blow of terrific force.

Provincial Police and Coroner Dr. H. Wigle conducted little of consequence with regard to a solution. An autopsy indicated death resulted from comminuted fracture of the skull.

In addition to the fractures, there was evidence of bruising on the back of the head, the left shoulder and scratched lacerations on the chest. Dr. Amerine believes head injuries

The Publicity Committee of the Hastings County Council after commending that the county take a more active interest in the publishing and distribution of its attractions to the tourist public, headed up that resolution with a grant of $100.00 to the Bay of Quinte Tourist Association, under day's meeting held in the office of County Clerk Eric Denyes.

Members of the association which is composed of representatives of the cities, Prince Edward County and other districts, who were present, stressed the need for having the advantages of the holiday attractions of this district before the public.

LABOR DISTRIBUTION SLIGHTLY CHANGED

A slight change in the distribution of labor for the various highway construction projects which are expected to resume operations in the near future, has been announced by the Department of Labor. TWO OIL TANKERS DEPOSIT CARGOES

Two British American Oil Company tankers docked here on Monday and discharged 3,500 barrels of oil. The S. S. Britamoil arrived here at 10.30 Monday morning and unloaded 13,500 barrels and slipped her moorings at five o'clock that night. Early Tuesday, the tanker, Estate eased into her berth and discharged 3,500 barrels, leaving early the next morning.

According to the gauge at the government dock the water yesterday morning was ten inches higher than it was at the beginning of the month. Harbormaster "Joe" Wadsell stated yesterday afternoon. "The, however, was accentuated by the strong east wind, which was blowing," he added.

PROVINCIAL POLICE RETURN TO POSTS

Following nearly three weeks of special duty in Toronto, the constables of the Provincial Police Force, No. 8, headquarters at Belleville, have all returned to their detachments. Inspector Frank Gardner announced yesterday. Sergeant Harry Thompson, who was in charge of one detachment of the special class in Toronto, arrived here last night and reported for duty today. Provincial Constables from Gananoque and to Bowmanville, who had been detailed to special duty, are all back at their respective posts today.

SEND THREE PLANES TO PETERBOROUGH

Three aircraft from the Royal Canadian Air Force Camp at Trenton will take part in Peterborough's Coronation Day celebrations through permission of the Minister of National Defence, to whom application had been made to have the planes stage their aerial display. The craft will not land but will engage in formation flight above the city while the program is being carried out.

AURORA BOREALIS DISPLAY WITNESSED

Striking streamers of blue-green light, which appeared in the northern sky from midnight to shortly after one o'clock this morning provided one of the most brilliant celestial displays of aurora borealis witnessed this year. Dazzling in their brightness, the shafts of light wavered and swept through the blackness of the night like gigantic searchlights, streaking into infinity in the south. Last evening's sky show climaxed smaller displays of the borealis, that have been witnessed for the past three months past. In the meantime radio listeners of the city have been left in their comment regarding the poor quality of reception. Old timers look upon the manifestation as a "sure sign of cold weather."

FIFTEEN SUMMONED ON PARKING BY-LAW

Police stickers indicating parking violations were affixed to no less than fifteen automobiles in Belleville yesterday. The practice of leaving motor vehicles parked in the downtown area for a longer time than the allotted one hour is to be discouraged, police stated today at 1[illegible] when a rigid enforcement of the parking bylaw had been ordered. The customary fine of one dollar was imposed upon those found delinquents in this matter yesterday. "The fine for not adhering to this law will be greater as the season advances", police officials intimated at noon today. "We do not "crack down" on delinquent motorists who might stay parked on one position a little over the hour limit, but when they loiter around for half an hour or two hours, it's high time we enforced this bylaw, as it was intended to assist business, we understand," added another officer, on duty this morning.

BELLS OF CLOCK HEARD IN CORBYVILLE

How far can the city hall clock bell be heard? Estimates of the distance the striking bells carry vary.

Standing in front of the general store of Wm. Reynolds, Camilton, at eight o'clock last evening, eight measured strokes of the hour were distinctly heard by a reporter. A moderate east wind was blowing in the limit.

On clear evenings, under favorable conditions, the chimes of the bell are clearly audible as far as Corbyville, it was learned through questioning.

FOUR WILD GEESE REST IN RIVER

Four wild Canada geese, evidently wearied of sustained flight from the south, settled on the surface of the Moira River at Camilton early last evening where they apparently rested overnight before continuing north. A small flock of wild ducks likewise came to rest their resting place on the river.

Though a special committee of city council was named some weeks ago to investigate the matter of relief gardens in the city this year, as yet no applications have been made to the Central Relief office, it was stated today. CLOVER, ALFALFA FIELDS BETTER

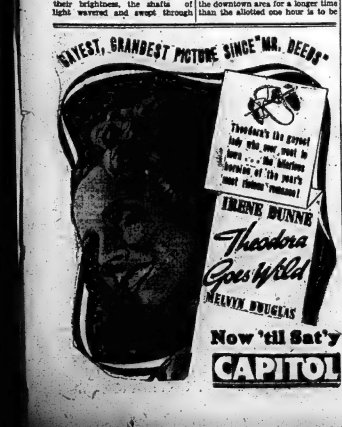
Farmers Have Sufficient Fodder Until New Crop Harvested

Current report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture indicates that more encouraging statements are being received from agriculturists throughout Hastings and adjoining counties in connection with the condition of alfalfa and clover pilots. Many fields, that at first appeared to be lifeless are coming forward in great shape. It is stated in the report. "There may be a few fields where the crop is expected that the majority of the fields will not be worth while."

"The majority of farmers appear to have sufficient fodder to take them over until the first pasture, and fodder supplies are not too high in price for those who need it.

"Ocean prices have dropped during the past few weeks, but this is an expected condition usually experienced before cheese factories open for the season.



"The purchase of baby chicks has been active but demand is not as keen as in 1936", states the report.

FINAL DRAFTING OF PROGRAM MADE FOR CELEBRATION

Whether The Service Will Be Held Indoors or Outside Not Decided

MAY FIRE SALUTE

All School Children to Carry Flags in Procession

Final arrangements for the Coronation Day celebration to be held here on May 12 were virtually concluded last night at the YMCA at a meeting of the General Committee, With the exception of the questions of whether cadets will wear uniforms and concerns part of the mobilization section of the parade everything is in readiness for the big day.

Rev. W. J. Walker submitted a final drafting of the program which will be used and this, with an addition, was adopted by the meeting. It was suggested during the discussion of the question that Rabbi B. Gerstal of the Belleville Synagogue, be invited to take part in the devotional period. Also that with the unanimous approval of those present, and Rabbi Gerstal will assist Dr. J. Semple in the reading of the Scriptures.

"I shall be glad to have the Rabbi act with me" said Dr. Semple.

Considerable discussion of the venue of the celebration took place following the presentation of a proposed form of parade by Mr. Ross Hunter.

Celebration For Children

Colonel Gribble felt, that the firing of the 21 gun salute was one of the main features of the celebration, and in view of the setting that where everyone could see it, the Agricultural Grounds was the logical place, "There the firing could be fire the fen de joie. "After all", the Colonel said, "this is not a celebration for the school children, the school board, the militia and the city council alone. It is for the city of Belleville."

Mrs. Hunter felt children then could be placed on the baseball diamond, with the general crowd covered in behind.

Mr. Allin: "I think if you are considering holding the fire at the doors the logical place would be the Collegiate campus."

Col. Gribble's only objection to that is, the firing of the salute, might break the windows. His idea is to let the general public in for the ceremony."

Mr. Geen: "I certainly believe that the ceremony should take place where it could be witnessed by all. I do not think you can get the crowd in the Arena. To have the salute and the fire de joie could be fired, and the general public take part in what seems the entire ceremony. In case of rain the Armouries could be secured" Dr. Semple: "I am glad to see an increase in the faith of the people of Belleville. I, for one, favour having the celebration inside, but my mind is wide open.

J. J. Allin, Chairman of the Board of Education thought that the question should be settled with the opinion of the principals of the public schools were brought in to the fact, that the route to the Fair Grounds would be too long for the children to cover.

A communication from the Air Force was read, announcing its intention to co-operate with an aerial display providing the sanction of Ottawa was received.

Line of March

The question of whether uniformed school cadets would march with the militia section of the parade or with their respective schools was held over pending a meeting of a special committee to decide the question.

The proposed line of march presented by Mr. Hunter was accepted by the committee after a few changes had been made which will be published at a later date.

Five hundred flags to augment the supply of the various schools will be purchased from local merchants, Mr. Allin stated.

Following is a copy of the program which will feature the celebration:

"O Canada"—Belleville Municipal Band.

Devotional Period—Dr. J. Semple and Rabbi B. Gerstal.

Hymn "O God our help in ages past."

Children's Hymn—R.C.I. Band.

Former Trenton Resident Interested in Dog Racing

Visiting in Native Town For First Time in 17 Years

Racing Grey Hounds

Trenton, April 26 (Special)—Arthur Allore, father of Clifford Allore owner of the cream of Blades racing dogs, is spending a few days at his brother's home here, Front Street, Picton. This is Mr. Allore's first visit to Trenton in 17 years and since leaving here has encountered many interesting experiences especially on the dog racing tracks. He is very well known in this district, being prominent in Trenton for a number of years and later operating a business in Toronto for some years. When interviewed by The Belleville Ontario Intelligencer he modestly stated, that his son's dog-record racing greyhound winner of the Canadian Derby, Canadian Cup, Kennel Club gold trophy for 1937 was a product of his son's stable and that he had trained the fast speedy little ribbon winning canine, which has established a record in the Province.

Successful Diet

So far this season the Allore stable has produced two top-notchers and both have lived up to their expectations of garnering greater honors during the coming season, for Mr. Allore and his son are at present additionally busy training for the coming New England derby. Each morning they walk their fine string of dogs for a mile or more and a half miles, for the purpose of keeping them in trim for the fast and the competitive season. This type of dog is fed the choicest of horse beef, fish (preferably canned salmon), and spinach, carrots and potatoes, which are included in their carefully selected diet, instructing that a dog to be in top form for racing and requires plenty of exercise and that the dog that is not exercised, who often takes several months to turn out a finished product. A rabbit during the period of training causes as much excitement as a hare. And so a trainer makes it a point to get his pupil to contact with a rabbit.

Examined by vet.

According to Mr. Allore a dog is as nervous and anxious as a man or a horse before a race. All

YOUTHS ANXIOUS TO SECURE RULES

Kinsmen Kid Kar Derby to be Greatly Enlarged This Year

One of the special attractions at the Kinsmen Motor show now being staged in the space given to the Kinsmen Kid Kar Derby which is sponsored by the local clubs and is the most competitive race of its kind in Canada for teen aged boys. Already the enthusiasm last night, when the boys of Belleville crowded the floor at the motor show for the building rules for the Kars—the building rules have been changed this year to improve the safety and appearance of the Kars for the race, which will be held on Dominion Day, July 1st in the morning on North Front Street and Bridge. It has been nicknamed the young Belleville "Derby Hill."

Through the generosity of the Deacon-Spirit Company, Walter Turner, the 1936 Kid Kar Derby champion was presenting with racing suit and helmet which the owner is wearing on display at the Motor show. This racing suit is of the finest Grenfell cloth and made on the same model as that made by the Deacon Shirt Company for Sir Malcolm Campbell the world's sea of speed. With this in mind Walter Turner is the proudest boy in Belleville. The modelling of the suit has brought favorable notice to the Belleville public the importance, that the Deacon Sportshirt has achieved in the world of sport.

Secretary Superintendent Waller Down has been investigating the course as used last year for the Kid Derby and after conferring city officials has decided to lengthen the course to give the contestants and the public a better view during the race.

The Kinsmen Club in their derby this year are stressing safety and with the contestants to build their kars accordingly.

POLICE BLOTTER

Lorne Sanford, Belleville, was arrested by Detective Fred Izard yesterday charged with the theft of 1,200 pounds of cast iron from the Belleville Rolling Mills Company. Sanford was arraigned before J. D. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace and was remanded to appear on Friday.

The police allege Sanford stole two cast iron plates, weighing 600 pounds each, and transported them across the Bay Bridge and Belleville harbour by boat, which he sold to local junk dealers the 1,200 pounds of cast iron sold as scrap.

A 25-foot logging chain and part of an automobile spring was found by the police abandoned in a vacant lot off Station street yesterday and was taken to headquarters. Constable Greene street resident discovered all of the said articles in the vicinity and missing from a vacant house on that street this morning. The house has been uncongnized for some time, so the owner was unable to inform the police just how long the said things had been missing. Parts of the plumbing were destroyed, however, as the robbers broke it to gain possession of the lead.

5 FEET MORE DRAUGHT AT TELEGRAPH LIGHT WOULD AID LOCAL PORT

Only the lack of a scant four or five feet more draught in Telegraph Channel, which is at present reported to give only 25 feet 3 inches clearance for lake boats, according to the latest marine report, keeps the Port of Belleville from becoming one of the most important shipping centre in the eastern district, comment lake captains now entering the port with each boat.

With deeper draught available, shipping here would be increased by thousands of tons monthly, composed mainly of new automobiles which would be conveyed from the great factories by water and later transhipped from Belleville to eastern district points, it was stated. During the past few years other shipping has also been hampered by the lack of depth in the channel, with many of the carriers arriving here carrying only part loads.

Gradually Belleville is becoming the oil shipping centre on the lakes and the north, Millions of gallons of gasoline arriving here by water are pumped into tank cars by the local companies for distribution by rail through the northern and eastern areas, it is reported by local customs officials now busy on the first of the season's work of checking all arrivals by water. Formerly a great deal of this liquid tonnage had been distributed from the western refineries by rail. With water rates declared cheaper, this method of transport is being used to a greater extent.

AVENUE ROAD AT BLOOR STREET

THE Royal Road TO THE CORONATION

Their Majesties and the Queen Mother show an interest in toys.

Each presentation of the British Industries Fair presents a larger edition of the original. Wembley Exhibition was called the "show-case of empire" and perhaps this term could even more properly be applied to the gigantic industrial fairs of recent years.

The royal family have been loyal and appreciative patrons of the industrial presentations since their inception, and King George and Queen Elizabeth will not let that patronage lapse. Even since their accession, with the great press of work which the King in particular has been called upon to bear, they have made their tour through the Birmingham and While City exhibitions and studied at first hand the products which the empire and the world have for sale.

The Queen Mother accompanied them on the last occasion, a visit not new to her, but one which British industry deeply appreciates. The humorous story of the New York gallery buyer which American newspapers featured widely a few weeks ago illustrates the non-formality of the visits and the desire of the royal party to see through the same eyes that world visitors use when visiting this factual record of industrial progress. On that occasion the buyer found himself face to face with the royal party, interested as he was in the products of Sheffield's cutlery experts. No official exclusion was practised here, but before very many minutes had passed, the visitor from New York and Britain's royal family had met and exchanged the courtesies of new acquaintanceship.

Royal visits, of course, are not planned for the royal family's interest alone. They are good business; they stimulate public interest and draw sightseers and prospective customers. But that too is part of the burden of royalty.

To-day's picture shows the King and Queen and Queen Mary in the toy section of the British Industries Fair at While City. With two young daughters at home to impart the problems of the average family, perhaps their visit to this particular stand is notably fitting.

Next: Princess Elizabeth.

Pepsodent Company of Canada, Limited, has its factory located in Canada, employs Canadian labor and pays Dominion, provincial taxes—is, in fact, an integral part of the Canadian business structure.

Steadily increasing sales of Pepsodent Products—Pepsodent Tooth Paste, Pepsodent Tooth Powder and Pepsodent Antiseptic, place the new Pepsodent Canadian Company in the forefront among leading manufacturers of products of the kind. Little Benny's Note Book

Miss Kitty gave out the reports on school today, mine not being the worst it's ever been but not being so wonderful, and after supper pop was smoking a cigar himself with his feet up and I said, Did you have a hard day in the office today, pop?

Hard, coesn't begin to describe it, or at least it just about begins, pop said. My morning was an Augean task and my afternoon consisted entirely of Herculean labors, he and and I said. Well then O, pop, I guess you don't feel like doing any more work today.

Your guess contains a degree of accuracy which practically lifts it to the domain of exact science, pop said.

Meening he didn't, and I said, That's what I thawt, pop, I thawt O wunnkers I say as I would ask ma to sine my report card and save you all that unnecessery trouble of getting out your fountain pen and putting it back again and everything.

Your sollicitude does you grate credit and touches me deeply in my weakened state pop said.

Me thinking, O, herray, and pop said, A child who is unselfishly thawtful of his parents comfort is a rarity in this day and age and in fact has probenly always been a rarity in any day and age. Dutiful and considerate children have been celebrated in song and story since mankind's humble beginnings, he said.

Me thinking, Aw heck, but, and pop said, It has always been a tradition of this house for me to sine all report cards and ere I became a country or the household that neglects its traditions. In other werds hand K over, he said.

Meening I didn't, and I said, Well I did, the result being I haven't got any report card for tomorrow and I'll feel lucky if I have any the day after.

Noted Orchestra Conductor Hears Robb Wave Organ

Charles O'Connell Pays Visit to Local Organ Factory

MAKES COMMENTS

Charles O'Connell, the well-known American conductor and associate of Leopold Stokowski and the famous Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra was a visitor in the city yesterday afternoon. Having business in Toronto in connection with arrangements for the coming concert of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, he made a special trip to Belleville in company with three other gentlemen for the express purpose of seeing how Wave Organs are made, and hearing for the first time one of these fine instruments.

Mr. O'Connell was met at the plant by officers of the Company and by Mr. Leo Riggs who later played for him. After a tour through the various departments of manufacture, he sat down to the Wave Organ console for his first experience of its tonal qualities and resources. After playing for a while and trying the different combinations, he requested Mr. Riggs to play for him and the others. With the trained and sensitive ear of a conductor used to the finest shadings and subtleties of orchestral tone he listened carefully to the beautiful melodies played by Mr. Riggs. In the end he arose remarking that this was by far the finest thing he had heard in Electric Organs and expressed himself as thoroughly satisfied with the suitability of the Ward Organ for the purpose for which it was designed. Sitting down to the console with Mr. Ward, the inventor, he tried over some of the stops again, remarking especially on the stop known as the "Voox" which he described as a fine, clear tone of very effective use. The "Melodia" also seemed to catch his favour.

Charles O'Connell is known throughout the world as a man of outstanding musical ability. Many in Belleville will have heard him conducting on some of the better radio programs and his excellent work "The Victor Book of the Symphony" has been a source of reference to music lovers the world over.

The visit of such a musical figure to Belleville with no other purpose than the trying of the Wave Organ speaks well for the progress The Robb Wave Organ Company has made in turning out a fine instrument, which can catch the attention and arouse the enthusiasm of the greatest musical authorities, who up to the present have found no other electric organ properly satisfying to their discriminating musical taste.

BONARLAW

Bonarlaw—On Sunday last Rev. W. J. Bradbury, Eastern Field Secretary of the General Board of Religious Education, was the special preacher of the afternoon service in St. Mark's Church.

Mr. Bradbury stressed the importance of training the young and the tremendous influence of home life upon the child.

Previous to the church service Mr. Bradbury gave a short talk to the scholars of the Sunday school and expressed his pleasure at having the opportunity of addressing such a splendid number of young people. The Sunday School also attended the church service in a body.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may just decay. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Intestinal poisons get into the body, and you feel sour, sunk, sleepy, and the world looks punk.

A mere boxful of Carter's Little Liver Pills will get these two pounds of bile flowing freely. They make you "step on it." They're wonderful to relieve constipation. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 60c.

"TRAFFIC COLLEGE"

The first class for policemen has been graduated from New York State's "traffic college". The course lasted a week and was held at Troy.

There may some day be a means of establishing colleges for drivers. A driver should be as a professional in any other walk of life—he sould be as perfect as he can be. He has no right to drive if he has not command at all times of himself. He has no right to risk his own life and certainly no authority to drive at risk to others.

First drivers of cars over twenty-five years ago trained themselves, which was all right in that far long-past time when there were few cars and there were few chances of one hitting another car because they were so rare.

But it is different now. New drivers are of course put to the test. But often the view is expressed that there should be a strengthening of the regulations regarding who shall drive. Surely among the thousands who do drive there must be many who never will by any possibility be considered as good drivers. They have not the concentration for their job.

GENEROUS GIVING

Tendency of Christians to balk at liberal giving to the church was deplored by the Rev. Arthur Kleps of Immanuel Lutheran Church, New York. He said "We do not object to paying for goods received, such as food and clothing, but in spite of the fact that every Christian realizes that the church is working for his own welfare, for law and decency and order in the community, he becomes cautious and miserly when asked to donate to church work.

The Bible tells us to use our possessions for God's purposes. We should not have to be exhorted to give freely, but no Christian is one hundred per cent perfect —he is hampered by the fleshly spirits, and it is this spirit we must crucify. We should always try to be loved by the love of God, and generous giving will come naturally if we always try to prove the sincerity of our love for Him."

Scientific method achieves a verbal truth which, for a full life, must be enriched by more directly felt approaches to reality, the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick said at Riverside Church, Riverside Drive, New York.

For all their pretensions to exactness, scientific investigators cannot explain, although they must admit as valid forms of cognition, such moving knowledge as is contained in the sense of beauty, the love of persons and venturesome faith, Dr. Fosdick declared.

"Haven't men the wish to fool themselves, when they are not content with religion, because they prefer it as poetic fancy?" he asked. "Scientific method holds the field and impresses one that there is only one way to get at solid truth—the rigorous, unpoetic, logical, rational getting of facts, generalizing on them, and then testing by further facts, until one can add Q. E. D. to end the process.

"Religion is suspect, for all its value in giving meaning to life, because there is the modern fear that it cannot be tested by strict science. The response is that one cannot get at the fundamental truth of religion, art, music and things spiritual without getting beyond scientific method. There are other ways of knowing truly than by dissection.

"Responsiveness to beauty is one way to find contact with reality. We may subject one of Beethoven's symphonies to science, and in the end reduce it to air waves, but that is a pale form of truth beside the fullness of the music lover's more essential conception on hearing the Ninth Symphony, of walking in green pastures and beside still waters which restore the soul.

"Love is not merely emotion; it is also cognition. If I had to choose between all the knowledge modern science brings, and the love of persons, I would keep the second."

Charity is "the only enduring foundation stone" upon which the future of this country can be built, the Rev. Robert E. Woods declared at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

"The charity of which I speak is not alms-giving," he said. "It is the realization of our brotherhood in God. Every one today realizes the need of some permanent foundation for society. The world is in a state of transition, characterized by political economic and spiritual unrest. All around us the social conflict heightens. We see it each day before our eyes in the conflict between capital and labor. The structures of the past have crumbled. What will the structure of the future be?

"The eyes of America are on the future; but what use is that if those eyes are blinded? Unless we build our social structure today upon a more permanent foundation than the past it will not last beyond the lifetime of those who founded it. Charity, the realization of our brotherhood in God, is the only enduring foundation."

APRIL DAYS

Misty the greening meadow,
Shining the silver rain,
Fitful the flash of sunlight
Parting the clouds again;
Pensive the call of the blue-bird,
Breaking the twilight hush,
Clamorous the call of the torrent
Where the spring waters rush.

Signs and symbols of April—
Indian willows that burn,
Blossoms that deck the woodland
Heralding Spring's return;
Whirring wings in the tree-tops
Where the bright wind goes through,
And haunting the cry of the killdeer
That tells that the earth is new.

MINNIE THE MOOCHER, that equine friend of ours, who will soon be celebrating her thirtieth birthday, has come through the winter in fine shape and expects to enjoy a delightful summer in the green pasture lots of Hastings. Minnie is a gay old girl and likes to reminiscence of the horse and buggy days when she covered many a mile in Hastings and Prince Edward with her boss, Mr. William Clarke of College Hill, Belleville, veteran cattle buyer. There were days too, and moonlight nights, when Minnie would a-courting go—that is she would pull the buggy ever so smoothly and not mind a loose rein of two when love's young dream peered through that magic mist of happiness unlimited which comes only with youth and propinquity with an affinity. Minnie was born on Taylor's Hill, just about where the Pine Street School is now and of late years has been living on College Hill, a retired life. It is easy to see that Minnie prefers an intellectual atmosphere, first Pine Street School, then Albert College on College Hill—so what would you.

SHADES OF EDWARD HANLAN AND OTHER GLORIES CANADIAN ATHLETES WHO BROUGHT honor and glory to Canada, hovered about the banquet tables at the Hotel Quinte Monday night at the hockey banquet, summoned from the Land of Four Square Sportsmen just over the Great Divide, by P. J. Mulqueen, chairman of the Ontario Athletic Commission, and Big Mogul of Canadian Olympic participation. Athletes past and present were honored by P. J. with special reference to Ned Hanlan, champion oarsman of the world, who learned to row on Toronto Bay; Jake Gaudaur, still alive and energetic up Orillia way; the four Canadian Diamond Scull winners, a record no other country can boast; and the Canadian marathon runners who made athletic history overseas, including Tom Longboat, the picturesque Indian who beat them all until champagne put kinks in his legs and beat him, when no human could beat him in a long distance foot race. P. J. Mulqueen isn't as young as he used to was in an athletic way as when he was a top-hole oarsman, single, double, fours, lacrosse and baseball, but he still packs a punch that's hard to take even by the young spirits who sometimes think that some of the old sports are more reminiscence than resilient. P. J.'s visit was enjoyed personally by a large number of friends of other days while to the young er generation his wise counsel and interesting information of Canadian sports from the Olympics to the summer camp at Lake Couchiching for the training of public school athletes sponsored by the Ontario Government under supervision of Hon. Dr. Bert Faulkner who believes health goes hand in hand with athletics, proved a revelation.

"Do - Nothing - Policy" Will Defeat Hepburn Next Election Declares Russell Nesbitt

Young Thurlow Canada Clubs Have Toronto Speaker

DR. WELSH PRESENT

Told He Will be Minister of Health if Government Changes

Inexorably as the tides, the Hepburn Government, through its "do-nothing-policy" and at present living in a world of false promises and hope, is marching toward complete destruction at the polls when once again the people of Ontario are privileged to indicate their choice of government by ballot, an appalling audience of residents from throughout the Township of Thurlow and beyond, were told at the regular meeting of the Young Thurlow Canada Club in Grange Hall, Camellton, last evening.

Guest speaker of the evening was Arthur Russell Nesbitt, K. C., M.P.P., for Bracondale, Toronto. He was assisted by Dr. Harold Welsh, M.P.P. for East Hastings, from whom privilege he came to address the local club.

Step by step the Bracondale representative reviewed the present administration since assuming office and in a fleetlike mood clarified his own viewpoint of the opposition gained through his acquaintance with them as a member of the Cabinet. What was declared to be a vacillating policy of the present administration was repeatedly stressed by the speaker during his close review of it actions since assuming office. Premier Hepburn's attitude on the Assessment Act alone, it was declared showed this as in no other way.

Association a Happy One

Following his introduction to the audience by Dr. Welsh, who was in turn introduced by Miss Margaret Reynolds, president of the Thurlow Club and chairman of the evening, Mr. Nesbitt declared his association with the riding of East Hastings in the old party," declared Mr. Nesbitt, "as 'Lawyer' Nesbitt with a K. C. after his name."

"I may have been Dr. Welsh's and chairman of the Department of Health of the opposition, but since Dr. Welsh has come to us in the future I have handed that job over to him," elaborated Mr. Nesbitt. "And when the next Cabinet is formed, you may be sure that at the head of it will be the name from East Hastings," he assured amid cheers and applause.

Consideration to Youth

Consideration needs to be given to the youth of the country in the future, help must be given first-time voter, the speaker of the evening asked his hearers to agree. "We expect an election and can give many reasons why we should have one. But it is up to us to prepare for it when it does come. The probationary period of the Hepburn Government has long since elapsed and now they are called upon to give an accounting of their regardship since assuming office," he continued.

"Remember how they were elected to office—the promises they made, but have never fulfilled. They promised to end unemployment, to reduce the number of commissions, to reduce debt and taxes. How many of these promises did they keep? How many jobs are there to be had in this village..... How has unemployment been lessened or taxes reduced, or cost of administration lowered?

"It costs more to administer the affairs of the Government of the province at the present time than at any time in history.

"Hepburn said he has a surplus of seven million dollars and that he showed it in the 'budget.' We know he hasn't. But we'll assume, that he has just to see how it could be made up.

"He received two or three million dollars more this year as liquor revenue than last; there was the increase in succession duties and the reduction in relief and added income taxes. When the Henry Government was in it was faced with shrinking revenues. Mining and timber companies were shutting down; factories and manufacturing plants were laying off thousands. Export trade was sadly cut. Now, with export trade booming, with many factories busy on full time orders and plants working day and night, this country is being taxed to feel this prosperity again. But the Hepburn Government can claim no credit for this increase and the present overtime production. Every department administered by the government is being starved. The Health Department crippled through lack of facilities. New hospitals are needed—and in this we can't blame Dr. Faulkner because he is given no help by Hepburn.

Cancelled Construction

"In the last year of the Henry administration $1,300,000 was spent on the maintenance and upkeep of highways and plans were being made ahead for the construction of more, much of them were actually started—but when the Hepburn Government came in an order was cancelled and no new construction went out. Last year just $100,000 was spent by the government on them.

"At the present time we have 3,700 urgent cases awaiting admission to hospitals, and also applications for 15,000 for entrance to hospitals and institutions. There is no room for them, no place to put them."

The Guelph riots were caused for no other reason than the dismissal of old and trusted employees of the government, who had served well there and were then unceremoniously thrown out, charged the speaker reviewing the exodus of civil servants from Queen's Park, fired. It was stated, for no other reason than that they were not of the Liberal party.

"And included among those who were given their walking tickets was the charwoman washing floors of Queen's Park buildings at $2.50 per day. They were just suspected of not having voted the right way," declared the speaker.

Men of the type of Mr. Gaby, who also was asked for his resignation, were quickly snapped up by such large concerns as the Hollinger Mines, and were also hired by one of the greatest transportation systems in the world, under the Edward Beatty," declared Mr. Nesbitt. "Is Mr. Roebuck's opinion as employer keener than the heads of these great concerns?

"Men like these were the backbone of the Civil Service, but they have gone. Now Hepburn has Mr. Roebuck and claims that he is no good to the party, I believe, that for once Hepburn is right.

"You can't carry on an efficient administration when you must spend lives on the job—and women, too—are suddenly fired and replaced by others who know nothing at all, of the work. The American spoils system has been introduced into this country. England would never tolerate such a thing," impressed the speaker.

Policy Vindicated

The Hepburn administration had been in office just seven months when Mr. Roebuck commenced talking of cancelling Hydro contracts, continued Mr. Nesbitt. "And they kept this up session after session. And at the last session while Roebuck was still talking cancellation, Mr. Croll was on his way to the south by airplane to see Mr. Hepburn, who was visiting there, to get his permission to buy more power. And they did buy more power. You have been told time and again, that the Henry Government bought power far in excess of its needs. Did not Henry policy had been vindicated, and has shown its true worth."

Dealing briefly with the Assessment Act, Mr. Nesbitt referred to statements that had been made previously indicating that schools throughout the country would have to go a hospital. The Act was not satisfactory as it stood, declared the speaker, friends, or the Public School supporters, or the ratepayers. After talking seven days and seven nights in an effort to have the bill passed, Mr. Hepburn at the last minute turns around and rescinds it in a minute just for the sake of peace and harmony he stated.

"I have a strong admiration for my Catholic friends, but you can't tell me those learned men who make up the Legislature would listen to such twaddle if they did not know that it had been provided something else in its stead. And they are getting it in full grinding," prophesied the speaker. "The grants to them this year and the next will be well in line with population. And there will be intermediary schools set up by them. Fifth Grade will be added to their schools. Next year, explaining, we will have Separate High Schools. There will be increased grants, no doubt about it."

Blamed Unjustly

The Henry Government has been blamed unjustly for originating the Ontario system of selling beer in taverns and hotels, declared Mr. Nesbitt, explaining in detail how the amendment to the Act was broached.

Toronto and other cities of the Province we had superlative hotels, but were refused appointments, going bankrupt and into receivership, because they could not keep going. Ontario meanwhile was becoming the great tourist province. We had to have accommodation for these visitors. We had also to help the hotels if we could to stay open. Mr. Henry came to the conclusion that real, licensed, standard hotels should be given authority to sell beer under strict regulations. There was no thought of selling beer in authorities out to every made over the province and ripping things as is the case today. And yet they try to tell you that strict regulations are being enforced."

The Minimum Wage Law was all right in principle, said its authors deserve commendation for bringing it in, declared Mr. Nesbitt, but too much hope in this direction should not be entertained for some this year.

"I'm told by a very prominent labor authority, that will take at least five years for the various boards and operations to be classified by the government so that wages and rates of pay can be arrived at. So that, too, is far in the offing."

Examining in review briefly, the recent Oshawa motor plant strike, the direct charge was made by the Bracondale representative that Mr. Croll was fired too eagerly without sufficient cause by Mr. Hepburn.

"The Labor Department was created to assist labor. Mr. Croll was made head of this. His job was to help the workman, to iron out difficulties wherever he could. The author of this is always the 'multiplicies'. . . Premier Hepburn and I don't care if the prime does take his vacation in Europe. Sadly he was with the auto company one employee was sent. But that labor head, was entitled to speak for his men one hundred per cent. He, in fact, had a right to represent them. You see what happened."

Message To Young People

In his message to the younger people present, Mr. Nesbitt stressed the necessity of working for the party they represented. "Explain the past actions of the party. Read the lives and deeds of the leaders if it has given this country. Find for yourself, that the men who built this country came from Conservative ranks. Take away the deeds of these leaders and you'll have much left to account for since the days of Confederation. The Conservative party, always stable, has always stood four-square for British loads and fine democracy," concluded Mr. Nesbitt.

In his briefest of addresses, Dr. Harold Welsh declared Canadian to be the literal centre of the Conservative organization of the Township of Thurlow, "At no time has it been considered the stronghold of Liberalism down here. But now we claim the honor in East Hastings

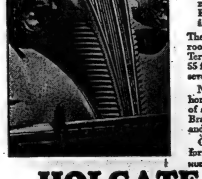
RED CROSS CLASS HELD IN NUTRITION

Interpreters Often Have to Be Secured to Explain

Interpreters are sometimes necessary at the Red Cross Nutrition Classes throughout the province, owing to the variety of nationalities of the women attending, officials of the Red Cross stated today.

An interesting instance of this was related in connection with a Red Cross Nutrition Course conducted for a Ukrainian group. The Ukrainian minister in charge came to the Mission where the course was being conducted for the full eight lessons and interpreted as listening the demonstrations and remarks of the dietitian instructors. As the class membership grew from 35 to 70, the minister became impressed with the need and value of the work that he later organized another group of women himself, and taking lessons by lesson, translated them into Ukrainian for the benefit of this newer group.



For some five years past, the Canadian Red Cross Society has been bringing the results of nutritional research in simplified form to thousands of women and girls in all walks of life throughout Ontario.

The Course itself consists of eight lessons. The teaching and demonstrations are done voluntarily by graduate dietitians who generally live in the district where the classes are being held. At each lesson a simple, cookery demonstration is given and the value of the various articles of food carefully explained. In addition to stressing the everpractical preparation of well-balanced economical meals, every food used is considered as to its body building and health protective values. That this instruction is worthy of great value to Ontario women is shown by the ever-increasing appeals made to the Red Cross for this specialized service from many parts of the province..

FIVE MODELS

Fiddler's Contest Holds Interest While Draws to Conclude Program

Motordom at its sleek shining best, the scene of riding comfort and of slumbering speed hidden beneath shiny hoods, a gorgeous glittering parade of feminine pulchritude enhanced in a setting of beautiful gowns and costumes which delighted the hearts of the crowd; music, which left nothing to be desired and a show of fine entertainment and pleasant variety in a background of colorful booths displaying to the best advantage the merchandise of a number of enterprising Belleville merchants, left a crowd of nearly two thousand with a keen sense of satisfaction last night at the Armouries, when the Motor Show and Fashion Parade held under the sponsorship of the Kinsmen Club of Belleville got under way.

The Motor Show will be held tonight and Thursday night with National Hockey League stars being the main feature of Thursday night's performance. Mayor R. D. Ponton officially opened the show and President Norman Gerbout in a brief address welcomed the crowd.

Fashion Show Pleasing

Standing out in a highly entertaining program of events, which kept the large crowd in a state of enthusiasm during the entire evening was the colorful Fashion Parade staged by Miss Nellie Smith, fashion expert and stylist of Belleville beautiful models, variety and style lines of the particular models they were. And as a smashing climax to a parade, which for sheer beauty, grace and finish could be equalled anything of the nature ever held in the city, a bridal scene complete with blushing bride, flower girls and bridesmaids, and a groom, Harold Davison to be exact, whose fine baritone voice was heard in "I Love You Truly" drew the well-merited applause of the large gathering.

Models and gowns were shown by Woodley, shoes by Agnew-Surpass.

No Draggy Interludes

Interspersing the various appearances of the style models was a program which for variety and entertainment augurs well for a record attendance the remaining two nights. The style parade consisted of some dozen pieces occupying the dais, which was attractively decorated with the colors of the Kinsmen Club and the booths of the clubs held a lofty and prominent position at the top of the stage. Commander Whitlard of the Commodes did yeoman serubs in his usual capacity as master of ceremonies and interested gallery of parents.

The company marched pass in column of platoons. In line of column and in review order, Captain Parnell and Col. A. B. Gribble taking the salute at dais. These manoeuvres were followed by company, platoon and squad drill under the commanding officer and the platoon commanders, in which the drill was completed by way of demo and commented upon by Captain Parnell.

Following the regular drill platoons No. 4 and 5 gave a special demonstration of physical culture drill and played recognized school games for the entertainment of the large gallery. This exhibition was supervised by Lieut. Bateman, who is in charge of the school corps. Principal A. E. Wilkins and members of the Board of Education were grood and interested spectators also. Following the inspection the students were given the remainder of the day as a holiday.

CHANGED HER SHOES FIVE TIMES A DAY

Suffered For 20 Years With Rheumatism

Try and picture the life this woman led for twenty years—changing her shoes several times a day in a vain endeavor to attain some relief from the rheumatic pains that were constantly tormenting her. Then imagine her joy when she found that Kruschen was driving away the rheumatism. This is what she writes:—

"I have been using Kruschen Salts for four years. For twenty years previously I had suffered with my feet, sometimes changing my shoes five times a day, and frequently sitting without any as the pain was so great. Now I can wear the same pair of shoes all day with comfort. I cannot speak too highly of Kruschen Salts. Only those who had been in constant pain with their feet for years can realise what it is to be free."—(Mrs.) E. J.

It is deposits of excess uric acid, lodging between the joints, which are frequently the cause of rheumatism. Kruschen Salts contain two ingredients—sodium and potassium—which are effective solvents of uric acid.

HALLOWAY W. M. S.

The ladies of the Halloway W. M. S. had their annual meeting at the home of Mrs. Will Cadman. After partaking of a very appetizing dinner, the president took the chair, and the business commenced. Mrs. Reid led in prayer. Mrs. Arthur Reid and Mrs. Percy Kelly read the scripture lesson taken from Genesis. Exhibit, Shell Oil Co., and the Robt. Simpson Co., Refrigerators and Pianos.

Minutes were read and adopted. The roll was answered by a verse containing the word "hope." Collection of thank offering envelopes. Showing its vivid contrast to the sleek beeness of the automobiles was the clear while of a fully equipped ambulance complete with first aid kit, and with two attendants garbed in white jackets. Another distinct novelty was a travelling coach or trailer. This proved the centre of attraction for a large crowd all evening. Ready for the road, and complete with all necessary equipment, the trailer was the last word in this mode of travel.

Holding the eyes of the gathering throughout the entire evening were the splendid exhibits of merchandise displayed by local business men and merchants of the city. The booths, which, were placed around the outside of the large floor space were attractively arranged and brought out to advantage the products and offerings of the various exhibitors. A feature of the display was the presence of Belleville's fleet of motor cycles, the Kinsmen's Club Kid-Kar Derby. Attractively garbed in a white costuming suit, and seated in the "Silver Bullet" which carried him to victory in the Kid-Kar derby, the youngster drew the admiring attention of a large crowd which surrounded him. Another object of interest was the display of prizes for participants of the race and their cars, which were posted high up on the stage for all to see.

Dance Hall Diary

— by —

Jane Clayton

The man shared his opinion, Wilbin a few minutes Anne was talking and laughing in the midst of an eager ring of young males. A good bit of dancing ensued before she was to sit next to the rosy, flushed girl at dinner. While this went on, Nancy retained her smiling good humor. She was acting success in the absence of Mrs. Bye, who had appeared to explain that she and her contemporaries were not dining with the children. Anne suspected that the other was not too well pleased, but Nancy was a veteran at concealing her real feelings, and Anne she saw appeared delighted with Anne's success.

The young people streamed into the dining room. The table had been arranged beforehand, but that meant nothing to Stanley, Promptly he juggled the cards to place himself on Anne's right and Arch Sheets on her left. From the head of the table Nancy smiled at the trio. "Well done!"

"You seem to be a regular heartbreaker, Anne Loe," she said gayly.

"Not at all," protested Anne.

But there was a sense of burning triumph in her heart.

MEETING BY MOONLIGHT

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

Dinner was lively and informal. The conversation was more good-natured than witty and there was a general tendency to simultaneous speech.

"Pinny is a super polo pony . . ."

"The final score was 10 to deuce at least a dozen times. . . ."

"Did you hear that Gerald lost his shirt at Belmont? He told me that Anne's was still running late last night . . ."

Anne was content to have little to say, to listen to the chatter, to laugh, to watch Stanley and Arch. "I would like a word or two with Anne myself. . . ."

He had his word. Presently Anne was talking again to Stanley. The others did not matter. In the main they seemed intent upon getting tight in a minimum length of time. There had been rounds of cocktails in the living room, but the cocktail habit was thoroughly dinner. Pauses became more frequent, the voices more shrill. The courses were hardly touched.

Afterwards the party danced on the glass floor to the music of the radio. Anne had her giddy, intoxicating hour of dancing with Stanley, the last girl present. She was the best dancer. All barriers go down in dance floor etiquette, was the undisputed belle.

Anne felt unmistakably happy. Part of her happiness lay in its dancing, part in the praise, the admiring backhandings. Above all, there was Stanley to tease her with the illusion of the past. He danced the floor on the sidelines unless he was dancing with Anne. He refused to be frown so? For the third time he cuu in on Arch Sheets.

"Now you can't," he told Arch politely but firmly. "If you cut in again I'll have to call the police."

He whirled off with the girl, looking down at her a moment later, he asked:

"Did you mind what I said to Arch?"

"No—no, I didn't mind." If only he could guess how little she minded! If only he could guess how little she thought of him. He had called her his girl. Over and over he repeated the ominous phrase.

The radio was playing a sweet, smooth waltz. The lights had been dimmed and strains seemed to shut the two into a world of their own. Some of the others left the floor. Now, smoking and drinking, they sat watching the dancers. Anne sensed as if they were professionals the tall, handsome man, the small pretty girl, slender and doll-like in her stiff, starched net. As they neared the edge of the dance floor Anne heard Nancy's clear, high voice:

"No wonder she dances like a professional. She has had a ten-cent dance hall professional."

That was the last straight before Stanley swung her quickly out of earshot. She had been long enough. The dream was finished.

Nancy was right. Stanley whirled uncomfortably under his breath.

"She was insufferable.'

"She was, at that," he agreed soberly. "But I think you should take into consideration—"

"I don't want to discuss it."

The dance was ruined, the fun was over. Why should he make excuses for Nancy? Why defend her? The thrill ended. Anne started to slip away. Stanley stopped her.

"Let's leave the crowd awhile, Anne," he suggested hurriedly, nervously. "I want to talk to you."

"I've said all I have to say," she answered, trying to seem remote and dignified but feeling horribly close to tears.

"Please, just Nancy—about us."

He guided her toward two broad, low steps that led to a sunken garden, ethereally beautiful in the moonlight. She hesitated, half unwilling, half eager to leave the chattering, noisy group on the piazza. Even as she hesitated she knew that she would follow him. They walked out into the starry night, down a twisting, gravelled path, and the sound of the radio and the sound of voices fell away and there was only the gentle lapping of the bay, the crunch-crunch of little stones beneath their feet. Anne forgot Nancy, forgot everything but Stanley and the moon-washed beauty of the night.

At a summer house heavy with flowering vines Stanley paused in him. Stanley dropped to a marble bench, pulled the girl down beside him. Their hands locked. From somewhere close by came the sharp, fresh odor of mint blending with the wistaria that faced the arbor. Pale Phlox, Pansies, Petunias, Roses, lost in magic.

"I've been afraid I was really thinking," the man said suddenly in the scented darkness. "Our talk—our kiss—our confession—Do you remember our talk?"

Her head began to hammer.

"Yes," she whispered.

Stanley drew himself nervously, confusedly. He was pulling at a ribbon on her gown, twisting it back and forth between his fingers, then swathed his hands. Her eyes fell to the ribbon. She saw his them. This is it,—she was thinking wonderingly . . . . this is what lives are like. This is what it is to love and plays are written about; this is the climax.

"Anne, you're so sweet," she heard his husky unsteady voice.

Both of them started and sprang apart as a crashing outside. John Fred Hanson, host, threw the doors of the summer house, thrust his head inside.

"Hello, you two," he said coolly, speaking toward the pale blur of Anne's face. "Where's the rest of things," he added with a significant wink. The cowspinners that made Anne hate him.

"You're not," Stanley said briefly, "breaking up?"

"Of course not," echoed Anne, hating the sound of her voice.

"You folks didn't see Nancy come by?"

"Nancy"?

"She was dancing and all at once she disappeared. John Allr," he elucidated more for Stanley's benefit than Anne's, "thought another wants her on the phone. Says it's very low. This is something important —you know those importers—Carr, Carr, Probably wants to warn Nancy against the duties."

"You haven't any idea where she went?" she was Stanley, alert concerned.

Anne felt suddenly weary and ill. "Perhaps she went to bed. I'm John Flanders and Nancy between them. I thought she was tired. Stanley did not seem to mind. Nancy was the present considerate. "I'll walk back with you," he said hopes, her wry sense of disappointment. "Not that I'm there. There's nothing to him at all. It was only Nancy. He and I—we're old friends." Anne thought bitterly.

Jim said he believed he was right. Nancy had gone to her room about half an hour ago, but then she had left no word as to where she was saying. "How's to have a look with me?"

"All right with you, Anne?"

"Quite all right."

Anne and Jim followed the perturbed men from the summer house. She was shaken with rage against Nancy. Nancy had ruined, managed, innocently or not, to inject this unwelcome complication. Why couldn't Nancy who had ruined a moment's happiness ruin a whole day?

The route to the tennis court was all uphill; a brisk climb along a stiff gradient. At the north end of the estate, a path that, overlooked the private road. Anne had wondered once and felt the quick pressure of Stanley's hand at her elbow. There heels turning in the rute.

Anne could think of no way pains to include her in the conversation; for that matter, John Flanders did not seem to be talking. He kept saying over and over that Nancy's disappearance could be understood if she'd taken one of the men, but all knew . . . didn't Stanley find it who . . . .

Deliberately Anne averted her attention. Mostly she stared, unseeingly straight ahead; now and again she glanced behind her. Once or twice she glanced toward the public road, illuminated briefly, clearly in the blaze of headlights that swept forth and ends of cast-offs—the old high chair, the crib, and the bare mattress from before. The poor little child probably wouldn't notice the difference himself, but he does deserve the very best there is, and just because a thing is old and a bit marred and scarred doesn't mean its days of usefulness and particularly, its days of beauty, are over.

After a hectic binge comprising two divorce actions, a scandal with the Governor and an unexplained baby, Irene Dunne and Melvyn Douglas are united in holy matrimony in the picture by "Theodore Goes Wild," now playing the Capitol until Saturday nite.

"I've turned my ankle on a stone, I think."

At once Stanley was on one knee.

"It's all right now," she told him. Impressive and uncomfortable. "It—It was only a little twinge. I'm more startled than hurt."

John Flanders had gone on. He must now go report that Nancy was not on the tennis court.

"She's probably at the house by now."

Anne knew better. Uncertain, blinking in the darkness, the three hesitated a moment on the pebbled path. Instinctively each read their thoughts. Then they started for the house. Nancy was not there. Shortly after they joined the others on the piazza she turned up, serene and only mildly annoyed at the fuss that had been made over her absence.

"I left my cigarette case at the swimming pool this afternoon and she saw later Anne and Stanley sneaked in a tone that nearly blended irritation and surprise. "I didn't

A Break for Baby

If your infant isn't the first-born baby in the family, he gets the hand-me-ends of cast-offs—the old high chair, the crib, and the bare mattress from before. The poor little child probably wouldn't notice the difference himself, but he does deserve the very best there is, and just because a thing is old and a bit marred and scarred doesn't mean its days of usefulness and particularly, its days of beauty, are over.

Just one coat of this sparkling paint and gone are the scars of yesteryears, and a bright, shining, washable surface is yours.

Sanitation and babies go together. Things just must be washable. That's why this enamel surface is so very fine for the child's furniture—for his toys, too, which take such punishment. Soap and water is all that's needed to remove dirt and smudges. It's fun to use this paint, too. You can transform that dirty little elephant into a gray dream of delight with a red blanket on his back. Donald Duck may need a new suit of clothes, and there it is, right in the can. Little cases are impossible, many different shades and small brushes cost but a few cents. So you can afford to really "go to town" on furniture, and not put the daily budget in the red.

AT THE BELLE

"Maytime"

Nelson Eddy discovered recently what it is to have a deadline to meet.

He worked every day from early until late for he had to be finished with "Maytime," his third co-starring picture with Jeanette MacDonald, on a definite date to start his 1937 concert tour.

As a result of his commitments for concerts all of the scenes were shot in swift succession. He will be on the road until the first of May, performing forty-three concerts in as many cities.

"Maytime," one of the most elaborate musicals attempted in Hollywood to date, is on the Belle screen until Friday. Two weeks of work remained after Eddy's last scene was filmed.

Under the direction of Robert S. and for your perfect enjoyment of this lovely operetta is suggested that you please see it from the beginning at 2.45, 7.10 and 9.35 p.m. Performance start daily at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.15.

"Rhythm on the Range"

"Wah-ki Wedding" a comedy of love and music in the South Seas, brings Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Martha Raye and Shirley Ross to the Belle screen on Saturday and Monday matinee daily in another bit of buffoonery of the type that made "Rhythm on the Range" one of the outstanding comedies of last year.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Theodora Goes Wild" with Irene Dunne

There are many reasons why you will find "Theodora Goes Wild" now playing the Capitol Theatre until Saturday nite, gay, impeccable entertainment, the above all is the revelation of Irene Dunne as a glamorous, captivating comedienne. Many believed Miss Dunne commanded such versatility but few dared believe she could be so completely charming, so deftly subtle as a light comedy artist.

For her first feature-length laugh riot, Columbia production chiefs have starred in selecting a vehicle which allows the star full vein in displaying talents never before disclosed. "Theodora Goes Wild" has the flavor of "It Happened One Night" plus the delightful humanness of "My Man Godfrey." It's action is fast, punctuated with rich editorial touches.

Until she writes several sophisticated novels under a nom-de-plume for her own amusement which unexpectedly leads into the best-selling class over night, Miss Dunne is just a small town nobody with most amiable achievement is playing the church organ. Despite the fact that the world is discovering her as a star at the woman-of-the-world author, her publishers refuse to disclose her true identity. It is the happy-go-lucky illustrator of her books, played to a turn by Melvyn Douglas, who finally discovers her secret and realizes that her very success is a pose. He follows her to her home town and it is not long before they have fallen in love. When Miss Dunne openly shouts this fact to her neighbors, the illusion-tor disappears. Forced to take matters into her own hands the star deliberately follows him to Manhattan and, designing her approach from the pages of her own books, she appreciates in a series of adventures which finally bring the young man to his senses.

Miss Dunne's transformation from the bitten-liter who affects sophisticate is a superb portrayal, and Melvyn Douglas, playing opposite the star, likewise delivers an outstanding performance.

SOFTBALLERS TO OPEN ON MAY 12

Double Schedule Will Be Released Later by Secretary

The Belleville Softball Association will play the opening game on Coronation Day, May 12, when three games will be played, all at once, composing the league swinging into action, the league announced today. Opening day schedules, umpires and the question of playing fields were the principal matters discussed when the local softball moguls convened last night in the Aajama club rooms.

President W. J. Todd reported to committee by-laws regarding the drafting of a new playing field at the proposed position on the north portion of the Exhibition Park. "The property is being donated by Mr. F. McCreary, while our committee was favourably met by the city council and we expect to secure an adequate playing grounds would be provided for softball. A letter to this end has been sent to Toronto we also intend to wait upon the Board of Education regarding the procuring of a set of unused bleachers owned by that body," announced President Todd.

The league decided to adopt, in full the playing regulations as set down by the O.A.S.A. and will also play a double schedule. The opening day schedule was adopted, with the remaining games to be released at a later meeting. The opening games are to be played on May 12th, the provincial champion Percival Stores meeting Clacor; the Corbin Hardware journeying to the Aajama and Bridge Sergent clashing with the Aajama Club juniors. The Point Anne team sponsored by the London Lunch, will play all games at the Ormond Village, while the Deseronto team is securing to procure their diamond at Deseronto as their home diamond. The local clubs will play on the new Coleman Vista diamond.

Some of the umpires suggested last night were—Don Thomas, Dick Goodfellow, Lloyd Anderson, Jack Grant, Don Gilmour, Josh Maracle, Don Hurst, Albert Ribber, Carl Sorrell, Herb Poirier, Andy Knott and Ken Faux. These officials will be augmented by others whose names are to be submitted later. The league schedule for the summer will be released one week hence.

SCOTCH MATMAN TO TACKLE KATAN

George Clark, One of Four Best Wrestlers in World to Show Here

Assuming an all-British atmosphere a present-day champion, George Clark, Scotsman, and John Katan, former Canadian heavyweight titleholder, will wrestle at the Belleville Arena next Tuesday night, Promoter J. J. Corcoran announced today.

Clark is recognized as one of the four top heavyweights in the world today and ranks with Dean Detton, heavyweight champion; Danno O'Mahoney, former titleholder and Steve "Crusher" Casey, the Irish strongman. Clark was imported from "across the ocean" and is being groomed by his manager for an early summer shot at Champion Detton's crown, but he meets a formidable opponent in Katan.

The former Canadian titleholder, John Katan of Winnipeg, has never lost a bout in Canada. Katan decisively defeated Al Dunlop, the Cleveland mat villain, and last week was declared winner over Ted King, the sensational California youth, who was unable to continue after being dizzy during the ropes.

Promoter Corcoran added he would soon announce the names of the remaining wrestlers to make up the card for next Tuesday's show at the Arena.

Stirling and District

LATE JOHN WESLEY SAGER

Stirling—On Friday, April 23rd, many friends and relatives gathered to pay their final tribute of respect at the funeral of John Wesley Sager, pioneer of Sidney Township, who passed away on April 21st, at his home on the 8th Concession of Sidney. The late Mr. Sager who was in his seventy-seventh year was born in Sidney the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sager and spent his entire life in the farming industry of the district in which he was born. He is survived by his widow who before her marriage was Miss Janet Smith, and one son Jack at home.

The funeral service was under the auspices of the Stirling I. O. O. F., No. 239, a fraternity organization with which the deceased had been associated for many years. The service was conducted by Rev. W. J. Scott of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, where for a number of years Mr. Sager officiated on the board of stewards. He was assisted by Rev. L. S. Wight of Belleville, a former minister of the charge. Interment was made in the Stirling cemetery.

The pallbearers were Messrs. George Mergitson, Percy Ulman, J. W. Sarles, Arthur Vandervoort, Alex Park and Thomas Spry.

Stirling Women's Institute Sponsor Fine Concert

In spite of the rainy weather of Thursday evening last Stirling Theatre was well filled for the fine concert given under the auspices of the Stirling Women's Institute. It was the first public event to be held in the theatre since the re-decoration and the concert took the form of a formal opening night. Mr. George Leary acted as chairman for the evening and the program included the following numbers: Selection by Jimmie Armstrong; Reading by Helen Flindall; Dance novelty number by Misses Helen and Marion Hicks and Betty Beacock; three youthful dancers who are making rapid progress in the art of tap dancing; Cello interpretation of western songs was given by Douglas Muldrew and responded his own accompaniment on the guitar; A play depicting the past history of the local branch of the Institute given by a group of the senior members of the organization who were all grandmothers was very much enjoyed and included the following ladies in the cast: Mrs. Cynthia Rodger, aged eighty-five years and the oldest member; Mrs. H. Rodgers, Mrs. Arthur Gordinier, Mrs. Geo. Leary, Mrs. Thos. Spry, Mrs. Heath, and Mrs. Henry Tulloch. This clever sketch included dialogues and musical numbers with Mrs. Moore at the piano. Two interesting addresses were also presented during the enactment of the play, one given by Mrs. Percy Bronson and the other by Mrs. Harper Rollins. The audience was then invited to join in some lively community singing led by Arthur Duncan with Mrs. M. Hoit at the piano.

A one act comedy entitled "A Practical Joke" in which the girls enacted the parts of boys in a classroom, was exceptionally well done. The cast included the following group of Young Ladies: Neta Cranston, Helen Jeffrey, Marcella McKee, Ruth Murray, Irene Bronson, Betty Pinkle and Reta Tucker. The play which had for its setting a schoolroom was presented in a very realistic fashion with those taking part displaying plenty of dramatic ability. The draw for the lucky ticket resulted in the prize quilt being awarded to Grace Moore, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Moore of Belleville.

The band weather prevented several of the guest artists from being present. Many complimentary comments were made by the large number present for the fine program presented and the evening was well enjoyed.

Special Church Service for Stirling I. O. O. F.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Auditorium was well filled on Sunday morning when the lodges of the local, I. O. O. F. No. 239, Stirling, Encampment No. 89, and the Laurel Rebekah Lodge No. 211 attended divine worship. Rev. J. L. Kofford delivered a special message appropriate to the occasion and special music by the choir under the leadership of Mrs. R. H. Williams included an anthem and a solo by Arthur Duncan with Mrs. Williams presiding at the organ.

Many fine comments were expressed regarding the very effective decorations set up by the decorating committee led by Rev. Kofford and Mr. Thos. Ward. A large reproduction of the three links symbol of the order placed at the front of the church gaily draped in coronation colours.

The members of the various branches of the order assembled at the lodge rooms on Front Street from which place they marched to the church under the direction of the following officers: Stirling Lodge N. 239 W. L. Anderson N. G., J. R. Thompson, Rec. Sec., Stirling Encampment No. 89 G. A. Weaver, C. P., J. R. Thompson, Rec. Sec. Laurel Rebekah Lodge No. 211, Miss Evelyn Bailey N. G., Mabel Mergitson, Rec. Sec. Directly after the service the procession returned to the lodgeroom where it was officially dismissed.

Marmora—Wild animal life with the return of Spring, is coming out into the more civilized country. The helpless little creature, frightened by the passing motors, had bounded away from the highway and had become hopelessly entangled in the wires of the fence. The kind Samaritan notified Cons. Warden Shannon, Marmora, who immediately took it to the farm of Joe Shannon on R. R. No. 1. Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service

MARKET COMMENT

The market continues to have a mild case of the "jitters" with the investment public apparent that developed in both London and New York. Whether or not the New York "gold" rumour can persist despite the denials given by the highest authorities in Washington, it would seem to appear as if the gold policy cannot be materialized for a specific purpose.

One shrewd observer has an interesting theory in connection with the unofficial reports of a change in the policy of the U.S. known that the Administration in Washington is endeavoring to arrest the rise in gold and not to put it out but only desire to bring about a market equilibrium with the "unfavorable" trade balance. Obviously, observer propounds the theory that the many rumours are emanating from Washington, which has the result of bringing gold into the U.S. and if it appears as if the market will behave wildly, come up with the emphatic denial. The net result is that the stock market has had a good period of its advance of the past six months and is today more in line with current and prospective earnings.

Comparatively few margin calls are being issued in New York in spite of the decline. One has to lose about 30% of the margined equity before a call is made to bring it up to legal requirements. Meanwhile, the current week's settlement date many accounts are "frozen" and if anybody wants to obtain cash from his account, it will necessitate selling of securities. Brokers fear that a flood of selling has run its course they will have several months of accompanying small market.

Wall Street is still in a highly uncertain frame of mind in regard to immediate future of all markets. A continued decline in securities in the race of excellent first quarter-yearly reports and the long-term outlook for most industries would seem to believe that something adverse is hanging over business. The steady decline in the United States and abroad continually reverts to the subject of gold and China is the disinterested year, and a do, if anything, about the rapidly changing amount of gold coming to the United States.

the low sections should move to safe places. Trucks were put into service. They backed up to homes to enable people to climb on to them. In some sections, boats were used to remove people.

Norman Dodge, whose farm is two miles east of Thamesville about a quarter of a mile south of the river had is wade through water to his waist in order to get out his stock from a barn. One thousand chickens perished in the flood on the Dodge farm. Mr. Dodge lives near the bridge a quarter of a mile south of the village.

INOCULATIONS

wielding shovels completed the task of their Pumped From Cellars.

Firemen and workmen pumped water from cellars and then under the pavement on the streets. Pressure hoses were made to fill in dangerous washouts.

Ten feet of water still covered Springbank Drive leading south of the South London and a half dozen cars were submerged. Houses were also covered with the water.

Motor cars, radio, refrigerators and other electric appliances in the homes and stores swept by the flood. Much loss grippe-like cases since Monday. Buildings were flooded to a depth of 10 feet in the low swollen Thames, 30 feet above normal, plunged over the West London breakwater, sweeping on to the Lake Erie, causing $3,000,000 property loss.

River Drops 26 Feet

The Thames dropped 26 feet from its high mark but bridges into the flood area remained closed although motorists and pedestrian visits were permitted to enter. Provincial police undertook to direct warning signs erected at danger zones.

Large sections of sidewalks were swept away. Garages collapsed. The Thames overflowed from London, floated over the fence and stopped with its black scum, against the houses. Part of the Park pavilion stand was wrecked.

The side of one new brick house in West London was torn out, exposing the interior. Mud filled also the basement furnace. Tow trucks were busy hauling to garages autos stalled in flood waters and mired in the muddy flow.

One car skidded apparently as its owner backed from his home with his family as the flood spread. Its two occasions it was stalled but attempted to save were lying today at the bottom of the swollen river.

Doors Torn Off Houses

Doors were torn off houses and stores and drifted along with the current. Gravel roads were completely washed away. Foundations in buildings showed large cracks.

DEATH OF GIRL

Miss Rickert had been in the house since Tuesday night and never left it except to attend a confirmation. She was discovered by Serafin when he returned from work.

Blood Indicates Position.

A thick pool of congealed blood formed around the floor to indicate position of the body. Nearby was a blood-stained towel which Serafin said covered the face of the girl.

Serafin has a wife and one small pipe four feet long as a possible clue to the mystery. It was found close to the girl and was last seen lying near the furnace. There was no insurance or gangster.

Doors of the house were always locked, Serafin said, and the key to Miss Rickert on several occasions to keep it locked against intruders.

Serafin plans to bring his wife from Rumania to live with him and has told newspapermen his son, also in Rumania, had recently graduated as a lawyer.

Miss Rickert, he said, was a fine housekeeper and a quiet girl. She had no friends here but he could recall during the 18 or 20 months

The sport has a number of famous fanciers including the porters and southern states of Kentucky and Tennessee are breeding. As nags as $100,000 turns over among the bookers for the day's racing at one night. Eight dogs compete in a race and purses range from $100 to $150 for the winners, hence the Alcove's interest on any dog business. They have captured a great many honours and hope to continue on the misty, moist air of Lake England, to strengthen their fold.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Lucky Lou

By Martie Ramson

So I'd like to finish the story of Lou Adams. You know, when he opened up a book joint on Fifty-fourth street? And two fellers come up and bet twenty dollars on the eight-to-one shot in the first thought was gravy for him, an' they beat him for a hundred and about fifty which was his whole bankroll. Well so?

Take outta business wasn't so bad, then then there was always to talk him consideration. She was for 'im a 100 percent. And he was crazy about her. But married with nothing in sight was outta the question.

An' he tell her one day, "Listen, Kid, I wanna be on the level with you. You're all sour to me. No other girl's gotta look-in outside I got her. But you're gonna have to tie onto a guy like me. You know how it is with horse players. Today we eat steaks, tomorrow it's probably coffee and doughnuts."

"Listen to me, Lou," she tells 'im. "You're talkin' like a fool 'cause yours broke. But you get on your feet again. Don't get discouraged so easily. Besides I can wait, Lou."

Nobody sees him around for days or four days. Then he turns up at Sammy Rose place with a fresh money. He grabs himself a sheet an' gets over in a corner all by hisself. He's got another little sheet in his hand, an' it looks like he's doin' a kids figgerin', an' he puts down an "F" alongside a one horse in each race.

By the time he's through, the first an' second races are over. He looks at his sheet, walks over to Tommy, an' says, "Two to win on Skater Dan in the 3 race." The price is five to one, an' the horse wins. He looks at the sheet again, bets two to win on White Rose, takes the price of six to one, and White Rose romps in three lengths ahead of the field.

Well, I've seen things like that happen before, but when he goes over to Tommy an' just let him order a ham sandwich says, "Five on Sun Daughter to win at ten price," ya could've married me off to an Indian an' I wouldn't've cared a darn. Sun Daughter is fifteen to one, an' from the time it left the barrier to the time it finished in front ya'd think it was the only horse in the race. When it got runs that lucky, I figger, it's time to cut the cards an' change the deal, or quit bookin' 'em. I guess Lou figgers the same way, 'cause he pulls his sheets in his pocket, an' says good-by for the day.

When Lou comes in the next day everybody wants to play partners with 'im' cos he's hot an' can't be down cold. The only guy he talks to is Tony Bolotti, who once loaned Lou two bucks.

Lou bets ten to win on Pass-money, at eight to one. The horse wins. He bets ten across the board on Sergeant Mack. He likes the horse to finish in the money, but had a hunch it wouldn't win. The horse comes in second, which wasn't so bad, either. In the next two races, he makes a five-buck parlay on Cry Baby an' Doughboy to win. Cry Baby is four to one, an' Doughboy is two to one, an' they both win without any trouble.

At the end of the day, he says to Tony, "Well, Tony' that takes care of all the bettin' I'll ever do in my natural time. From now on, I'll be on the receivin' end of all bets. Couldn't that was goin' out an' open his biz book joint again, with fresh dough."

"Say Lou," Tony says, "what'll it take to buy that golden paper ya got in your pocket?"

"Nothin', Tony," says Lou. "You are a good guy. If ya think ya can use it, take it. Sick if ya ask me, it's all played out."

Tony looked at the paper an' looks at Lou an' laughs like the devil an' says, "Ya really mean it, Lou; that's all it was?"

"That's right, Tony," Lou answers. "Today we eat steaks, tomorrow it's probably coffee and doughnuts."

"Listen to me, Lou," she tells 'im. "You're talkin' like a fool 'cause yours broke. But you get on your feet again. Don't get discouraged so easily. Besides I can wait, Lou."

TARZAN'S QUEST

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

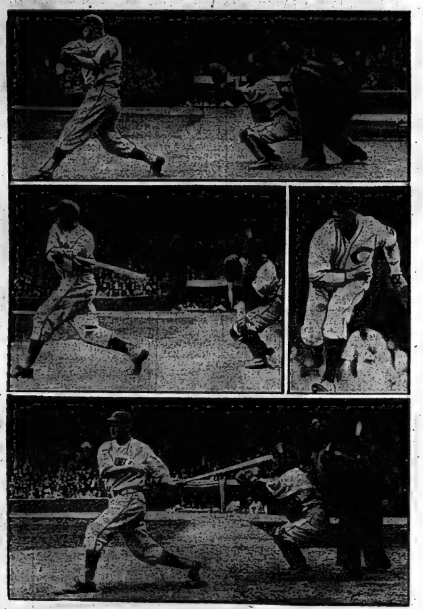
The child Flame sorrowfully clutched [illegible] as Jane. "I'll get you . . . ." "You'll do what?" demanded a man's angry voice. The two looked up. Brown was striding toward them, the hand-axe swinging in his right hand. Sborov covered and backed away.

"I'm going to finish you now, once and for all," the pilot roared. Tarzan's mate stepped bewteen the two men. "No, Brown," she said calmly. "We can't take the law into our own hands, as much as we'd like to." "But you're not safe with him alive; you

"I can take care of myself," Jane replied. "And if I can, I suppose the rest of you can." Brown hesitated but finally acquiesced. "Very well," he said. "I can wait." In those few words there seemed an ominous meaning, nor was it lost on Sborov.

Once more the dreary march—camp—darkness. Jane slept, undisturbed by the accustomed night sounds of the jungle—weird and stealthy, fierce and savage sounds—but through her dreams ran a nightmare of the mysterious thing that had stolen Antelia.

Five Dead, Thousands Homeless As Flood Wave Paralyses Western Ontario



With the Thames and Grand rivers and their tributaries swelled to flood heights by heavy rains and melting snows, a large area of western Ontario including a dozen cities, towns and villages was submerged, many thousands were homeless and at least five persons lost their lives. London, Ont., was the hardest hit with 10,000 forced to evacuate their homes as the Thames river rolled a flood crest, the highest in 40 years, into the city over protecting breakwaters. Woodstock was isolated with all highways reported under water and most of Oxford county submerged. At Beachville, near Ingersoll, a crack C.N.R. express crashed into a washed out roadbed, derailing the locomotive and baggage cars killing the engineer, the fireman and an unnamed transient. A doctor rushing to the scene was drowned. Buses and automobiles strewed roads throughout the entire area, marooned by the unprecedented flood wave; many families in London, Woodstock, Ingersoll, St. Thomas, Tillsonburg, St. Marys, Stratford and Paris were rescued from their marooned homes with difficulty. Damage was counted in hundreds of thousands of dollars. Bridges were swept away in many cities and flood walls built to withstand any expected height of water proved useless to cope with the sudden torrent poured down the streams which form the western Ontario watershed. View of the wrecked C.N.R. express in which two of the crew were killed is shown (top left) with water still lapping at the roadbed and wreckage. At (top right) an Ingersoll home, the flashy automobile still perched outside is completely isolated. A rescue scene in London is pictured (lower left) with hip-booted rescuers carrying a marooned resident from his water-logged home. The main bridge over the Thames at Ingersoll, shown (lower centre) with the torrent already washing at its flooring was carried away a few hours later while the motor bus pictured at (right) was one of many stranded on the provincial highways.

ANOTHER LINK BETWEEN JAPAN AND MANCHOUKUO

Adding another link to the chain of friendship and relationship between Japan and Manchoukuo was the marriage recently of Fu Chieh, younger brother of Henry Pu-Yi, emperor of Manchoukuo, to Miss Hiroko Saga, granddaughter of the Marquis Kinto Saga, loyal supporter of Emperor Hirohito of Japan. The bride and groom were pictured at Tokio, Japan, shortly after their marriage.

Attacked by land and harassed by sea, Bilbao was placed in imminent peril of capture when the towns of Durango and Elbar were taken by shaped front. Mola's troops. The civil governors were reported attempting to negotiate a peaceful surrender to the northern rebel general. Loyalist resistance to the insurgents was reported crumbling on a wide crescent

SANDBAGS USED AGAINST FLOOD AT CHATHAM

Chatham's Water Supply May Be Cut by Floods; Health Measures Taken

Five Schools Closed in That City as Sewers Plugged

WATER STILL RISING

Boilers in Hospital Are Sandbagged to Keep Out Water

Tumbling along toward Lake St. Clair, flood waters of the Thames river roared into Chatham today after sprawling over towns and farm lands in a 75-mile stretch down river from London.

At Chatham, centre of a prosperous tobacco and sugar-beet growing district, the Thames tossed its last challenge after affecting dozens of communities that line its banks. From the Kent County city of 16,000 it roared on to the lake sixteen miles away.

Picking up force from its tributaries, the usually placid stream widened last night to inundate and isolate Thamesville, sixteen miles up river from Chatham and spread over thousands of acres of farm lands.

Crowded Into Hotel.

More than half of Thamesville's 800 residents crowded into its one hotel and opera house to escape rising water that poured into their homes. In places it swirled through the streets six and eight feet deep.

All roads into the village were under water as the Thames spread out its banks farms. Boats fought the rushing water through the night to rescue farmers from their houses. Many moved their furniture to attic stairs and decided to stick it out. Others moved into high barns, bringing livestock into the lofts with them.

Water 20 Feet

In some sections of the district the water was 20 feet deep and four narrow escapes from drowning were reported. Thamesville lost its gas and electric services early and there was no adequate supply of drinking water.

Today most of Thamesville's citizens huddled in the hotel and opera house and watched through second floor windows as wreckage of all descriptions swept down the main street. They had seen a farm house flash by, carried from the Bothwell district and loaded with logs, fence, lumber and trees.

Up river at London, largest city on the Thames and hardest hit by the river's rampage, hundreds of refugees were still housed in the Auditorium and Red Cross shelters while authorities placed the flood damage at $3,000,000 and set about the work of rehabilitation.

Sun Breaks Through Clouds.

Rain-laden clouds retreated from the western Ontario flood area this afternoon when the sun broke through to bring hope to the 10,000 flood-weary residents.

In the 75-mile path from London to Chatham, the sun shone over farm lands submerged in muddy waters, wrecked homes, impassable highways and bridges. While residents of West London were driven from their flooded homes and the Thamesville folk watched the turbulent flood recede, Chatham began a barricade of sandbags along the waterworks yard to check the encroachment.

Chatham anxiously awaited the flood peak, expected at six o'clock this evening. So far the antics of the Thames have caused little damage to the city, in the path of the swollen stream as 18-pushes towards Lake St. Clair.

Raging Flood Rips Through Highway Near Tillsonburg, Ont.

With flood waters throughout western Ontario receding, authorities and volunteers began the difficult task of removing debris and restoring activity to normal. A conservative estimate of the damage caused by rising water has been placed by city, town and village officials at $5,000,000. With the muddy water dropping rapidly, it was expected it would return to ordinary level again in a better view of the damage which had been wrought, as may be seen in the ABOVE photograph. 90 Year Old Man Recalls Oxcarts

Haliburton, Ont., Apr. 29 (CP)—Frederick Freeman, oldest merchant in this district north of Peterboro, will celebrate his 90th birthday tomorrow. An early settler here, he recalls when oxcarts were the most popular means of transportation before being supplanted by horse and wagons and then streamlined train.

Born in Holloway, London, in 1847 he was the fifth son of a family of twelve. He came to Toronto when about 20 then moved to Fenelon Falls before continuing northeast to Haliburton. He has owned a general store here for 60 years.

Although only a five minute walk from the post office, Mr. Freeman said he had not been in it for 40 years but has had a box there for 50.

3-CAR PILE UP AT JONES CREEK

Middle Car, Owned by Robert Kafferer, Toronto, Is Sandwiched

A three-car pile-up that saw the centre automobile sandwiched between another motor car and a large truck resulted in considerable damage to all three, when driven by Robt. Kapferer, Toronto, at Jones' Creek on Highway No. 2, today.

Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Byrnes and Provincial Constable Reid found that the highway was being repaired at a point near Jones' Creek and a slow traffic sign was displayed. Leading a procession of motor vehicles was Charles Beldam, Scarboro, who slowed down when flagged by a workman. Following in his wake was Mr. Kapferer, who also obeyed the slow signals, while still behind was a truck driven by E. R. Carswell, Toronto. Realizing too late the signalman because of the front two vehicles with the result the front of his truck collided with the rear of Mr. Kapferer's car, forcing it into the Beldam car. The force of the centre motor car stuck the rear of the lead car, driven by Mr. Beldam.

The damage to Mr. Kapferer's car will amount to at least $75.00 as both the rear and front of the damaged. Motorcycle Patrolman Byrnes stated.

STRIKE LEADERS DEFY ULTIMATUM

Picket Lines Around 35 Plants Considerably Strengthened

Montreal, Apr. 29 (CP)—Picket lines around some 35-strike-bound dress manufacturing shops were strengthened today as strike leaders defied an ultimatum from Quebec's labor minister to end the two-week old struggle.

The deadline in Hon. William Tremblay's communication to strike leaders for the men to return to work within 24 hours passed early today with no sign of a break in the employers' ranks.

Though 3,000 strikers voted unanimously yesterday in favor of accepting a government offer to arbitrate to the difficulties, there was no indication a board would be set up immediately. The arbitration offer was contingent, on the strikers returning to work, and strike leaders were adamant the strike would continue until the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union was accorded recognition by the holdout manufacturers.

Windsor Lives Every Day For A Telephone Call To Mrs. Wallis Simpson

Unvarying Feature is a Call at Seven in Evening With All Plans Revolving Around That Time — Physical And Mental Fitness an Ideal of Ex-Monarch.

By A. D. STEFFERUD

St. Wolfgang, Austria, Apr. 29 (AP)—The Duke of Windsor lives today—and every day—for a telephone call.

Every evening at seven he calls Mrs. Wallis Simpson. The call is the one unvarying feature of his day. All his plans revolve about it. It determines the time of returning from excursions and the time of the evening meal. Nothing is allowed to interfere with it.

As a rule the former king sleeps late, almost until noon. Once in a while he arises about 10:30 or 11. If the day is especially sunny. He breakfasts frugally, apples being the main item, usually while looking over his mail.

Subsequently, if there are no curiosity-seekers on the public road not far from the house, Edward takes his puppy, Schmuckli, for a brief stroll around the house and down to the boat-landing a few steps from the front door.

During this time he makes up his mind about the afternoon excursion —whether an automobile tour to a neighboring town, lake, or a walk up a mountain, or golf.

Sits With Equerry.

The departure usually occurs between one and two p.m. in two large cars. The Duke sits in the first with his equerry, adjutant and detective, while gendarmes follow in the second to prevent others from entering him. The Duke carries his cameras on all trips.

Depending on the distance and activity, he returns for afternoon tea. Until seven he reads and rests. Dinner is always a quiet affair, and taken with equerry and adjutant. The duke invariably retires late, after a walk with the dog. Evenings in a quaint quiet Austrian tale, limited to the radio, playing an accordion, smoking his pipe, peanuts' pips a foot long, or reading.

Outside social and mental fitness has become an ideal of the duke. An ardent golfer, a seven-hole course near here has been enlarged for his use.

One of his outstanding feats was a climb up the 5,868-foot-high Schafberg (Sheep Mountain) to an altitude of about 4,000 feet. There snow prevented a further ascent.

Windsor felt not unduly tired that evening, but members of his retinue went to bed earlier than usual. The same thing happened one day when they walked half ways around the St. Wolfgang Lake. The duke took it all in his stride, but the others complained it was too much for them.

The duke is tanned and healthy, looking. He walks with a firm, springy step, and seems full of energy. At 42, he appears as lean as a boy.

The duke's chief laments that breakfast comprises mostly fruit, that tea is standardizedly British, and that dinners leave no scope at all for imagination. Economy is the watchword.

The duke gets along with nine servants. Seventeen were required at Enzesfeld. The rent of the home is estimated at the one-fourth of that paid for the Rothschild Chateau near Vienna.

BUSMEN'S STRIKE IS CONTEMPLATED

Transportation in All East-ern Counties of England May be Affected

London, Apr. 29 (CP)—The possibility of a national bus strike throughout Great Britain was advanced by the Evening Standard in its late editions this afternoon.

Under banner headlines, the newspaper declared: "A strike of many thousands throughout the eastern counties of England is scheduled to begin at midnight tomorrow—the same hour as the threatened stoppage of the London Passenger Transport Board Services—unless the busmen's demands are met. This may develop into a national stoppage."

The Standard said a conference of men from thirteen important companies was held last night and early this morning at Chelmsford. The present unofficial strike in ten counties was discussed.

"The conference decided to support the men now on strike and that the men represented at the conference would definitely cease work at midnight tomorrow unless their demands are agreed to by 2 p.m. tomorrow," the Standard declared.

"In the event of the committee thus compounded not agreeing to the demands, the conference would ask the executive council of the Transport and General Workers Union to declare a general strike."

The London strike deadline, meanwhile, grew nearer, with workers' delegates and representatives of the transport board conferring separately with F. W. Leggett of the ministry of labor. The two parties to the dispute have not met yet, however.

13,000 TRAPPED IN HOLOCAUST OF FLAMES, BULLETS

Struggled For Their Lives in Bombardment From Air at Guernica

4,400 KILLED

Walls Tumbled About Many Who Ran Inside For Shelter

By FERNANDO FONTECHA

(Copyright 1937 by The Havas News Agency)

Bilbao, Apr. 29 (CP-Havas) — A terrifying tale of how 13,000 men, women and children trapped in a holocaust of flames, bullets and exploding bombs, struggled for their lives during Monday's insurgent air bombing of Guernica was unfolded today by a general woman who lived through the ordeal.

Maria Goitia, expressed the belief at least 4,400 were killed or wounded in the air raid, allegedly carried out by German fliers serving the insurgent forces driving towards Bilbao. Guernica, ancient capital of the Basques, is about 30 miles northeast of Bilbao.

On Monday the inhabitants of Guernica and others from neighboring points gathered in the town for the market activities which customarily took place on that day, Senora Goitia said.

Streets Quite Congested.

"At 4 p.m. when the streets of the town were most congested, we heard the sudden drone of airplane motors. An airplane hove into sight and dropped a number of bombs into the streets, instantly killing and wounding a number of persons.

"Women, old people and children scrambled for shelter. Soon other airplanes appeared and began to bomb buildings and churches. Walls tumbled about the heads of many who had run there.

"The noise of exploding bombs and the cries of the wounded were deafening. Flames roared through a number of buildings hit by incendiary bombs. When those inside fled into the streets the air raiders swooped on them and mowed all within sight with machine-gun fire.

Scores Lay in Streets.

"The populace faced the choice of either returning to flaming buildings or running into the open streets.

"I saw all this from a house in which I had taken refuge. Scores of wounded and dead lay in the streets. Many others were burned to death in the buildings. When the house in which I was took fire I rushed into the street. Bullets whistled past me. I kept on running and finally arrived at Bilbao. Many others arrived into a bush, scratching my face and hands. That is the end, me.

"I do not know anything of my own family. I do not know whether they are dead or wounded or have fled."

MANY PATRONIZE KINSMEN'S SHOW

Sports Night Tonight Will Culminate The Fine Exhibition

The proof of the pudding is in the eating, so some one said at one time or other, and the fact, that the general public will always patronize a worthy cause especially when it is being given more than full value of its money, was substantiated last night, when a crowd estimated at well over two thousand crowded the Armouries where the second performance of the Motor Show and Fashion parade sponsored by the Kinsmen's Club of Belleville in their drive for funds for support of the Sye Climie for Children outside the sparkle and well-nigh perfection of the inaugural show of the night previous.

And culminating three nights of high class entertainment, Thursday's performance will undo the preceding ones, when the main attraction will be the presence for the final time in public in Belleville, of a galaxy of luminaries of the National Hockey League A quartette of the "Lindsorghs of Ice Land" will parade with their wives on the stage of the orchestra dais and will be formally introduced to the gathering, which it is expected will fill the building to capacity, The Belleville Redmen, Intermediate "B" hockey champions will also be present and will be presented by one of the visiting hockeyists.

Sports Night Tonight

But that happens tonight. Last night, the colorful display of fashion styles and entertainment featured to be a shade better than the night previous. The display models of the Fashion Show, staged by Miss Nellie Smith, appeared to be a little more glamorous as they paraded in the beautiful Spring, Summer and Winter creations before the eyes of an admiring crowd. The colors of a flashing spotlight seemed to be a little brighter than before. Evidence of the style and beauty of the frocks, gowns, ensembles, etc., and the general popularity of the show, are to be found in the great number of people, ladies especially, who came to view the parade in the second time.

Furs, Footwear, Oddfurs

Occupying the centre of the assemblies worn by the models in the Fashion Show, and which drew the attention from several of the spectators, were the fur coat creations shown by Mrs. Rodney Hooper to advantage by the grace of the models these coats were presented in a new word in style and fashion.

The chic millinery of various styles and color which was harmonized with the Spring, Summer and Winter modes worn by the models were also furnished by this popular firm.

Giving charm to the style effects were the 1937 styles of milady's footwear, in a variety of shapes and colors, shown by the Agnew-Surpass Shoe Store. Another attraction, the modern arrangements of milady's oddfurs. Done attractively in a combination suite by the "Ayfair Beauty Salon. this style of beauty culture is the most approved dementary exclamations.

Maintaining the same high standard of the night previous the various acts, which interspersed the different parades of the Style Show, again won the acclaim of the spectators. The Music Masters, with their stringed instruments and imitations, little Miss Barbara Dilworth, universal tap-dancing favorite of Belleville and district, Jack Drayton, whose fine voice makes popular songs more popular, the dainty Misses Jean Watson and Helen Bongard, line-clad diminutive dancing stars, "The Professor" a magician of skill, and the voice of Harold Davidson, in "I Love You Truly" in the jovial scene which imbraced the Fashion Show, rounded out a stage offering which lacked nothing from an entertainment point of view.

Worthy of special mention in last night's performance was the fine music dispensed by the augmented orchestra under the baton of Walter Asteline. oPurkiteen musicians in an attractive black and white setting not only furnished the incidental music for the Fashion Show but was further honors for themselves in a splendid concert given at the end of the regular program.

Cars Win Acclaim

Again the exhibit of cars and booth displays won the acclaim of the gathering. Sustained interest on the part of the public was evidenced of the attractiveness and popularity of this part of the show. During the half time intermission, numbers of people availed themselves of the opportunity to examine closely the many beautiful automobile models, and the fine display of merchandise which was displayed by many prominent merchants of the city.

Immediately following the orchestral concert, which terminated the entertainment activities of the evening, Mayor R. D. Arnott, and President Norman Garfield of the Kinsmen's Club, assisted by Orliff Lloyd, drew the lucky tickets which entitled the holders to-valuable prizes. The winners and their prizes were:—Ice Radio, Ticket No. 3858, George Walker, Stirling; Ice Radio, Ticket No 1140, Mr. Guyer, 90 South John street; Can of Quaker Oil, Ticket No 8071, Olive Knott, of 7 Bim street; Can of Alemite Oil, Ticket No. 1746, C. R. Smith, 32 Octavia street; Can of Alemite Lubricant, Ticket No. 3276, Beatrice Martin, 30 George street. It was announced by Mayor Arnott that three radios would be drawn for at tonight's performance.

The music of Bert Haines and his orchestra furnished rhythms for the jitney dancing which followed the exciting evening of high class entertainments.

POLICE BLOTTER

The pavilion at Holton's Grove, on the Front Road, and the picnic grounds as it is more familiarly referred to, were broken into and plundered of a recent date. Provincial Police were notified yesterday. Investigations disclosed a quantity of wood and metal goods to have been removed from the premises.

Three automobiles, parked inside of the fire department safety zone opposite No. 2 fire hall yesterday, were removed from the street by police a few infringements of the one hour parking bylaw were observed and police stickers were attached the windshields of the cars in question instructing the owners to report to the police authorities.

A minor motor accident happened on West Bridge St. hill yesterday afternoon, when the West bus bound collided with a motor car driven by Thos. D. School of Montreal. Mr. School was proceeding west up the hill with the bus following behind when suddenly the smaller vehicle turned in toward the curb and stopped, the bus being unable to retard its speed. The right rear fender of the smaller vehicle was crumpled. The matter was amicably settled and no charges laid after Detective Laird investigated. The hold-up delayed the bus service slightly, however.

Ex-Mayor Harry Hill complained that small boys were throwing stones through the windows of his garage and auto sales room windows at the rear of his premises yesterday. The names of the mischievous culprits were obtained, they being lads ranging in age from nine to eleven years.

Provincial Police today were notified of the theft of a 1927 Pontiac sedan, the property of Thos. Hunt, Erinsville farmer. The vehicle, bearing Ontario plates number 173-T-9, was taken from Mr. Hunt's premises under the cover of darkness. A local description was circulated and all the constables shared the cell block at the police station last night, the former being remanded in custody for trial on Friday.

DISASTERS BY FLOOD

Unusually heavy rains have played havoc with the countryside and the towns and cities along the banks of rivers in Western Ontario with losses running into millions and the irreparable loss of five persons' lives. Quite unexpected in its suddenness and in the immensity of the danger it has wrought, this disaster can be felt by those people who have known floods in other years especially in March in the freshettes when ice is a large factor in the damage. But this week's flood is something different and emphasizes the different topography of the country as reflected in the way in which the waters spread over the banks.

Flood damage in Canada is a very large item every year and men have tried to realize some means of controlling the water when it gets unruly. Dams have been proposed and other measures suggested but nothing commensurate with the undertakings along the large streams in the United States has been undertaken here.

Such spongy weather as heralded the flood also spelled trouble for highways and railways. The events of some years ago west of here when there were washouts and lives were lost are not too far away to make the public realize the risk that a washout or undermining of a roadbed means.

YUKON AND BRITISH COLUMBIA

Those who hit "the trail of ninety-eight" may cast a longing, lingering look behind at time as they realize that Yukon which gave its name to poetry and fiction and romance in the discovery of gold and the consequent rush to the land, part of which is within the Arctic Circle, will soon no longer possess its individuality or identity, but will be annexed to British Columbia. Pupils in schools will still be told of the gold stampede but to them Yukon will be known as the northern part of the second largest province of Canada, Quebec being the largest.

The union or annexation is in line with the tendency which created Alberta and Saskatchewan and added to other provinces.

British Columbia has always been closely associated with the Yukon for through it went the prospectors and through it came the stories of the great days of forty years ago. It is natural that this should come.

But annexation or no annexation Yukon will live in the story of gold and romance in Canada for generations. It had a glamor the more scientific drilling and digging for gold today in the hard rock does not possess.

British Columbia and the Territory will both benefit by the absorption some day. There will be no added obligation on the Province as the Federal Government will make an annual subsidy of $125,000 for five years to assist the province in meeting the expenditures incidental upon the extension of the boundaries of the province.

Yukon has not now to face the rigors of the old days as modern amenities and improvements have made the country not what it used to be. Some feel that the Yukon will become a magnet for Canadian venturous youth. For British Columbia it is felt that the absorption mark s the beginning of a new era. New Railways are seen as likely, others that the Yukon may stand to lose. But the plans will likely carry through.

The Premier of British Columbia was an official in Yukon in the rush days and should know the needs of the Territory.

Acquisition by British Columbia of the Yukon Territory (itself approximately four times as large as New York State, though with a population of only slightly more than 4,000) will make the Province the second largest in Canada, with 579,706 square miles. It will be led in size by Quebec, with 594,534 square miles.

Valuable deposits of gold and silver are found in the territory, which, in the year ended March 31, 1935, produced more than $1,000,000 worth of silver and, at present values, more than $1,700,000 worth of gold.

The Yukon Territory was set up as a separate political unit in 1898, soon after the discovery of gold in the Klondike. Previously inhabited by only a few scattered bands of Indians, it boasted a population of more than 27,000 in 1901, centered mostly at the mines and in the capital, Dawson. Since the decline of the mining industry, however, the population has shrunk steadily, and in 1932 only 826 persons lived in Dawson and 540 in White Horse, the second largest settlement.

The Yukon district, with 206,427 square miles of land area and 649 of water-area, stretches from the Arctic Ocean, along the border of Alaska to the boundary of British Columbia. Mining, including the working of lead and copper veins, remains the principal industry, though coal is being increasingly dug and there are large quantities of game and fur-bearing animals.

TO A ROSE

Fair, fragrant flower, words can but half express
Thy dainty grace, thy silken loveliness.
Unfolding bud, that in the summer hour,
Gives promise of the perfect, opened flower;
Elusive colors paint thy petals rare,
Oh, what can with a budding rose compare!

I prize thee, too, since long, ah, long ago
The bush was planted where thy flowers grow,
By one whose life was fragrant but so brief,
Who left us with a great heartache and grief,
But whose fair memory, like thy fragrant flower,
Is with us with each summer's fleeting hour,
Whose fair, sweet face, so like thy petals bright
Remains with us to gladden and delight—

For oh! the fragrance of a life lives on
When life is past and earthly days are done.

—Helen B. Anderson.

THE MIRACLE OF THE MODERN NEWSPAPER IS NOT ALWAYS APPRECIATED AT ITS TRUE WORTH—it is taken as a matter of course, and the day of four, six and eight-page papers seems to have been generally forgotten. The tremendous expense involved in producing a daily newspaper is only realized with a few, comparatively speaking, who come in close touch with the workings of a newspaper plant and staff. Even the presentation of news pictures sent by radio telegraph, telephone, a super miracle, does not seem to give the blase folk of today any super thrill. We are living in a marvellous age, but a great many people do not realize the wonders of the age we are living in. However, what we started out to say was slightly different. We wanted to point out and emphasize the quick response to any message printed in the daily paper read each day by thousands, using the incident of the Salada Tea Company which recently advertised a Coronation Tea Spoon which could be obtained by any reader of this newspaper by cutting out a coupon and sending ten cents. Returns thus far show that eight hundred and twenty four (824) of our subscribers took advantage of this offer, 404 from Belleville and 420 from outside points. The following appreciation from the Salada Tea Company is worth noting:

"PERMIT US TO TAKE THE OPPORTUNITY TO THANK YOU SINCERELY FOR THE KIND AND EXCELLENT CO-OPERATION EXTENDED THROUGHOUT THE ENTIRE PERIOD. WE CAN ASSURE YOU THAT IT IS APPRECIATED."

Appreciation is always welcome—We know that this newspaper goes into over six thousand homes in this shopping district every day and that commercial messages are read and acted upon by readers. Advertisers know this having noted the direct response time after time and realize the value of the medium as a business accelerator to the full—so we cannot work up much excitement when the expected happens as it always does with the Great Family Journal.

FAX FITS FOLKS, ARE YOU ONE OF THE FOLKS THAT FAX FITS? Such was the slogan of a merry tailor named Fax who lived and worked in Belleville some years ago. Fax the Tailor, was one of the famous Fax brothers, popular entertainers of the Gay Nineties. At the annual reunion banquet of veteran troupers in Toronto recently, Jimmie Fax, ager 85, was one of the peppiest troupers to gather round the festive board, telling those present that he had presented the song and dance acts in almost every Town Hall in Canada. Jim's brother George was the FAX (WHO) FITS FOLKS—ARE YOU ONE OF THE FOLKS THAT FAX FITS.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 29th, 1917.

At the regular meeting of the Women's Institute of West Belleville an excellent talk on "Child Training" was given by Mrs. Morrice, Mrs. Lucas gave a detailed report on the Red Cross work done by the Institute during the winter months. The Red Cross Workers in connection with the Institute have amalgamated with the West Belleville War Workers and in future will work with that society.

The flying dust on Victoria Ave. is very disagreeable. It flies into the houses, into one's eyes, over one's clothes, and sets one's temper afire. Can't something be done to stop the nuisance?

A recommendation will be presented at the next meeting of the Belleville City Council authorizing the expenditure of $100 towards assisting in ploughing vacant lots in the city in order that the land may be worked for food production.

30 YEARS AGO

April 29th, 1907

Mr. Charles Wilmot of Avondale shipped carloads from here to Hopetoun and two saddle and harness horses which will be exhibited at the Horse Show at Toronto. Mr. Wilmot has won for two years the championship cup for saddle horses and ponies and if he is successful this year in winning in the same classes, the cup will become his permanently property. It is hoped that he will be successful in retaining the coveted prize.

Mr. Robert McCoy of this city with exhibit his colt, which is a handsome and valuable animal, at the Toronto Horse Show.

The D. and D. Institute football team defeated the Marsh and Henthorne team in the match which was played yesterday on the Institute grounds. The score was 6 to 0.

Dr. G. A. Whiteman of Picton has been appointed assistant coroner for Prince Edward County.

The Oddfellows of Belleville celebrated the fifth anniversary of the founding of their order by attending service at Emmanuel Church. They made a gallant show as they marched to the church headed by the band and Canton. An excellent sermon was delivered by the Rev. A. E. Hubly.

40 YEARS AGO

April 29th, 1897.

Messrs. W. H. Biggar, M.P.P., and Mr. D. R. Keenan of this city were in Toronto yesterday to interview the Government regarding the opening of an assay office at Belleville. They presented a letter from the Mayor in which the offer was made to provide a building free of cost; the Government to grant $2,000.00 towards outfitting the office and taking care of the maintenance of the same. The Cabinet promised to give the matter early attention.

Mr. Morden Bird of Stirling was in town today.

Dr. Jones of Marmora was a visitor in the city today.

Mr. Andrew Denike left today for Copperville, Mich.

Mr. William Matheson left today for Boston and New York.

Mr. Henry Hinnidge of Montreal, formerly of Belleville, was in the city yesterday.

50 YEARS AGO

April 29th, 1887.

The cricket club will meet this evening at the office of Pope and Fenwick.

The annual meeting of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club will be held next Wednesday evening.

At the annual meeting of the Belleville Bowling Club the following officers were elected: President, Charles Lavis; Vice-President, E. Bell; Secretary-Treasurer, D. B. Robertson; Lawn Committee, James Gordon, Jr., and Wm. Webster. Mr. A. McAllister was elected a member of the club. The first game will be played on May 4th. The treasurer's report showed a balance on hand of $26.00.

Mr. W. J. Post has purchased the fixtures and leased the hotel premises of Mr. B. Trusloch at the lower bridge. Hereafter he will cater to his friends at this convenient stand and guarantees the same satisfaction that he gave in the past. (Advt.)

Mr. Charles Wilkins of this city, fishery inspector, deposited 300,000 white fish in the Bay of Quinte yesterday.

Little Benny's Note Book

The Mystick 3, being me and Puds Simkins and Leroy Shooster, was having a secret meeting around the lam post and I had a good one, saying, Hay, I'll tell you a good one. lets have a no laffing contest, and the feral fellow that says a word after the mystick signal is a old woman and gets the lam.

Meening a bump some place with everybody's knee, and Puds and Leroy said okay and I slapped my hands 3 times, being the mystick signal, and we started to make 3 sines to each other instead of laffing, and Puds spoke up the same as saying, Hello fellows, what's doing, where's the other fawk, he said.

Me and Puds and Leroy just stood our ground and pointing all different directions without saying anything, and Shorty said, Aw, you're all crazy, what's a use fawking to you guys?

And he kept on going and us fellows kept on making faces and motions to each other and having a swell time not fawking, and some man stopped going passed, saying, Does one of you boys know where the Snowflake Laundry is?

Me and Puds and Leroy all shaking our heads yes and waving up the street and over to the rite, meening 2 blocks up and one over, and the man said, Well, there must be a deff and dumm institution around here. I was going to give one boy a chance to make a dime, but he has to be able to fawk.

THE Royal Road TO THE CORONATION

The Queen, a charming mother, and Princess Elizabeth

In the years that she was known to England and the empire as the Duchess of York and not as the future queen, Her Majesty made the first and foremost interest of her life the welfare of her family and the upbringing of her two daughters, Queen of England now, with Princess Elizabeth, her elder daughter, the heir presumptive to the throne, and skilled perhaps scarcely to follow in the footsteps of her namesake of centuries ago, the task of rearing her growing children has become an even more vital problem to Queen Elizabeth.

A royal mother faces many difficult problems that do not come to the average mother, but throughout the empire Queen Elizabeth is known for one outstanding characteristic, it is for her ancestry and her birth. Reared in a Scottish family, she was taught early the many duties of a housewife and all that is implied in the job of building a home. When she became the wife of a king's son, her entry to the royal circle did not take from her the deep respect and love she had acquired for home life and from then until the day she became the queen she has been an example to the world. As queen her duties increase manifold with the spotlight more than ever upon this simple, charming, Scottish girl and the household under her guidance.

The little princess was only a few months old when her parents left England for their first extended empire tour and the young mother was separated from her child for six busy months.

Queen Mary took the supervision of the royal infant, who already the brightest jewel in British royal treasure, to loyal thousands under the British flag, and the queen mother has had much to do with Elizabeth's training.

It's said that the queen is a strict, if kindly, mother; there is no spoiling of the two princesses. Her Majesty appreciates deeply the place they must fill in later life and governs her household accordingly. She herself taught Princess Elizabeth and later Princess Margaret Rose their alphabets and the first stemwinding lessons as well as the nursery ballads and stories that every child loves, and joined in their little problems and their pastimes as they grew older.

With a multitude of duties making calls upon her time, the duchess, and now the queen, finds time for the greatest job of all—building a family that has become an example in home life to the empire.

STIRLING

CITIZENS DECIDE ON PLAYGROUNDS AS A MEMORIAL

Coronation Day Program Outlined at Community Meeting

HONOR BRIDE-TO-BE

Miss Evelyn Drewery Presented With Useful Gifts

Stirling, April 28 (Special)—At a meeting of Stirling business men held in the Agricultural Hall on Wednesday evening it was decided that Stirling Village would observe the Coronation Day in the form of a celebration with a parade and fitting ceremony along with the organizing of a group of community projects to be started forward to completion as permanent memorials to that great day itself. Several projects were put forth as constructive to the community by citizens present. The final decision, however, were as follows: The erection of a public playground for the younger children of the village to be fully equipped with sand boxes, slides, teeters and swings, etc. to become a centre of organized play supervised by adults and to keep the children out of the streets and out of danger. The other project decided on is the commencement at an early date in the cleaning up of the community pond with a view to making it fit for use and also the cleaning up of the creek which drains into the pool. This pool which was made possible through the generosity of Mr. Ira Gilbert a number of years ago, has fallen into disrepair. And the number of local children who learned to swim there speak for its value and it is hoped that the work will find it in much better condition for use than ever before.

To Hold Parade

It is expected that this function will begin with parade in which the local members of the Boy Scouts, Cubs, Brownies and Girl Guides and the Stirling Citizens' Band will take part. The parade is to be set off at the same time throughout the Empire and will be lighted. The Canadian Boy Scout Movement as an appropriate link, arrange the setting of each fire in all villages and towns as a symbol to His Majesty.

A good number of the village citizens were present at the meeting and heartily endorsed the entire Coronation Day plan for Stirling and projects set forth for the children.

The following committees were appointed: Parade Committee—James Lagrow, Grant Bell, W. H. Ross, Ernest Bell, W. J. Baker, Dr. H. H. Algar, Maurice Bell, W. C. Wilson, J. A. Kofford, Rev. A. S. McDonnell and Rev. Father Fraser. Publicity Committee—F. F. Ellis, J. B. Belshaw, Thos. Graham. Swimming Pool Committee—H. E. Eggleton, F. T. Hulin, Frank Stapley, D. A. Parkhill and C. S. Bailey. Beacon Committee—O. A. Wells, J. Good, A. Hadley and Arthur Duncan. Each of the above mentioned committees formulated for the purpose of getting things under way were given the right to add to their number. With cooperation of the citizens these projects should be carried to completion with rapidity and without great expense.

Large Audience Enjoy Fine Concert Rendered by St. Paul's Y. P. U.

The church parlours at St. Paul's United Church were filled to the doors on Tuesday evening of this week when the young people of the congregation were responsible for the presentation of one of the finest programs given in Stirling for some time. The main feature of the evening was the presentation of a Biblical play entitled "And He Came Unto His Father". The play, which was a dramatization of "The Prodigal Son" was exceptionally well given by a group of talented artists. Preceding the play an excellent program of musical numbers and reading, with a short recital by the Madoc ladies' quartette made a fitting prelude to the treat in store for the large gathering. Miss Marion Daniels of Foxboro, Misses Irene and Lenore Tucker and Miss Marion of Harold were also guest artists.

The rooms were re-arranged to present the play and a temporary stage was erected at the north end with flood lights used to advantage to give a twilight tone to the setting of an eastern exterior scene. Miss Mary Hulin, President of the organization presided over the program in a brief address and Rev. W. T. Rodd led in prayer. The first musical number on the program Jimmie Armstrong offered a selection on the guitar, which by the number was a soprano solo by Mrs. C. Macklin with Miss Ruby Curtis at the piano. Mrs. Hayton, well-known elocutionist of Hawdon gave a humorous reading entitled "Modern Best" which was followed by a group of piano solos given by Mrs. H. Moore. At this time the Madoc ladies quartette was introduced and their offering included several southern songs presented in fine style. Their interpretation of old darkie songs and the splendid harmony of their voices revealed talented training.

Those taking part were Mrs. J. W. Hulin, Mrs. Jones, Miss Bellaney and Mrs. Ashley, solo numbers offered by Mrs. Hulin and Mrs. Jones of the group were also very much enjoyed. Another musical treat of the evening was the group of vocal duets offered by Miss Irene Tucker and Mr. Eric Chapelle, two local artists who are becoming well known for their musical ability, while Laura Tucker provided the accompaniment at the piano. Miss Marion Daniels of Foxboro delighted the audience with her presentation of a reading in broken Dutch.

Play is Well Given

At this time the presentation of a sacred play entitled "And He Came Unto the Father," a dramatization of the Prodigal son was enacted by a group of the members of the Young People's Union selected as a prize winning drama by the Drama League of America. It was both entertaining and educational, setting forth the famous story in an entirely new way. Biblical drama is listed among the most difficult work to present and local artists remarkable success in the first attempt in the work. Each of the actors portrayed vividly the character they represented, and the costumes and stage arrangements were greatly to the play.

Cast of Characters

The Father—H. E. Hulin.

Benjamin (the Prodigal)—Charles Drewry.

Mordical (the older brother)—George Duffin.

Joseph (a man servant)—Rev. W. J. Scott.

Deborah (another servant)—Thelma Renwick.

Kofford acted as chairman for the evening and introduced the various numbers, including musical selections and contests. Ross Scott also contributed several numbers in his songs.

At this time the gathering was called to order and the object of the gathering made plain by the chairman, the presentation of an occasional chair; a large table lamp, bridge lamp and end table was presented to the honored guest. The address

We, your friends of St. Andrew's have met here tonight to do honor to you on this the eve of the happiest event of your life. We have come to try to show you something of how we have appreciated you in the past and express to you our very best wishes for your future.

Your faithfulness and willingness to help at times have been an example to those of us, who have been inclined to be less faithful. The effect had none the less certain influence of such a conduct as ours can never be fully estimated.

Your friends from every organization of the church wish to show their deep appreciation of your faithful services and ask you to accept these gifts. Trusting that God's richest blessing may continue to be on you and yours in your new life. Signed Gena Spry and Ella Casemen.

Tuesday evening Miss Drewry was also presented with a lovely bedroom lamp by the sisters of the Laurel Rebekah Lodge No. 211 and the following address read.

Dear Sister Evelyn Drewry:

Having learned of your approaching marriage, we the members of Laurel Rebekah Lodge No. 211 fail that we could not let this occasion pass without expressing in some tangible form our sincere friendship and wishes for a happy and prosperous future.

We truly believe that the step you are about to take marks one of happiest times in the life of a man or woman and we trust that your home may be blessed with much and prosperity. We are glad that you are not leaving our midst as we will be able to meet you often and still enjoy your friendship.

Cadet Inspection

Capt. Panet, Provincial Inspector of Cadet Corps, was in Stirling on Monday and expressed great pleasure with the showing of the local cadet corps, definitely stating that the initial honours were carried out in the most efficient manner in the history of the Stirling Corps. The most striking of the exercises in his belief was the march past, which was exceptionally well done. At 10 a.m. formation for parade was made at the Armouries and under command of the following group of officers they marched to Memorial Park where after a brief ceremony was performed in true military fashion before the Cenotaph: Commanding Officer James Ward; Lieuts. Eddie Cacopardi, Carl Mumby; Sergts. Leroy Johnson, Robt. Jones, Roy Juby and Arthur Sheridan. Returning to the canpus the boys displayed practical training in their display of physical training exercises.

SHOWERS GIVEN YOUNG COUPLE

Mr. And Mrs. Arthur Calvert Are Presented With Lovely Gifts

On Monday evening last, about one hundred friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Robbins to honour the recent bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Calvert.

The popular young couple were showered with good wishes and many beautiful and useful gifts. The C.G.I.T. and Pathfinder class also presented the happy couple with an address and a beautiful cut glass salad bowl and silver serving spoons, and a cut glass relish dish. Though taken completely by surprise, they thanked their friends for the lovely gifts and good wishes.

Delicious refreshments were served and a very happy evening closed with the singing of "For they are Jolly Good Fellows."

Following is a copy of the address presented to the young couple.

Centenary, April 19th, 1937.

Dear Arthur and Ila:

We, your friends are glad of this opportunity to do honor to you both who have been such a valuable asset to our church and community.

Indeed it gives us very great pleasure to gather here tonight.

In all our activities, Arthur, you have active parts and have given unceasingly of your time and talents, in the Young People's Union, the choir, and earnest workers in the Sunday School, and Ila, a staunch supporter and member of our C.G.I.T. and of course we all know Art's good influence on the boys.

We are glad to know you are going to be with us still, and we hope you will be happy and successful in your new home.

We are glad to know you are going to be with us still, and we hope you will be happy and successful in your new home.

To remind you of this happy day in your future life, and also of your friends eg ask you to accept these gifts as a slight expression of our regard for you.

Signed on behalf of the Pathfinder Class, Gordon Garrison, E. Bonnar and Edwin Hart.

Dear Ila and Arthur:

We, as a community have often gathered in this home in the past, but never before have we met on such a happy occasion as this, when we meet to extend to you our very best wishes for a long and happy married life.

We hope and trust your marriage does not mean that we will lose either of you from our community, as we have grown to love you and have always helped in all branches of our church and we are glad to know that these ties will not be severed.

We hope that these tokens of our love and appreciation, Arthur, will help to cause to bring back to both of you happy memories of your many friends, Centenary friends.

Signed on behalf of the community: Mrs. Hart, Mrs. R. Thrasher, Mr. J. Thrasher.

The meeting opening April 15th, Miss Lena Sutherland entertained the Junior Auxiliary at her home 3rd of Sidney for Mr. and Mrs. Calvert, also the popular young bride and groom.

After an evening of fun the friends gathered around a large white bell, holding streamers attached to the clapper. The bride and groom were requested to all under the bell, which they did with ease. Many lovely and useful presents were received, and much merriment caused when each were opened.

Delightful refreshments were served. Following is a copy of address presented to the young couple:

Dear Ila and Arthur:

We the young people of this neighborhood and your friends, have gathered here this evening to show our appreciation of your marriage which is just past.

We expected of your marriage with feelings of pleasure, and we are sincere in our wishes for a very happy married life. Having been a helpmate worth having to all phases of community life and we feel sure that you will be a helpmate worth while in the married life of Arthur, we indeed appreciate your efforts as well, and we feel that you will make a good husband and a serving of a good wife. We are very glad to have you with us still, and we hope you will continue in our community work, and so much that you are worthy of much more, we ask you to accept those gifts as a slight token of our esteem and appreciation we have for you, and we hope they will be useful.

We join again in wishing you all the happiness and success there is.

Signed on behalf of your young friends: Lena Sutherland, Bernice Ray, Dorothy Thrasher, Eleanor Rohlin and Phyllis May.

Shortt, secretary of the Y.M.C.A. congratulated the various group champions and members of the players for their fine display of sportsmanship during the playing season. "You boys have done a fine thing and enjoying the game, however, should realize the service by the leadership that is provided by the Kiwanis Club and the Y.M.C.A., to say nothing of the financial assistance, that makes your play possible along with the conventional supervision. The individual player should keep in mind he is looked to by the Ki-Y League and especially those adult members who give freely of their time and efforts to provide clean adequate sport for the boys of Belleville, pointed out Mr. Shortt, who subsequently announced that entries in the Ki-Y softball groups were now being accepted at the "Y" and schedules would be ready next week.

Kiwanians Frank Folwell and Jack McVeigh made presentations of the senior and juvenile championships, respectively, while Godfrey Scott presented Allen Thomas with the champion club of the Bantam section. Another Kiwanian, basketball mentor, coach and player, presented the crests to the winning cage teams. Following the addresses and presentations refreshments of ice cream and cake were served. HUSTLING LEAFS RULE ROOST IN INTERNATIONAL

Win Sixth Straight Game From Jersey Giants 8-1

DAVIS HURLS WELL

Allows Only One Run, Fanned Six And Walked Two

By The Associated Press

Dan Howley's young, hustling Toronto Maple Leafs were undisputed rulers of the International baseball League today in what looked to be more important was that bowling second to have one-half of his pitching problem solved in the person of Woodrow Wilson Davis.

Davis, a tall, lean righthander making his first starting assignment in the loop, held Jersey Giants to six hits as the Leafs won their sixth straight game 8-1 yesterday, while Newark Bears were dropping their game to Buffalo 7-2.

Davis, who won 17 games and lost three for Cordele in the Georgia-Florida league last season, was settled on in trouble as he fanned six and walked two batsmen. He allowed no runs until the eighth inning, when the little Giants put together a double and single for their lone counter.

Lusty Clouting

Meanwhile his mates, led by Tommy Heath and Jim Walsh, pounded across six runs in the last three innings to clinch the contest. Heath connected for three hits, two doubles and a single, while Walsh also slammed out two doubles.

Buffalo Bisons, defending champions, put an end to the Newark five-win streak in a battle of home runs. Charlie Keller, Bisons' outfielder, belted for the circuit in the first inning with two Bears on base to give Newark all their runs. The Bisons more than made up for that first inning with three solo Tyler's four-baser, that put the Bisons ahead. Ollie Carnegie and Ray Pepper also poled homers for the victors. Bob Kline limited the Bears to five hits.

Rebbit Maranville's Montreal Royals finally scored their first victory of the season defeating the still winless Baltimore Orioles 10-3 in the only game played on the day. The Rochester-Syracuse game was rained out.

TEN STRIKE IN SIGNING CLARK

Scotch Wrestler to Head Card of Outstanding Mat Men

In signing George "Dandier" Clark, Scottish heavyweight champion, to meet John Katan in the main bout of next Tuesday's wrestling show, promoter Jack Corcoran of the Queensbury Club has secured a wrestler whose services are just as keenly in demand as those of the world champion.

Clark has been a positive sensation in America and right now is in the same position as was that other Old Country star, Dan McLeod, when he first hit the world title. Clark, undefeated in the British Isles and Europe, soon made a name for himself in America, so much so that his first important match in Boston attracted a gate of $35,000.

Not only is Clark a big powerful and capable wrestler, but he is extremely colorful and therefore one of the great crowd-pleasers in the sport.Right now he is being talked of as the logical opponent for Dean Detton who claims he leave California as soon as some one to defend his world title.

Clark will make a hit with local fans. He will become popular on his merits but he will have all the more support by reason of the fact that Katan incurred the dislike of the fans by the rough and ready methods he used to defeat Ted Key here on April 22.

An outstanding semi-final bout brings Charlie Strack, the Boston Irish villain against Henri Piers, the Dutch tittist.

HOLD REGATTA ON CORONATION DAY

Belleville Yacht Club Will Assist Picton on July 1

Punt sailing will be ushered in on the Bay of Quinte by the Belleville Yacht Club on afternoon of Coronation Day, the club deciding to honor Coronation Day with a special series of punt and dinghy races on May 12th, in the afternoon with the regular season schedule of racing commencing on May 24th and extending to Labor Day, as in former years.

The Belleville Yacht Club held a general meeting last night and drafted other minor changes in their by-laws, which endorsed the keeping abreast with the game as well.

President Maurice Gallaghan occupied the chair as secretary Claude Gifts read the minutes and read the correspondence, that included items from the Picton and Kingston Yacht Clubs. An invitation from the Picton Y.C. to give their boats for patrol duty and for officials' boats for their Coronation Cup race this fall summer, was accepted by the Belleville Yachters, who also voted to provide sailing craft of all classes for the Picton meet as in former years.

Accept Challenge Trophy

Correspondence from the Kingston Yacht Club revealed that club was in possession of a Dingby silver trophy, donated by the Kingston Club to the Bay of Quinte Dinghy Club. The Kingston Club has anxious to return the cup to the Belleville Club, as a challenge dinghy trophy, and their invitation was accepted with regret.

Two new trustees were added to the board of the club, making the total five, including the sitting Mayor. The members of the board of the club are—Mayor Arnott, President Gallaghan, Secretary Gifts, Aldermen E. J. Baldree and Harry Flagler. The members present voted to co-operate to the fullest extent with the Belleville Beaches' proposed summer regatta programme.

In the future only members of the Belleville Aquatic Club will be permitted to participate in any line of sports whether it be land or aquatic sports. The members must be in good standing.

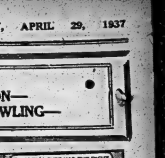
Farmer Refuses To Leave Stock In Flooded Barn

Bothwell, Ont., April 29—(CP)—Farmer Fred Menard, 70, refused two horses floating on a raft in the barn, his pigs and chickens on a table in the kitchen and most of their Helmer farmhouse with him, waited today for the Detroit-Chatham highway in Ontario to subside.

Menard refused to be rescued last night. He called to neighbors from a window of his flood-marooned home to take their boat away—but'd stay with his animals.

When the Canadian River flood swirled up, about Helmer's farmhouse, four miles from Bothwell, neighbors pulled a boat over the two horses were standing in 25 inches of water and the floods were rising higher and higher into the barn.

The neighbors scouted about and found a raft instead. These were lashed together. The horses were helped on the raft. They'll have to stay on the floating platform in the high barn till the floods recede.



Helmer said no, he wouldn't leave the farm. What would the pigs and chickens do, alone the horses, do? He had to about his third horse early in the evening. It was sick and had a broken leg.

His brother Charley was rescued from the house in a boat. But not Harry. What did he mean, asked the neighbors, by shoulling from his roof top for help and then turning it down?

"I wanted help for the horses," yelled back Harry, and went back to his pigs and chickens.

Bothwell is 45 miles South-West of London.

A galaxy of hockey celebrities that will include the roster of two provincial championship hockey teams, members of the O.H.A. executive and likely a delegation of Toronto Maple Leaf hockey stars headed by the dynamic Frazer "King" Clancy, are slated to be the guests of interest at the Kinsmen Motor Show at the Armouries tonight, "Sports night" is what President Norm Caldwell has billed tonight's gathering but in reality the feature of the evening will be the presentation of O.H.A. trophy and medals to the Belleville Redmen champions of the intermediate "B" series.

In order that the affair will be more than willing to do the honors, President Garbutt will carry on a rapid-fire question conversation with the visiting celebrities, that includes "King" Clancy, Bob Gracie, Harvey "Busher" Jackson of the Toronto Maple Leafs and "Dit" Clapper of the Boston Club. Although these puck artists of note will be interviewed, naturally the centre of attraction will be when President Alex. Sedgwick, of Toronto and Billie Hewitt, secretary of the Association, present the O.H.A. medals and trophy to Skipper Eddie Thomas' athletes. The presentation ceremonies will be the order of the evening and it will be a grand opportunity for the sport fans in general to add their public feelings of congratulations to the champions by swelling the crowd at the Armouries tonight.

Another honored guest tonight will be George Gross, home town boy and Canadian motorcycle champion rider, who will be introduced on the ice and he also will wish him "bon voyage" upon the eve of his leaving for England. George will represent Belleville and Canada at the forth-coming world's championship motorcycle meet on the Isle of Man next month. Then the Belleville "A" championship, the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" will also be introduced, so it looks like a big night for sportsmen at the Armouries.

The management of the Belleville arena is negotiating to hold a "Scotch night" in connection with the wrestling bout at the Arena next Tuesday night when George Clark, Scottish heavyweight champion meets John Katan, former Canadian titleholder. As he promised, Promoter Jack Corcoran is planning to this city the top-notchers, when it comes to the wrestling game.

Weather permitting the ring of the Belleville baseball league will be heard in the vicinity of the Cornerstone campus tonight when the Belleville Intermediate softball practice of the season. "We intend to take nothing rather easy for the first few nights. The boys will get into shape in the batting-men will limber up and work the winter kinks out of their arms. We are making every effort to secure candidtes before we get down to serious practice at a Park grounds," stated Coach Woodley today. As the league season opens at home on Victoria Day, they have but three weeks in which to round in form.

We understand the Tweed softball club is quite anxious to again affiliate with the Belleville Softball Association, but retain an O.B.A. "B" rating for games on the Point Anne interests. One year ago now the local softball moguls were high and dry regarding sponsors, when suddenly Bill Todd, representing the Tweed Blowes came to their rescue and fully equipped the home club. Last season Tweed went on to win the provincial O.A.S.A. championship. Today Mr. Todd has practically been deserted by those he befriended and sponsored one year ago. Short is really hard to understand at times.

Do you remember away back when Babe Ruth was making names for himself as pitcher and home-run hitter with Boston Red Sox. He was just 19 years ago today that the American League club signed a $100,000 offer for his services. Later going to right field, Ruth joined New York in 1920 and for 15 years with the Yankees played with Boston Braves until his retirement June 2, 1935.

The Belleville Yacht Club voted to hold impromptu sailing races on Coronation Day at a meeting of the club held last night, all classes of punts and dinghies to be invited in the day's programme. These races will not be counted in the regular season racing, however, the opening of the sailing season rounded out as the Queen's, Victoria, Day and terminating with the club's gala sports day on Labor Day next fall. The Inter-Lake Yachting Club agreed to co-operate with the Belleville group in the proposed Belleville Beaches regatta, to be staged simultaneously in summer and also accepted an offer to assist in the Gold Cup power boat contest staged by the Picton Yacht Club. The local sailors will also do their part in the way of craft to compete in the sailing races at Picton, President Gallaghan intimated today, however.

Something new and undoubtedly a novelty in this part of the province will be presented at the Belleville Collegiate on Saturday when the Canadian Intercollegiate gymnastic competition will be centre of attraction. The bringing of this unique exhibition of mass bar, pyramid and general floor gymnastic to Belleville was conceived by George Laughlin, physical instructor at the B.C.I. & V.S. "If we can put over this gymnastic exhibition in a big way, I firmly believe it will pave the way towards the Provincial senior interscholastic championships next winter, that is if the artificial ice plant is returned to its former arena," Mr. Laughlin today. Gymnastic teams from many parts of the province will compete here on Saturday morning and afternoon, although this is something new to local lovers of athletics, gymnastics are of great importance in the building of our youth, while the work of the contestants is not only interesting but thrilling at times.

Dapper Dan Howley's Leafites are undoubtedly the surprise team of the International League, having won six and lost one, to date this season and are leading the league standings. Dick Maxwell and his Toronto henchmen should be given a real welcome and fullest benefit in their opening day home-stand on Friday next to present the league leaders next week.

During the Sunday School hour Miss Carmel May of Bellefonte played a violin solo that was very much enjoyed by all.

The play "An Old-Fashioned Mother," was put on by the Centenary Young People's Society on Friday night and was very successful, each character taking their part exceptionally well. They were assisted in their training by Miss Johnson, and characters were introduced by the Centenary teacher, Mr. Bonter, who deserves much credit for the success of the play. FORTY STUDENTS STAGE 'WALK-OUT'

Claim Grievance But Do Not State Its Nature

The first "walk out" strike in the history of Belleville occurred shortly after one-thirty today when forty students of the Special Commercial class of the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School left their classroom and walked out in a body after registering for the afternoon session.

Leaving in good order, the students made their way to Victoria Park, where in apparent good spirits they enjoyed the warm afternoon sun.

Approached by a reporter shortly after their arrival, the students refused point-blank to state the nature of their grievance.

There were no recognised leaders apparent in the group. They were in the best of spirits and appeared to enjoy the situation.

Repeated, round-about questioning elicited the information that the "walk-out" was the culmination of a condition which had been in existence for some time. "We have had this in mind for some time," said a pert little miss. "We intended coming out yesterday, but decided to have it until today."

Pressed for the nature of the grievance, the pleasantries steadfastly refused to "talk". It is there all right," another fellow-student said, "and tomorrow morning if it is still there when we go back to school, we will walk out again."

In answer to a question the pupils stated that the principal had nothing to do with the teaching staff of the institute.

"We are not doing it for the sake of any individual member of the class for something else has happened to him or her," said one, "it is a collective grievance, and one which may affect the whole school."

The students, in happy mood, enjoyed it hale and hearty this afternoon.

When interviewed by The Ontario Intelligencer this afternoon, H. J. Allin, chairman of the Board of Education, stated that he had knowledge or intimation of any trouble. Mr. A. B. Rogers, vice-chairman of the School Management Committee, refused to comment on the matter stating "it was news to me". Principal P. C. MacLaurin and J. R. Bowerman, secretary of the Board of Education, referred the press to the chairman of the School Management Committee, without commenting.

SCENIC DRIVE URGED BY EXPERT ALONG BEACH AREA

J. F. Clarke of Ontario Department of Agriculture Presents Report

NEED FOR TREES

Area Lends Itself in Remarkable Way to Park Development, He Says

Impressions gained from his inspection of the new civic bathing beach being fostered to completion along the shore of the Bay of Quinte south of the city by numbers of the newly chartered Bay of Quinte Beach Association, by J. F. Clarke of this city by John F. Clark of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto, and Provincial Horticultural Societies, Toronto, is contained in a full report submitted today by Mr. Clark to Reg. Moncrieff, president of the local beach association.

The visit to Belleville by Mr. Clark was made possible through the courtesy of the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, local member.

"It has been a pleasure to visit Belleville and inspect the section of the front immediately south from the Government dock. This area lends itself in a remarkable way to development as a park land," wrote Mr. Clark.

Scenic City Property

"It is beautifully situated and with a fine view over the water, and I strongly urge that the citizens of Belleville realize the importance of a wonderful opportunity to secure this property at this point.

"The first step would be to secure the land and then to plant it properly, following up with a suitable plan that might be carried out over a period of years.

"At present grading is essential and I am pleased to learn that it is proceeded with, using unemployed relief labor and contractors' help, nothing beach might be constructed by the same means, when the water is sufficiently warm to work with comfort.

Tree Use of Trees Favored

"In ornamentation, it is recommended that the use of trees be made, as this type of planting lives long and adds much to the beauty of the surroundings. They also lend themselves well in conjunction with walks, drives and roadways. The planting year sees an improvement in their appearance each year.

"The drawing of the property has been prepared by the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, with a request that a plan and planting scheme perpetual be forwarded to your address.

"It is a pleasure to address the local Rotary Club on May 10, when I hope to meet many Belleville, providing arrangements are made by Mr. Lewis (Alderman), in that connection I have already arranged to address the Kiwanis Club, Belleville, providing arrangements are made by Mr. Lewis (Alderman), in that connection with the above project.

"Further assistance will be gladly given.

John F. Clark."

BOY POSSESSES BRAND NEW DOG

Thirteen-Year-Old Lad is Happy in His New Possession

It's not such a great, cold world after all, as the result of the ophion of thirteen-year-old Garnet Gaines, today is known to the owner of a fine new dog. Garnet was a sad disillusioned lad a few days ago, his pet dog, Buster, had to be destroyed after having been accidentally run over by a motorist.

Garnet told his troubles to P.C. Evans, who in turn related the tale of Garnet's worldly troubles and story-heartedness to a local reporter. The story was published and judging from the number of telephone calls and personal calls received by Garnet, the people of Belleville and vicinity are far from heartless, and entertain feelings of brotherly love.

Dozens of calls were made offering Garnet a pet to replace his lost friend. Finally still others more tender-hearted brought valuable dogs and offered pets to Garnet's home for his serious consideration. Finally he selected a fine Scotch dog, presented to a resident of Canniffton.

The lucky lady, whose address she had run over Garnet's dog and who was reading news of the canine's condition after having provided the services of a veterinary, found the dog outside the heart-broken boy, only to find him in possession of a new dog and quite happy with no ill will in the matter of pets. The lady, too, was mindful of her previous promise to replace Buster with a new pet. If he elected to do so, she would motor into Garnet's unsuspecting hand and she already had one with him and wished him "lots of fun with his pet dog."

Now the proud possessor of a new dog and a bank account, little Garnet Gaines is the happiest boy in town and has a great faith in the whole world.

JUVENILES HELD FOR BREAK-INS

Fourteen Charges Will be Laid Against Three of Boys Police Say,

Following weeks of investigations, that at times were almost mystifying and at other times baffled the authorities completely baffled, six Belleville youths, who have been arrested in their respective school rooms yesterday and after being questioned by Detective Charles Beard, finally admitted they were responsible for committing the 12 different minor break-ins and robberies in the city.

Fourteen charges will be laid against three of the boys while two others have only admitted minor accessories to the burglaries on one occasion. Three will be dealt with by a special Juvenile Court to be held in Belleville tomorrow, H. J. Butler, K.C., on Friday afternoon.

The break-ins and robberies alleged to have been committed by the delinquent youths, who range in age from 12 to 15 years, will include the entering of Queen Street Public School, the premises where cash was stolen, burglaries at Ont. D. Barrage's home, Hollowday Street, and the Belleville Athletic Street, Mr. Drew's home on Bridge Street, numerous and two other minor offences of the same nature.

"Those youths were not confining their activities of breaking, entering and theft to any one area in the city, but rather had their plans laid carefully to cover many widely separated points, which naturally made their apprehension much more difficult," explained local police after their success of obtaining statements from the youths yesterday.

Nine different toasts were proposed, including one to the visiting speakers from Toronto and elsewhere. The dinner was of a high order and greatly enjoyed by all present. Without exception this event was considered the most successful enthusiastic Orange banquet ever held here, and the hall itself was beautifully decorated. Appropriate toasts were given to those who had sponsored the banquet.

PLOWED FIRST STRAW IN FORTY YEARS

For the first time in over forty years, a straw has been plowed under of Tyendinaga Township recently acquired by Mr. Harry Smith as a farm. It is a general being plowed for regular crops. Starting about two weeks ago on the spring plowing with four teams, Mr. Smith has set a record for early spring plowing in that section. About seventy acres of the almost virgin soil will be planted to rye and corn. It was related today by the local resident.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by director Bertha Dunn.

Another sharp selloff occurred yesterday under the leadership of Brazilian Traction, which reacted to a new low for some time on reports from Brazil of internal political trouble. The news from the South American Republic was not of such a nature as to bring about a break in the stock of Brazilian Traction, but the "Bitsy" condition of the public at the present time was in large measure responsible for the appreciable amount of nervous selling.

In the past month or so many traders have witnessed their paper profits disappearing and consequently have liquidated their holdings irrespective of price in order to salvage a portion of their profits. A number of adverse factors combined with several unfounded rumours have combined to bring about a situation of weakness that will have to run its course market-wise before definite change can be looked for.

Those who missed the bull market of the past few months are now being presented with the opportunity of acquiring some of the favorite stocks at prices not seen for the year. Stocks like Brazilian Traction, Consolidated Smelters, Noranda, International Nickel, Shawinigan, Steel of Canada, all leaders in their respective fields, are available at levels that a few months ago appeared cheap. In the interval, the economic situation has changed to a big extent thus making these securities many attractive than they have been in some time. The time to acquire equities is when the public is nervous or liquidating irrespective of values.

The opinion expressed in influential circles is that Brazilian Traction will declare a cash dividend some time next year in the amount being mentioned as probably 50 cents. Last year the company paid 30 cents in June and 40 cents at the year end.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE CLOSING

Toronto, April 29—(CP)— Senior Golds continued to display evidence of uneasiness about the gold situation, sinking down to new low ground the current movement today on the Toronto market while changing hands in fair volume. Losses up to three points were registered among the leaders. Base Metals were irregular with the weight of adjustments on the down side and Industrials broke into more than usual gains. The Western Oils were about the only element of strength in the list. An attempt to rally around mid-day resulted in a flattening out of buying sheery and the close was around the low for the day.

About 6,000 shares of Lake Shore changed hands with the price touching 167¼ for a loss of more than a point and Dome dropped to 83½, off more than 3 on a trade of about 1,000 shares. Hollinger was down to 11, and McIntyre to 33¼, both down ¾. In a point, Lamaque was posted of about 70 cents for O'Brien, 30 cents Kirkland Lake and 20 for Buffalo Ankerite. The market was off 10 to 25 for Braloree, Coniagarum, Mining Corporation and Base Metals.

Losses predominated in the beverages, steel, textile and food groups. Brazilian held a fractional gain and the close was up for Power Corporation, Shawinigan and Consumers Gas. Losses of a point or more were registered for Weston Pfd., Canada Bread, Canada Malting, Canadian Oil, Dominion Wire B, Steel of Canada, Dominion Textile and National Steel Car. Canada Cement was unchanged, dated in the red.

International Nickel churned about over a two point range on a trade of about 30,000 shares and closed around 56 for a small net gain. Rorands was up slightly. Marcon gains were boarded for Hudson Bay, Goldfields, Beauty Basin, Aldermac and Smelters.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, April 29 (AP)—A vigorous morning rally in today's stock market lifted leading issues fractions to around a point. Sensational fever cooled somewhat in the latter hours but the gains held.

Further unsettlement in markets abroad caused many Board Room customers to retire to the sidelines in the afternoon and extreme advances were pared or erased near the final hour. Activity died down appreciably. Transfers were at the rate of 1,900,000 shares.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, April 29—Declines on the local potato market were reported yesterday as the movement of Quebec old stock being down. New potatoes are now being offered, with supplies available from Florida and the British West Indies. Other produce ruled generally steady. The butter market was quiet with some suggestions of an easier feeling although most quotations were given unchanged. Eggs were also steady. Poultry was firm. Receipts were 1,000 cases of eggs, 50 cases of butter and 313 boxes of cheese, exclusive of country receipts.

There were no sales on the Canadian Commodity Exchange. Butter was quoted in store lots as follows: No. 1 at 32 1-4c to 32 1-2c for Quebec fresh buyer's inspection, and 32c to 32 1-4c for Quebec fresh 92 score. In the open market No. 1 in cartons, or 1-1. lots was 34 1-4c to 34 1-2c, mostly 34 1-4c.

WATER SUPPLY

Chatham today and officials expressed anxiety the water supply may be discontinued by the flood. Thames river rose with its mouth had risen three feet since midnight.

Dr. A. E. Northwood, Medical Officer of Health, advised residents to boil all water. He made the plea after Lindsay, Ont., had cut, started dumping raw sewage into the Thames river because of failure to operate its sewage plant, as the source of Chatham's water supply.

Four schools were closed today releasing 2,800 school children who were among the most interested of the spectators who gathered at vantage points on bridges and shore of the rising river.

Sewers Block Up

The collegiate was closed because sanitary sewers were backing up into the basement, the Vocational School was closed because, it is situated children might be marooned there in the event the flood continues to rise, McKeough Public School was closed because of back up in sewer facilities, and Central Public School closed because many of the children reside on the low lying far side of the flooded McGregor Creek which has closed off all traffic leading south from the city to number three highway.

River Up 26 Feet

The river here continued to rise three inches an hour and was estimated to have risen more than 26 feet, "We'll be all right here at the present high mark if rise at a rate of another foot or so," said Thomas Kingston, city manager and superintendent of the water works plant. "The river was rising fairly fast at 4:oni Bridge, about 15 miles east of here, but two and one-half hours ago the flood started to subside. They expected there at 10 o'clock it would reach its height within an hour."

Milk Runs Short

Reeve W. McKenzie of Thamesville said over the long-distance telephone, that the river rose an hour inche, since midnight. "It is now about three inches an hour," he said. "There has been no privation among the people as yet, but some of the people is high despite the damage caused. There is no shortage of food, although there is a shortage of milk. We appealed to the London Red Cross for aid and it is seeking an official here, by motor car. We met here this with a boat s/ number 21 highway."

Keeping Furnace Going

Officials at Chatham General Hospital endeavored to keep the flood waters out of the basement so as to keep heat on in the building. "The basement where the boilers are is about 14 feet under the level of the street," said H. J. Grosch, chairman of the Board. "We have used sandbags around the boilers, we have some small pumps in operation and we have a large pump coming by noon to keep the boilers going."

"We have to keep those boilers going so we can have a warm operating room in the event of emergency operations and in case we do fail to keep the boilers going, we have arrangements with the Hydro to have priority on the use of power for electric heaters."

Many families who had refused the aid of the fire department last night, because apart from apartments rented by Orval Scane, and the rescue was made when firemen fastened a large boat to a fire hose and rope and they helped place them in the boat which was towed to higher ground. One of the two men rescued was ill.

YOUTH BEFRIENDED THEN STEALS CAR

A glaring case of ingratitude was reported to Belleville police on Tuesday by W. A. Williams, 44 Yeoman Street, who after providing a wandering youth with a night's lodging and nourishment, said he had been robbed of a $600 dollar bill.

Mr. Williams informed the authorities he had befriended a "kindly looking" youth and provided him with a bed and breakfast. He came to my door and asked for lodging, and to eat and I gave him a warm bed and his breakfast. I found a ten-dollar bill missing from my wallet" bemoaned Mr. Williams.

A description of the ungrateful youth was supplied the police, however and his whereabouts are being sought.

BROKEN-HEARTED

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

Anne could not sleep. She prepared for bed, she got into bed, but she could not sleep. A thousand times she heard the echo of Nancy's clear, childish laugh, a thousand times she heard the accompanying murmur of Stanley's deep voice, a thousand times the scene on the lawn re-captivated itself. She was sick of thinking, of remembering, and could not stop.

"It's not fair, it's not right," she whispered over and over in the darkness.

Once she dragged herself from bed, pulled on a negligee and went again to the window. Nearly morning now, the house wrapped in silence. She leaned her head on the sill and stared out at the bay, moon lighted and like a sheet of silver. The trees stood still and inky black, their shadows on the whitened grass precise and definite, the gravelled paths were bleached by moonlight. Kajimbe were shrilling and somewhere far off a dog howled, was silent, howled.

The girl's heart ached, ached. . . . What could have changed Stanley so? Her wretched thoughts returned to the summer house, to the Stanley who had fumbled with the ribbon on her gown, who had spoken so nervously, so humbly, who had looked down into her eyes. Her thoughts retraced the evening bravely from the moment of John Flander's interruption so the moment when she had seen that different Stanley, that Stanley lost to her, on the lawn with Nancy. What could have changed him . . . Nancy . . . who . . . but Nancy?

Bitterly she regretted her foolishly chivalrous protection of the other girl. If only she could have shown Nancy to Stanley as she had seen her, Nancy, in the arms of Richard Graeme, jetting in a parked motor car, no better than one of the maids on the place. He admired her, he was amused and charmed by her, a girl who had outraged hospitality, who had used his home shamefully, his mother, their confidence in her, to cloak, a vulgar intrigue.

What was the good of striving to be honest and decent, Anne pondered bitterly. What was the good when the Nancys of this world smile their baby smiles and even men like Stanley fall before them? Nancy, with her flirty heart and her soft, grasping baby hands, why couldn't he see? How could he be blind?

Thoroughly chilled, Anne flung herself on the bed. She fell into a fitful slumber, but Nancy arrogant, triumphant, danced through her dreams, made her toss, sigh, turn, sigh again. In the morning weary and languid and heartsick she crept from bed. The day stretched before her as an endless humiliation; To go downstairs, to accept smilingly Nancy's smile, her unconscious patronage, to watch Stanley with Nancy, to accept what crumbs of attention he might bestow her way, it was too much—she could not bear it.

But she must. Listlessly she selected a frock to wear at breakfast. One thing she was sure of, she was not on the noon train and pay the cost of Stanley's power to hurt her further. What could have changed him so?

Her bag packed, she reached a sudden wild decision. She would leave, but before she left Stanley should hear of Nancy's escapade. Let him decide then whether Nancy was the charming, irresponsible child he thought her to be. Let him decide then! Nancy had not the drop of sportsmanship, why should she, Anne, deceive herself by praising of sportsmanship, of chivalry of pride? She was fighting for her very life.

No use. She could not do it. She was the person who was—certain things were right and decent, other things were not. If Stanley were blind, then circumstance, chance, would have to open his eyes. She, Anne, could not, would not in such a way make herself the arbiter of Nancy's destiny, of Stanley's, of her own.

She felt momentarily better, believed even, because that was what she wanted to believe, that things might not be so bad as she imagined them to be. There might yet be a chance, Stanley had lifted her, he had rested her here, he had been devoted and interested. Might he not be again?

Somebody tapped at the door. It was Joyce, pretty and bright-eyed in a scarlet frock, wondering if Anne were ready to go down to breakfast. Anne was not. Joyce came on inside to perch on the bed, to yawn, to comment on the weather and then unconsciously to confirm in Anne what Anne had so feared. It occurred casually. Anne was in the closet picking over her shoes when Joyce said:

"Have you heard the dirt?"

Anne felt that something was coming. She did not turn.

"What dirt?"

"Nancy and Stanley have made it up."

"Oh." Anne went on blindly fumbling with her shoes. White or beige? White—her frock was white, but beige would do. She had known this all along that she knew it would happen, that she had expected. Joyce's voice rippled along:

"They fell out awhile back. Stanley was jealous over a man that Nancy picked up some night at the club. Nancy swore it wasn't so, but, knowing Nancy, I'd bet it was. Anyway, I guess Stanley decided to forgive and forget."

"Forgive?" Anne's voice was hoarse and strained.

"Sure, that's the dirt, the row last night, and what a row! The night club person, whoever it was, was on the ground last night, you know, because Celestine, the maid on the floor, was looking in the direction of the row when all agog this morning, I suppose one shouldn't listen to servants' gossip, but—"

Joyce paused expectantly, half hoping Anne would interrupt, but when Anne said nothing she resumed:

"The gatekeeper saw this man, Grey or Graham, or something like that, reported to Mrs. Syre, and from what I hear, there was hell to pay. Mrs. Syre has always considered herself a social secret another, the two families have been so close. She was practically in mourning. She and Nancy and Stanley were locked in the library, and Celestine was on the outside with her ear at the keyhole. She didn't hear much, Anne—Nancy's wearing Stanley's ring this morning; decided then! Nancy had her first drop of sportsmanship, why should Anne understood. Understood that there had been no chance, no slightest chance from the first, understood that she had been from the beginning the lovely rose-tinted dream now crashing about her ears. Stanley, free, was a broken engagement, had been momentarily diverted by a little dance-hall girl—but as for anything serious! How could there have been anything serious? How could there have been anything serious when always in the back of his mind there had lingered the image of the other girl, the girl of his own class, the girl he loved in spite of everything?

Dimly she heard Joyce speak.

"You won't say anything about it, will you? Nancy asked me not to tell. They're keeping it a secret."

"No, I won't say anything." Anne turned at last, managed a glassed smile.

"Are you sick?" Joyce asked quickly, anxious at the other's pallor.

"It's just that I didn't sleep well." Anne straightened and fled to the bathroom. She was sick, sick with jealousy, with disappointment, with mortal hurt. But she did not cry. Once she started crying she knew there would be no stopping. Once begun, her tears would flow in endless rivers.

She dashed cold water into her face, washed her hands, dried them, washed them again, tried to remember that she must return to the bedroom, must go downstairs with Joyce, must rally the courage to hold out until the noon train. But always she was thinking Stanley, Nancy, Stanley, Nancy.

Scraps of once cherished conversations returned to torture her.

Stanley arguing that a woman should be sweet and pure, Stanley expressing his disgust at the cult of modern freedom; Stanley who had known from the beginning of Anne's love for him, Stanley who in the last analysis simply did not care. Love, founded on trust and mutual respect, he had talked of, and had returned to Nancy.

She remembered the Stanley who had felt an inward shrinking from Ray, who anyhow had had the excuse of love; she remembered the Stanley who had insisted that a girl should avoid even the appearance of evil. This same Stanley was willing now, eager, to take into his home Nancy's, eager to explain that Nancy didn't understand how things looked, to excuse her on the ground of too much money, too much leisure, too much freedom.

Were there two moralities. One for girls who worked in dance halls, in offices, in shops; another for girls who lived only for pleasures, for parties, for pretty clothes, for trips abroad?

When Anne re-entered the bedroom, her carefully rouged small face looking cool, her hair in shining scallops of her hair, Joyce noticed nothing amiss. Anne had herself well in hand now. She would not die thing through. Time enough afterward for suffering. Now she must see it through.

Breakfast was to be served on the lawn, a long table was set in the shade of a large oak tree, the gay pennons, cloth shapes, silver and glass and leaf shadow. It was nearly eleven o'clock, but the boys and girls on the lawn were still drowsy, flapping their way through Sunday papers, or lying supine, planning in a desultory fashion for the afternoon. Mrs. Syre and Anne appeared, a servant came out from the house with coffee and there was a general stir.

Anne saw Nancy. She was dimpling a ring which blazed on her engagement finger, her cheeks flushed, her eyes bright and dancing. At the moment Anne saw her she was numb. Stanley was not in the group. She watched it breaking up as couples haphazardly sought places at the table. John Flander hailed, claimed Joyce; an instant later Arch Sheets bobbed up at her elbow.

"How's to sit with me, beautiful?" "All right."

Where was Stanley? Before he saw her she saw him coming from the hall verandah hall, bareheaded, clad in loose flannels and the same scabby blazer he had worn when he met her at the station. He crossed the lawn, moved unhesitatingly upon them, squinting occasionally against the ardent sunlight, so handsome, so free, to her, a sudden wave of pain engulfed her. And still she had to speak to him.

"Be back in a minute," she promised Arch.

When Stanley caught her eye, he seemed to change, to become another person, but she met him bravely, to meet him, spoke steadily.

"Stanley—you've told me about you and Nancy."

Her words echoed oddly in the air, drowsy with the scent of trees and grass. Stanley looked at her quickly, oddly.

"Yes?"

"I wanted to be the first to congratulate you," she said clearly, with a proud lift of her head.

"That's nice of Anne."

He wasn't even a friend, this cold, smiling man, this polite, distinterested man. What could have changed him so?

"Breakfast's getting cold," Arch called.

"Coming."

For a long moment she continued to regard Stanley levelly, then her lips trembled; she wheeled suddenly and returned to Arch. The man scowled. He walked slowly to the table, crossed to the opposite end, and lowered himself into the chair that Nancy had saved for him. All through breakfast Anne kept up a light banter of conversation with Arch; all through breakfast in resplendent and hurt bewilderment she continued to wonder what could have changed Stanley so. She was sure that his avoidance of her glance was deliberate.

Toward the middle of the meal everyone began to talk of driving to the polo matches at Cedar Hurstbrook.

"You and Joyce can come in my car," Arch said, "and Flanders in some where." Arch settled Anne's plans.

She asked the opportunity to explain that he could drop her off at the station; she was taking the 12:01 to New York. Instantly he was argumentative.

"Last night you said—"

"That was last night. I'm simply got to get back to New York."

"Nancy, Joyce," Arch clamored above the general uproar. "Tell this young woman here that she's unreasonable. She insists that she's got to town on the noon train, pitching the party, in short. But I'm her can't get away with it."

Stanley's protests, delivered from across the table, were as emphatic as Arch's had been. He reminded her of her duty as a hostess, of the approaching delight of the polo matches, reminded her that she had promised to stay until evening instated that there was no reason for rushing off. Anne was still deserted. She knew that he did not care whether she left or stayed.

"I've got to get back to work", she said wearily. And thus the matter was ended.

LIFE MUST GO ON

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

Three weeks had passed since the house party. August beat boomed down Toronto. The city sweltered under the unbearable heat of summer, returned to its daily routine. Newspapers hopefully talked of incoming shows and concerts, and women returned back from vacations, gold and russet, chrysanthemums blazed in florists' windows, shoppers returned from Europe with their lovely spoils. The season's opening appeared on Avenue, society women planned for the Horse Show, and discussed over cups of tea arrangements for debutante balls. New York was definitely gayer and brighter.

Lobsaland bloomed lustily. Fall was the season there. The mail order had been redecorated, the Happy-town Boys' tuxedos had been shaken from moth balls, and the girls in a solemn little talk, had been told to do their hoeing, to go to it enough but not too far. Three little confessions, frightened and shy at first, had been, came to John the staff. Con beamed.

Usually June lured September in New York, the clear, right air in the Park, the sable and furs in the windows, the chestnut men with their whistling wagons, the expectant feeling of it all, the feeling that anything might happen, anything might be. This year she hated it, hated the promise that would not be fulfilled, hated Lobsaland.

Dancing, there night after night until she could have dropped from exhaustion, she hesitated a thousand plans and knew she would carry out none of them. Once that she had seen Stanley for the last time when she bade her a polite farewell at a tiny railroad station on Long Island. Always the jazz music beat upon her ears and upon her brain. Certain of the tunes she would never forget, would never hear again without a shrinking of revulsion, a memory of those wretched weeks when they had sounded so often.

She had grown pale and visibly thinner. Con had noticed, had gruffly warned her to get a hold on herself lest she was worried and anxious before something he could not understand. The other girls tried to cheer her. Even the elegant Sunny unbent enough to assure her that no man, if it was a man, was worth the trouble. A lot you know about it, Anne thought rebelliously, and was assailed by a vision of Stanley somewhere with Nancy, playing with her, amused by her, adoring her. She thanked Sunny absently. She seemed only half alive, these days.

Time had been successively sympathetic, alarmed, exasperated, and now she veered alternately between anger and sympathy. Angry at Anne, Stanley did her clumsy best to prod her roommate to life, she deliberately shamed Anne's pride, but it was no use and her friends decided gloomily that the thing would simply have to wear itself out.

The Bride at the Border

By D. Dayton Craig

The small rattling taxi came to a dead stop at the border of Yugoslavia and Austria. Mr. Tantall leaned forward on the cruelly leather of the back seat and paid the Weasel on the knee. Mr. Tantall was hoping that he would not have to kill any Yugoslavs to get across the border.

The Weasel when they nicknamed you (a Truth avenue is sticks —had the small face pinched like a chorus girl's and he looked decidedly at Mr. Tantall. The Weasel wore a long, white wedding gown and a veil over his head. Through the bridal outfit was pinned fifty thousand Am rican dollars belonging to the Bank. Underneath his limp right arm a pistol lay snugly in the holster. The Weasel made a very amazing bride for Mr. Tantall.

The two semi-es bowed low. The Weasel looked coyly at them. Mr. Tantall said: "We would like an interpreter."

The semi-es nodded. One turned and waked back toward the customs house. Mr. Tantall saw him reach a young Yugoslav who was barking his pistol belt. The Yugoslav reached behind his coat and followed the American guard back to the car. He looked the couple over through sleepy eyes. He was a very young man. He spoke very politely.

"You asked for an interpreter?" he said. Mr. Tantall, He laid his hand tenderly on the Weasel's daintily gloved hand. Even with the gloves on he could feel the lump underneath. They picked up The Weasel smuggled closer and the young Yugoslav smiled knowingly—he went to get across the border— We are flying to Vienna this evening."

"Your luggage, sir?" the young guard said respectfully. Mr. Tantall felt the Weasel reach toward the holster. He watched the guard fondle the pistol at his side. He frowned.

"Your luggage?" the guard repeated very firmly.

"The luggage," said Mr. Tantall. "is in Belgrade." He stepped out of the taxi. The Weasel followed him. "I hope that there will be no trouble about that."

The guard smiled. Mr. Tantall did not know why but he did not like that smile.

"We are in a big hurry," said Mr. Tantall to the guard, "and we do not want any delays."

The young Yugoslav clicked his heels together. The Weasel's hand crept nearer his armpit. "There will be a delay," said the guard.

Mr. Tantall's face darkened. "Delays, we have no luggage!"

"No", said the guard. His eyes held his. "Machine gun. You are under arrest."

The Weasel's hand was now at his armpit. Mr. Tantall stepped back a trifle to give the Weasel plenty of room. He regretted this little unpleasantness that was upon them. But he was glad the Weasel was quick on the trigger.

"Where were you married?" asked the guard.

Mr. Tantall looked him squarely in the eye. "At the village of Futek, not far from here. This morning. We were married." He did not finish. The Weasel had become impatient. Th hand shot under his shoulder.

There was a crack, a wisp of smoke from the Yugoslav's hand and Mr. Tantall saw the Weasel's hand fall limp at his side. He looked and saw blood dripping at the Weasel's feet. Mr. Tantall scowled the Yugoslav's gun and it was still smoking.

The two Austrian semi-es came running from the customs house. Short rifles in hand.

"The hands," said the young Yugoslav, smiling. "Up with the hands."

There was a roar behind them and a big car jumped to a halt in a screen of dust. On the door it said BELGRADE POLICE DEPT. The guard walked over to the Weasel. He pulled and the bridal dress piled down.

They picked a few of the bills from the Weasel's clothing. The chief of the Belgrade police said: "You have done a good job. I think we will find all of it here."

Mr. Tantall looked at the Yugoslav for a moment. "Tell me," he said, "how did you guess? Certainly the Weasel looked like a charming bride."

"Oh, yes," the guard said. "But people do not get married during Lent. Not in this part of Yugoslavia." He bent his head reverently. "It is unthinkable," he said. "Sacrilegious!"

TARZAN'S QUEST

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

As he stood guard in the eerie hours before dawn Sborov gazed beyond the firelight at the wall of darkness—a mysterious world filled with nameless terrors. And in his mind's eye he saw the moaning ghost of Kitty Sborov, the woman He had slain.

As he shuddered and turned away, his eyes wandered over his sleeping companions and came to rest on Jane. How beautiful she was. Why had she spurned him? His conscit would not permit him to believe that he was at fault. Surely Brown must have talked against him.

Brown said: How he hated the fellow . . . Brown would kill him, unless . . . Sborov's eyes fell on the axe and paused monotonously in his tired brain. Presently with which the pilot had threatened him. If his enemy were only dead, he would be safer, and—there would be no one to stand between him and Jane!

Prince Sborov seemed galvanized by sudden determination. He moved stealthily toward the sleeping man. Then, cautiously, one hand crept toward the

Jeanette MacDonald Routine of "Maytime" Expected Myth of Temperament

"Temperamentally, there is no such thing as a blonde, brunette, or redhead in all of Hollywood."

Thus does Jeanette MacDonald, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer singing star, shatter the long-believed theory that there is a blonde temperament and similar ones for the brunette and redhead.

Stars are all sisters under the coiffure and the color of their individual locks has nothing whatever to do with the way they act or react, the star, herself golden-haired believes.

"The world is quick to quote 'as flighty as a blonde,' 'as fiery as a redhead' and 'as calm as a brunette' but these are only catch phrases. Each is entirely nothing," said Miss MacDonald as she prepared for rehearsals with Nelson Eddy in the gorgeous operetta "Maytime," now in its fifth week at the Belle and completes its Belleville engagement Friday night.

"If there is a standard for behaviour or reactions to go with the color of the hair, I'm afraid I would be a strange sorting person since my hair is golden and a crime between the blonde and the redheads. But I assure you I am no different temperamentally than a hundred other actresses I know".

Here Miss MacDonald began pointing out examples. Joan Harlow, she asserted, should prove the fallacy of blonde and brunette temperament, since she has passed from platinum blonde to brunette without so much as changing a line or a dimple in her temperament.

Put a blonde and brunette together and you're likely to find them counterparts in temperament just as two redheads might be vast opposites. Marion Davies and Miriam Lee are opposites in complexion but of kindred temperaments. If you tried to prove that a blonde personality you'd have to do a lot of explaining to Miss Blonde Jessie Garbo and blonde Constance Bennett are not of the same temperament.

"A star can't take off and put on temperament with the clothes besides doing their bleaches and dyes in reverse you'd spoil all the blonde theories about hair temperament together and they spell m-y-t-h.

"Wishful Wishing".

The hit trio of "Rhythm on the Range" Bing Crosby, Bob Burns and Martha Raye, added r t abetted by lovely Shirley Ross in a dupl ting cast of two hundred - and fifty dancers, musicians and specialty performers. Come to the Belle Theatre, Saturday and Monday, for another comedy hit "Waikiki Wedding."

AT THE CAPITOL

Irene Dunne in "Theodora Goes Wild"

A brilliantly written superbly acted, delightfully directed romantic comedy, "Theodora Goes Wild," which opened yesterday at the Capitol and playing until Saturday Nite, definitely stamps it as "in" the annual critical pow-wows which decide the year's "ten best" pictures. And, what's more it looms as a dangerous contender.

Briefly, "Theodora Goes Wild," is screen entertainment which combines delightful nonsense with a plausible story, scintillating performances by Irene Dunne, Melvyn Douglas and a large supporting cast, sparkling dialogue by scenarist Sidney Buchman and truly inspired direction by the versatile Richard Boleslawski.

The greatest surprises of all is the introduction of Irene Dunne as a full-fledged comedienne. A bold move by the Columbia Studio bigwigs who were convinced that, given the proper story, "the orchid lady," could romp and rough-house with the best of them.

Miss Dunne's "Theodora" is a small-town nobody who turns great fame under a non-de-plume as the author of a series of spicy, sophisticated novels. Her identity is kept secret until Melvyn Douglas, as a happy-go-lucky illustrator, discovers who she is, follows her home, and in a brief courtship wins Miss Dunne's heart.

Having decided to marry Douglas Miss Dunne is only slightly set back on learning he has an estrangled wife. In order to free Melvyn, Miss Dunne goes to the divorce court and, in a hilarious scene, pleads a phoney "wild" in a fashion that had yesterday's audience wild with laughter.

Expert aid is rendered by the supporting cast, principally Thurston Hall as Miss Dunne's publisher, and Rosalind Russell, Mischa Auer and Margaret McWade in lesser roles. Douglas is a comedian on the basis of his recent artist and Miss Dunne is entrancing.

Added Shorts

As added short featurettes with the current feature, the Capitol presents "Capitol News," a novelty "Out Guilty" and a musical short featuring Kadri's Orchestra" complete this splendid show.

HASTEN PLANS TO EVACUATE PEOPLE

300,000 Women And Children to be Taken From Bilbao

London, April 29—(CP)—A group of British Parliamentarians hastened plans today to evacuate 300,000 women and children from the besieged Spanish port of Bilbao with the assistance of the British fleet.

A member of the National Joint Committee for Spanish Relief, with which the Parliamentary group allied itself, was flying to Bilbao to obtain "the consent for removal of 100,000 children to temporary homes in Great Britain, France, Scandinavia and other countries.

The conquest of Durango, only 16 miles from Bilbao, continued today and the bombing and razing of Guernica, the "Holy City" of the war-scarred Basque country, spurred the British Parliament to perfect the evacuation plans.

Wilfred Roberts, Liberal M. P., and Lord Listowel, Labor M. P., said he planned to confer with naval officials on the means by which the British Government could act. Listowel said he hoped evacuation would start in two or three days.

British warships have remained in Bilbao harbor to escort escorting foodstuffs to blockaded Bilbao. The eighth British Merchantman to reach Bilbao got out yesterday. Yesterday. An Admiralty spokesman declared that "we have had no reserved any order to aid in the evacuation.

YUKON COUNCIL ASKS ANNEXATION PLEBISCITE

Protests Proposed Plan To Link Up Territory With British Columbia

Asks Majority Approval of People Before Action is Taken

COUNCIL'S MEMORIAL

'Firmly And Emphatically Protest Proposed Ad-dition'

Dawson, Y. T., April 30.—(CP)—The Yukon Territorial Council's resolution "firmly and emphatically" protesting the proposed addition of the northern territory to the Province of British Columbia.

The territorial council of elected members, comprising the governing body of the Yukon, decided to send to the Governor-General in Council a memorial setting forth opposition to placing the territory under administration of its neighboring province.

Fisheries Urged

In the first official comment on the annexation proposal announced by Premier Patullo last Monday as having been agreed between the Provinces and Federal authorities, the territorial council "respectfully urges" that no plan be taken to carry out the proposal without the approval of a majority of the people of the Yukon first having been given by plebiscite."

"No Evidence"

The council, declaring it had "no confidence in the financial ability of the coast province to take over its administration, asked that the people of the Yukon be given an opportunity to express their views before action with respect to it is carried out.

The projected annexation would be a "violation of their democratic rights as Canadian citizens" unless their approval was first obtained, the council said.

R. G. Lees Unveiled in Yukon

The administrative body, comprising Andrew T. Taddie of Granville as chairman, district Mines Charles T. Atherton of Whitehorse for the Whitehorse district and Hermont J. Copp of Keno for the Mayo district, expressed its opinion in the memorial that it is the need of the Yukon alone and that the introduction would be "unsettling of capital."

The purpose of the committee as not analyzed upon in the recommendation which will be submitted.

Approval will also be asked for the appointing of a committee composed of the Mayor, the Chairman of the Board of Works and the city treasurer with the authority to interview the Ontario Municipal Board upon the question of crossing by-law debentures, and to which there is now a sufficient amount accumulated in the sinking fund to pay off, and also as to the use of the sinking fund surplus generally.

The Bruce was one of a number of merchant vessels which have been running food supplies to Bilbao, Santander or Bilbao, besieged Basque capital on the Bay of Biscay.

One of five Spanish government planes, flying out to sea from Santander, dropped a bomb squarely amidships of the Espana, protected at that point by an eight-inch belt of armor plate.

She slid under the choppy surface in a few minutes.

The British cruiser Shropshire steamed at forced draft to the scene of the bombing. She reported to her flagship, the battleship Royal Oak, that she had picked fourteen survivors aged.

SPANISH AIRMEN SINK WARSHIP OF INSURGENTS

Espana Believed First Ship to be Sunk by Planes in Warfare

CREW RESCUED

Airmen Protecting British Food Ship at Time of Sinking

Santander, Spain, Apr. 30 (AP)—The government aerial bomb that sank the battleship Espana Saturday Spanish today went squarely into her ships funnel and burst in her engine rooms, magazine below decks, it was reported here tonight.

Bilbao, Spain, Apr. 30 (AP)—The Spanish insurgent battleship Espana was sunk today by 14 fathoms in the Bay of Biscay by a fleet of government bombing planes manned with hundreds of casualties. She was the first war vessel of any size to be sunk in an airplane bombing attack.

One hundred and ten members of the crew of the 15,450-ton liner were known to have been saved by the insurgent destroyer Velasco, but the government said at least 400 had been rescued.

Hence, if the Espana carried her full complement of officers and men, that would leave 744 unaccounted for. It was possible, however, that many of the crew were immediately reported.

It also was possible the Espana was far short of her maximum complement. Insurgent communiques said the big vessling did not even mention the sinking.

The details of the incident was reported to have occurred four miles off Cape Mayor, while the Espana, with eight 6-inch guns, was busily helping the Velasco keep the 1,081-ton British freighter Stork from the government port of Santander.

Parliament square, which under-

London is Transformed Into Riot of Color Along The Coronation Route

Flood-Lighting Effects Arranged With Sombre Gray of Buildings Being Covered With Bunting — Shopkeepers Display Enthusiasm for King by Hanging out Brocade From Windows

BY FAT UBBHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 30.—(CP)—Behind the scenes as London decks itself in Coronation finery, a staff of experts under the direction of Grey Wornum, an architect, have been quietly designing and executing schemes and flood-lighting effects, that, when the daylight comes, will present a scheme of decoration which is transforming the city into a riot of color. Lamp posts have been freshly silvered, iron fences gleam with new paint, modal work has been refurbished. At 70-foot intervals along the coronation route are masts surmounted with crowns and lantern devices.

Sombre gray or buildings in many places is concealed by bright-colored bunting. Flags and banners are everywhere in evidence, particularly along the Coronation route. Stands for spectators have their woodwork hidden behind red, gold and blue cloth.

While plays an important part in the scheme. "I am trying to bring lightness into the scene and the use of white," explains Wornum. "This year has been made popular by the use of a rubber-faced material—like white velvet—which maintains its freshness even under difficult conditions."

All Grounds Draped

Parliament square, which under-went one transformation with the erection of stands at every vantage point, had undergone another coat. The huge central stands have been draped with red, gold and blue cloth. The overhanging edges of the canopies have a pattern of red and gold.

Special decoration effects are planned for the quadrant in Regent Street, for Charing Cross and the entrance from Whitehall into Parliament Square. At the quadrant a series of long blue banners will be hung, surrounded by white and gold flags with scarlet borders.

In Regent Street shopkeepers, welcomed their King by hanging pieces of brocade out of their windows. This custom will be revived by hanging squares of scarlet material from windows in the quadrant.

Charing Cross will boast what looks like a maypole. The statue of Charles I will be surrounded by masts carrying banners. At the foot of each banner-carrying mast is a cross-tree.

Floodlighting will lend new beauty to famous buildings and to London parks. The Houses of Parliament and the Tower, Buckingham Palace, the Nelson Column and other historic structures will be visible alike by day and night.

CONTINGENT FROM CANADA TO RECEIVE CORONATION MEDALS

London, April 30 (CP Cable)—The garden of Buckingham Palace will be invaded by unarmed Dominion and Colonial troops May 14 when they receive their Coronation medals from the King.

Canada's Royal Canadian Regiment, Royal Canadian Mounted Police Contingent and two nurses will be among them.

Troops of the Dominions and Colonies will parade at Wellington Barracks at 2.30 a.m. and move off at 2.45 a.m. for Buckingham Palace in time for the "Coronation Medals" in the garden at 10.30 a.m. They will be inspected by the King.

Trays For Distribution

It is understood the Majesty wished to present the Coronation Medal to each man personally, but that would take four hours. Instead, a tray for the officers and another for the non-commissioned will be summoned to him and will be given trays of medals which will be immediately distributed.

The ceremony will be concluded with a march past of the King and the return to Wellington Barracks. If it should rain the ceremony will be held in the Riding School in the Royal Mews.

The order of precedence will be: India, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, Rhodesia, Burma and the Colonies. The parade is expected to be a great welcome from Londoners as it will be the first good weather parade that will be seen together without the counter-attraction of the presence of members of the royal family.

New Fishing Grounds Sought by Japanese; No Encroachment Seen

Russian Grant of Fishing Rights May be Cancelled Shortly

INTERESTS PROTEST

Japanese Require New Source of Supply to Feed People

Tokyo, Apr. 30 (AP)—Japan will continue fishing surveys off the Alaskan coast despite opposition by Canadian and United States fishery interests, the Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry made clear today.

Fishery and nautical experts are xpected to revisit Alaskan and Canadian waters in consideration of a search for new fishing grounds begun last year under a three-year plan.

Canadian fishery companies have protested that such experimentation indicated Japanese plans for encroachment of North American continental waters.

(Japan has extensive fishing rights off Siberia under a grant from Russia. There have been rumors of the cancellation of the grant, however, before it expires automatically at the end of 1937).

Ottawa Follows Operations.

Ottawa, Apr. 30 (CP)—The Canadian government is following the operations of Japanese vessels making surveys off the Alaskan and Canadian coasts with a view to discovering new fishing grounds, officials said here today. The surveys had been in progress for some time.

The Japanese are seeking new sources of supply, fish being practically the only food of the people. Anticipation is that at the end of this year the grants which Russia made giving the Japanese rights to establish canneries and exploit fishing grounds on the Siberian coast will expire. They may not be renewed.

There is no information that Japanese surveys have encroached within the three-mile limit.

BUSMEN QUITTING JOBS AT MIDNIGHT

145,000 in London And Counties Are Involved

LONDON, April 30.—(AP)—London's busmen voted today to strike at midnight.

The threatened walkout by 145,000 men, which would paralyze the city's main public transport system, became a virtual certainty when union delegates decided to instruct their men to quit.

Approximately 35,000 busmen in London proper and 120,000 in surrounding counties earlier were involved.

When the demands for a 7 1-2 hour day instead of eight hours and for a half hour lunch on company time—were not met at 4 p.m. union delegates voted to call the men out at midnight. That would be 7 p.m. E.S.T.

The strike, barring a last-minute settlement, will affect London's entire base. 12,800 London drivers and 12,700 London conductors, plus thousands of Japanese outside the city.

Average pay of the drivers is $23.50 a week; the conductors, $21.75.

The former Governor General of Canada has been suffering from a "minor ailment," in the words of his physician, and several days of rest were prescribed.

Notwithstanding the ill condition of the King's great-uncle removed anxiety last his illness become so serious as to cast a shadow over coronation festivities.

Hope that the disposition it had been announced that, due to the indisposition of the Duke, he would not be equal to the long coronation service in Westminster Abbey May 12.

If he had been able to attend the ceremony it would have been the third coronation during the lifetime of his only surviving son of Queen Victoria. He attended the first as a brother, Edward VII, in 1902 and of his nephew George V in 1911.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thomson Science Service Meteorologist

The new meteorology! When did this new meteorology? Can we should not be left to wonder that the whole science of meteorology has been revolutionized. The new meteorology is applied to the world-wide fronts analysis introduced to the world by the Norwegian. Others in the line of study advanced somewhat the same time but he had the honor to put them to the stage of practical advancement and application is forecasting. Hence the name "new meteorology."

It may seem there always have been the past when prediction of weather was made. By the new discoveries the forecaster's job is becoming simplified, and he hopes more enjoyable

Great Britain and France to Probe Guernica Bombing

Try to Establish if German Planes Take Part in Raid

MAY EVACUATE 150,000

Paris, Apr. 30 (AP)—Great Britain and France have decided to conduct an investigation into the Guernica bombing and machine-gunning of Guernica, sacred city of the Basques, French Foreign Minister Delbos today told the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee here.

France and Britain also agreed that measures must be taken to evacuate the women and children of non-combatants from Bilbao, besieged Basque capital, Delbos said.

The Guernica inquiry will be conducted by international agents, he said. It will seek to establish the foreign minister explained, whether German planes carried out the bombing raid in which 800 persons died. The Basques say the planes were German.

Insurgents contend the Basques set fire to the town, devastating it. It now is in insurgent hands. The insurgents have even invited correspondents to visit the air attack.

Socialist Premier Leon Blum's government, under the urging of all ranks of its supporters, was reported urging Great Britain today to join France in attempting rescue of 150,000 persons trapped in besieged Bilbao.

A person close to the premier declared French officials were conferring with British foreign office authorities "with a view to organizing intervention inspired solely by the high call of humanity."

The government's reported movement came on the heels of a request from the Basque government that the people's Front—the combined Leftist parties supporting Blum—that France help evacuate 300,000 civilians, threatened by both insurgent capital and provide shelter in France.

The committee proposed sending an "effectively protected" French ship to Bilbao and the use of force against the insurgent blockades, if necessary.

PAVED STREETS NEED PLENTY OF REPAIR

Paved streets in the city emerged through the past winter in worse condition than for many years past, it was indicated today by the estimate of the public works department now started on the first of the season's cold patching. Swelling, bumps and holes in the pavement have been particularly noticeable this year and considerable repair work will be necessary, it was stated. It is believed the condition is due to the excess moisture of early Spring.

Capitalism is Defended by Sir E. W. Beatty in Address

Surest Road to Increase in Wealth For All People

ANSWER TO POVERTY

Washington, Apr. 30 (AP) — Sir Edward W. Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, told the United States Chamber of Commerce yesterday capitalism "still is the surest road to increase in wealth for all people."

Distribution of wealth, which he termed a "fallacy", was being unceasingly preached on both sides of the international boundary, he said.

"Those who would redistribute wealth, in my opinion, have often to exaggerate the amount of wealth which is available for redistributing."

"Wealth is a word which should be used only in relation to human needs. Money is valuable in human affairs for a thing but a name for a commodity. It is useless in bulk of dividing wealth as it would be to speak of sharing bricks.

"It is always absurd to talk of improving the wealth of those who have it not by taking it from those who have it in abundance.

"To say a man owns 1,000,000 merely means he controls the power to spend an income based on the investments of that sum.

"Investments."

Increased Production Answer.

"The answer to poverty is not to reduce the wealth of the rich man. It is go increase the production of all the goods and services of the world, so that they may be employed in far greater measure than they are today, by the millions who live below the levels of comforts, which they might enjoy were all men productively employed.

"Business is based on the wisest and best of all human motives—the profit motive. All that the profit motive means is that no business is being will seek those things which will be of benefit to get, and in that lies the only source of the progress of the race as a whole.

"Should the profit motive fail to do its work, government would be forced to serve as a reasonable guide in keeping the economic life of a modern nation functioning smoothly. And one of the consequence will be that the great people will be ready to follow those who attack it, and offer some untried panacea as a substitute."

'Buzzards' Must Fly Home For Mother's Day or Lose Cards

Jeff Davis 'King of Hoboes' Issues 1000-Mile Order

'BUZZARDS' WARNED

Chicago, April 30—(AP)— The grapevine of hobo-land carried the warning today that the "jungle" boys" would be on the lookout for the "buzzards" who don't scamper home for Mother's Day, May 9.

The "buzzards," the "King" explained, were the "jungle" who "won't help get the eats in camp, but will help consume them." He contended they were the kind who wouldn't go home.

1,000 miles of home who don't arrange to visit their mothers, another Hobo Day would have Hoboes of America cards taken from them. Those more than 1,000 miles from home were instructed to write.

Until 1,000 boes, 500 of them will be "on the road," Davis said, "and when they find my dissolvent order has not been heeded, they'll get tough. We can ostracize every guy who doesn't carry a hobo card."

The "buzzards," the "King" explained, were the "jungle" who "won't help get the eats in camp, but will help consume them." He contended they were the kind who wouldn't go home.

Junk Business Leaps Forward As Aladdin Rubs His Lamp

Pied Piper of Business Brings Tons Upon Tons of Scrap to Town

WASTE IS MONEY

Belleville has gone junk-minded. Whether some Aladdin of industry has robbed his magic lamp and asked the Genii to bring him every conceivable form of waste from steel and other metals will never be known. However if present day appearances and conditions are any criterion, to get back to the fairy story angle, one can very well imagine that a Pied Piper of Business has played his industrial pipes over a vast section of the country.

For on every highway and byway Monday last, the city, on any day and at any hour can be seen one of the strangest sights ever assembled, converging on a given spot. Hurry, haste and speed seem to be the slogan of this heterogeneous crowd of people. In all sorts of vehicular transportation they hurry along the highways intent upon getting the last of precious junk to the dealer. Old cars, good cars, autos which are ready for the junk pile themselves, wagons, can in fact any contrivance capable of hauling any sort of a load has been pressed into service.

Prices Colossal

This junk business which leaped into sudden popularity almost overnight has taken the country by storm. Prices which catapulted from practical obscurity to a spot where unheard of profits could be made with little or no effort, contributed to an industry, or business rather, which has attracted more than its ever increasing numbers.

One hundred percent profit or nearly that, has proven a golden bait which is attracting the public from all corners of the compass.

Debris is Ranked and Combed

Piles of junk in the country over are being raked for what they might contain, City and town dumps are being combed with a thoroughness that is amazing. Anything remotely resembling metal is ferreted with care until the most every-making trip to the city is made. Others, lone and even in the woods, in some cases, are being combed. Creek and river bed are being overhauled by the searchers in their "hunger" for the metal.

They are not the best fit fussy. They carry sledge hammers, the tools of their trade. They search and search in an unceasing effort to and from possible sources of junk revenue. Nothing is too big nor too small. Anything and everything of a metal nature that has been discarded and is of no further use finds its way to the ever-hungry maw of the junk market.

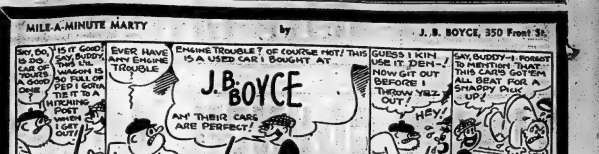
In the city, the premises of the dealers in junk are a hive of activity. Ceaselessly, day and night, augmented staff work, weighing and transferring the junk from differentiated carriers to the cavernous mouths of coal freight cars which stand on a siding at the depots.

Endless Procession

Yesterday, the road leading to the premises of a city dealer was cluttered with a line of traffic which included practically everything from a four ton lorry to the kiddie kar or a pair of very youthful financiers. One by one the strange looking vehicles drew up to the scales, had their loads weighed, rapidly transferred then to the waiting trucks of the dealer which whisked them away to waiting railroad cars, then roared away out of the city to return later with another load.

Finds in River



"We found two in the river bed" grinned a couple of boys to get rich quick youths, looking at pieces of rusty iron, coated with the slime resulting from long immersion.

All day long the odd parade continued to form and break away as the cars clamored for their loads. At the railroad station, more activity was in progress. Loading of cars went on unabated. Rapidly the coal cars were loaded with their odd cargoes, daily. It is reported, snorting engines haul them out of the yard to be picked up by fast freights and whisked away to their destination.

Business Turns Homeward

Truly, business has turned homeward. The broom of junkdom is indulging in an orgy of house-to-house cleaning which has seldom been experienced by the sexton of Mother Earth. How long it will last no one seems to know but suffice it to say that for the present there is unsightly pile or debris, hitherto practically valueless are being turned into a handsome profit by all concerned.

RELIEF GARDENS

City coufucil does not look with too much favor upon community relief gardens in the city this year, it was indicated today by one alderman lout in his declaration that last year more land could have been wasted by indifferent gardeners than the actual cost of supplying them. "Some of them started too small. Anything and everything of a metal nature that has been discarded and is of no further use finds its way to the ever-hungry maw of the junk market.

Belleville Redmen, R. C. A. F. Hockey Clubs Presented With Crests and Medals by O. H. A.

Event Staged by Kinsmen Club And Many in Attendance

PREXY ON HAND

Pro. Players Answer Number of Questions Asked By Fans

Culminating a gala three nights of stupendous success the Kinsmen's Club of Belleville wound up their Motor Show and fashion parade in a blaze of entertainment glory when they featured some of the greatest hockey notables on the present day horizon and added to the feature of the night by presentations of medals and crests to the Belleville "Redmen" and the R.C.A.F. "Flyers", respective Ontario Hockey Association winners during the past season.

With President A. H. Schlagel, of the O.H.A. and Secretary W. A. Hewitt of the same body as honored guests, who presented the medals and crests to the two district provincial hockey champions, upwards of 3,000 people thronged the Belleville Armouries to honor many local champions, including Walter Turner, KC-Kar Derby winner, George Pepper, Canadian motorcycle champion, Tommy Aimers, outstanding jockey of Canada, but more especially the professional hockey players, who made their personal appearance and were received amid tumultuous ovation. "Pit" Clapper, of the Boston Bruins, Bob Davidson, of the Toronto Maple Leafs and Jo-Jo Gravelle, of the London, Imperial and Wembley Lions, were the notable hockey players introduced to the anxious throng by announcer Leslie Bestwell.

Crests and Medals Given

In presenting the O.H.A. medals and crests to the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" champions of the Ontario Hockey Association, in the "A" series, President Schlagel, Preston, not only congratulated the R.C.A.F. team but added his comment to the Belleville teams. "It is a pleasure to represent our Association tonight and present to the intermediate "A" champion R.C.A.F. team their medals in victory, but I deem it a pleasure to welcome a new hockey organization into the O.H.A. who in their first year gained the prominent honors by winning their group," stated President Schlagel as he called upon Senadron Leader Tom Lawson to introduce the champion "Flyers" as they individually received their honors won in the hockey fields of Ontario.

Hewitt Voices Praise

Amid vociferous applause W. A. Hewitt, secretary of the O.H.A., stepped to the platform to extol in honor the Belleville Redmen. "It gives me great pleasure to be in Belleville tonight and congratulate your hockey club upon winning the intermediate "B" championship of Ontario. Belleville has been in the O.H.A. for a great many years and has many times produced outstanding clubs, and good teams also, but I am glad at last to be present, when on this occasion you are honoring Belleville's first O.H.A. champion hockey club," was Secretary Hewitt's remarks before calling upon Eddie Thomas, manager and coach of the champion Belleville Redmen, who introduced his individual players and continued applause showered Kinsmen's Club gals crowd. The individual players on both championship clubs were received cordially as they stepped before the microphone and received their O.H.A. medals and crests.

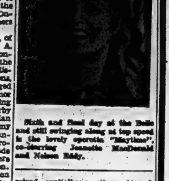
The medals received by the players were similar, being issued by the O.H.A. Association, were cast in bronze, and inscribed with the O.H.A. on the front side, while on the reverse side was the name of the individual player and also the name of the player to receive the medal. O.H.A. felt cloth crests were also presented to the hockey champions of both clubs, the crests being oval in shape and bearing the O.H.A. shield, plus crossed hockey sticks and the year 1937 woven upon them.

Players Answer Questions



One of the features of the night's entertainment was a series of questions and answers directed by Master-of-ceremonies Leslie Bestwell with the guests of the evening, Bob Davidson of the Toronto Maple Leafs, "Pit" Clapper of the Boston Bruins and Tommy Aimers, noted Canadian jockey supplying the rapid-fire answers. The feature proved highly interesting and also one of educational nature. The Kinsmen also made a generous cash donation to George Pepper to assist the Canadian motorcycle champion financially towards his forthcoming trip to the world's championship races at the Isle of Man. Following the regular entertaining program that featured the annual Kinsmen's Club Motor Show free dancing was enjoyed on the main floor of the Armouries with the music being supplied by the Princess Pat orchestra, under the baton of leader Walter Assicine.

Three Rodeo Given

The winners in the Kinsmen Club draw were: radio won, M. Bell, 86 Lingham Street, Belleville A. Whitton, 313 Albert Street, Drummond, 118 George Street. Minor prizes: One of Quaker State Oil, donated by Garage Supply Co., won by F. Ferguson, Frankford, Alemite Products, won by Rod Talbot, Belleville, Oil Lubrication, won by Mrs. K. Forbes, 45 College Street. A subsequent prize will be awarded by the Imperial Stores.

Maintaining the same high standard of the night previous the various acts which interspersed the different parades of the Style Show, again won the acclaim of the attendant crowd. The Music Masters, with their stringed instruments and imitations, the Miss Barbara Dimont, universal tap-dancing favorite of Belleville and district, Jack Darlington, whose fine voice makes popular songs more popular, the Sally Miller Dancing Girls and Mary Bongard, blue-clad dimpling dancing girls, the Professor and a magician of skill, and the voice of Harold Davidson, in "I Love You Truly" in the bridal scene which climaxed the Fashion Show, rounded out a stage setting which lacked nothing from an entertainment point of view.

During the style show gowns were shown by Nellie Smith's Ladywears by Woodley's, shoes by Agnew-Surpass, coiffures by the Mayfair salon.

Irene Dunne sheds the dream dress that had served her so well these years to play the title role in the season's brightest comedy romance, shamble's, "Theodora Goes Wild" now playing the Capitol until Saturday nite.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Galveston, Tex., April 30 (CP)—Meet Wimpy, the flexible pooch.

One of two things invariably happens to the flea that gets on Wimpy, says owner W. J. Henderson. He either abandons his free ride hastily or he drops off dead. To Henderson it's like the Fourth Amendment: It's there but lost by to explain it.

Chicago, April 30 (CP)—Alfa, the chimpanzee movie monkey at the Brookfield Zoo, got an aerial futuristic complex when air of her cage males ganged up on her the other day.

Alfa is cross-eyed and her range was bad. She was taking a lacing when the keepers appeared. Now she is in a cage with a smaller monkey to regain her self-confidence.

Augusta, Me., April 30 (CP)—Most of the 20,000 Canadian geese which congregate every year in Merry Meeting Bay near Topsham have gone back to their bear up north.

They come south, stick around a few days and then check out. But a few always remain here. Nobody can explain that, either.

Toronto, April 30 (CP)— Just how he'll get his cat running a mystery but Michael, a painter, has earned a reward offered by an insurance company for return of 21 stolen watches. The time pieces were taken a few days ago from a parked car.

Out for a run on a leash yesterday with his master, the dog, owned by Elwood Scott of Toronto, scratched into a pile of rubbish near a fence and dug up a parcel. Inside were 21 watches.

Stratford, Ont., April 30 (CP)— There was fun in the flood as well as disaster, according to a western Ontario newspaper photographer. He had just completed a picture of a badly damaged automobile in a mud-covered garage when a woman ran out and asked him not to use the picture. "We can't let that picture go into the paper," she said. "The garage hasn't been painted since last fall."

Hamilton, Ont., April 30 (CP) —Inspector Robert Ingle of the society for prevention of cruelty has decided that's being tak one back alive. Equipped only with apparatus to snare sixty dogs

IN THE PERFORMANCE OF DUTY

Tragedy in the performance of duty seems unspeakably sad especially a duty which is imposed by the victim's own sense of his obligation to serve others. Such a tragedy was that which claimed Dr. MacDonald of Ingersoll on his way to attend the victims of the train wreck a few miles away, itself a result of the floods. Dr. MacDonald's car was swept away as it entered upon a bridge which was, unknown to him, in a condition to be carried away weakened as it was by the floods.

In his case it was as truly the surrender of a life for others as humanity can imagine. Doctors, called in the emergencies of life and death, naturally come to look upon their high calling to the health of men, women and children as something which may in time claim their lives. Without a thought of self they perform their duties. In the midst of the performance of such a duty, Dr. MacDonald died.

There are the men on a train who lost their lives through a wreck caused by a washout. Railwaymen do a service which has its hazards. Great obligations rest upon them. Without them it would be a world unrecognizable in its backwardness for the railwaymen have helped to advance civilization by the nature of their calling.

In this world constituted as it is, often the duty means life's surrender. Many give their lives willingly as do engineers who has read at all of the doctors whose lives have been given in experimentation with radium or X-rays. Many a railwayman has given his life for others, whom he is carrying in the coaches behind him, many a sailor has gone down in a watery grave in giving the place of safety in the boats to the women and children and the men passengers. Instances are found in every other calling, nurses, workmen in factories and on the city streets and countless numbers who suffered many times in doing something while others are helped. In this great class must not be forgotten the policeman and the fireman.

KENILWORTH CASTLE

The famous castle of Kenilworth has been presented to the British people in trus to be preserved as a landmark of British history. The ancient building is in a fair state of repair and the buildings are among the most extensive of the baronial structures of another day.

Kenilworth Castle has been a name in history and fiction, in history when it came into being in the reign of Henry the First and was conferred by Queen Elizabeth upon the Earl of Leicester, who entertained the Queen of Her Majesty within its walls in 1575 is told in Scott's novel "Kenilworth". The castle is now an ivy-covered ruin and the population of the town which is nearby is about 6,000. Kenilworth town is about four miles north of Warwick.

The walls have seen history made in the pageantry of changes from early days in England when England was in the making to these democratic days.

Those who love history and the landmarks which tell a story more poignantly and impressively than pen, will be pleased that this old pile is not to continue to sink in ruins, but is to be preserved, through the gift of Sir John Siddeley, who bought it from the Earl of Clarendon and presented it to the nation.

Kenilworth Castle will have immediate repairs placed upon it through the additional gift from the donor which will provide a sum for this undertaking.

Extensively repaired in the sixteenth century when the Earl of Leicster entertained Queen Elizabeth, it will again come into the hands of repairers but for a different purpose.

On "Caesar's Tower" the repairs will not be so extensive, for its sixteen-foot thick walls have withstood time's disintegration.

EXTENDING THE RIGHT ARM

Today is a day of badges and salutes. One has to take a look at Russia or Italy to get a start with salutes, then to cast an eye at the brown-shirted Germans with their Nazi salute and now comes General Franco, insurgent Spaniard, with a salute for the peoples he has come among to organize. They are told to extend the right arm upward and outward at an angle of forty-five degrees. Since Russia and all these other nations have salutes it is but natural they should vary little.

Those who have to do with the choice of salutes have displayed little originality, but then imitation has always been practised.

One critic says these are all tediously the same, otherwise the leaders would refuse to have their followers repeat so slavishly or would restrain them from making any gesture at all.

Those back of the salute look upon the salute as an evidence of solidarity and strength, but some other salute or perhaps the lack of a salute might well indicate not only strength and solidarity but the independence of solidarity and strength.

THE FIRST PLOUGHING

The sun shines bright on this fair April noon,
The crow's dark shadow drifts across the lea.
The robin's song—our hearts with it attune—
Falls on the ear—a welcome melody.
The damp, dark mould a mist of incense flings—
A subtle fragrance on the April air—
The ploughman to the field his horses brings,
No satin sheen can with their coats compare.
With patient step they haul the sturdy plough
And turn the furrows from their winter's dream;
The sky o'ercast—the rain is falling now—
And in the silver rain the furrows gleam.

THIS THEN IS A JUNGLE MYSTERY, or one of those things "we never knew until now"—drawn to our attention by Ed Dickens, veteran confectioner of Belleville. The Jungle Mystery, so called, is a large nut, or rather pod, nearly as large as a cocoanut. Inside this pod is a collection of what we know as Brazil nuts. A portion of the pod has been cut away to permit a view of the nuts within, and this is the explanation as printed on a tag attached to the pod and sent out by the importing firm to customers:

A JUNGLE MYSTERY

From a thousand miles up the jungles of the mighty Amazon river in Brazil we bring these Castanas, or Brazil Pods, to you. Each pod contains 12 to 20 nuts.

They grow way up in the top of the Brazil Nut trees, one hundred and fifty feet from the ground, and the native black man risks his life every time he goes up to pick these pods, as he subjects himself to the howler monkeys, crocodiles, boas, jaguars and the poison darts of the Indian, and the savage massacre of the uncivilized Indians.

MEN SEEK THAT PHILOSOPHY OF LIFE WHICH KNOWS NO FEAR, carries the ability to appreciate and enjoy all the blessings of life, enjoy the sunshine and the rain, Nature in her most pleasant moods and the reverse—carries also the ability to admire the good in people and minimize the less admirable qualities of the human mind and heart. Laugh at those who hate us and would despitefully treat us, pitying them for their weakness—in short carrying the capacity to enjoy the wonderful life and the changing aspects of each day to the full, while minimizing the ills of the flesh and the cussedness of people, and all the minor discomforts of life. Which reminds us that any true philosophy of life must be founded on such a substantial corner stone as that which has been called the best of all the virtues CHARITY. We quote:

Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels and have not CHARITY, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal.

And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not CHARITY, I am NOTHING.

And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not CHARITY, it profiteth me NOTHING.

CHARITY suffereth long, and is kind; CHARITY envieth not; CHARITY vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up,

Doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, THINKETH NO EVIL;

Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth;

Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.

CHARITY never faileth; but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away.

"FOOTBALL AND JUNKERS"—

In the ranks of the drug addicts of this country as well as elsewhere throughout the world exists a system of grapevine telegraphy that sometimes conversants as unintelligible to the ordinary citizen as the established arrays in chalk on the girders of the railway bridges of the water towers of the towns and cities through which they pass in their aimless, nerve-wracking journeys. By its agency does he know the town, for their natures are as distinctly different for their purposes as a contrast between London and Port Said. Trenton at one time was well recognized by narcotic officers of the Dominion as an easy place in which to secure the forbidden drugs. Lately due to the efforts of officers of the law in stamping out the evil, the peddler has shifted his operations to the larger cities, where under cover of larger populations and fewer consequent, he is able to purvey his insidious wares. Hamilton's booking drug connection, distributing many dollars' worth of narcotics each day, to its enslaved patrons, is one of the most efficiently operated of several such centres of the east, it is declared by those who profess to know. Toronto a "junker" usually waits on the open hour at the office of the dropper. Most of the "junkers" and "snabblers" taking the stuff directly into the vein of an arm, thus getting almost instantaneous relief. The ordinary hypodermic injection is much slower.

o o o

The illicit drug traffic everywhere is carried on by the ingenious methods employed in its transportation and distribution of the dope. It has been to the everlasting chagrin of police authorities everywhere that this nefarious criminal activity is the most cleverly organized. Not just as easy as the purchase of headache tablets, to be sure, but availability of the "junk" is the slightest of the addicts' problems. Having secured the price he procures the forbidden, by whatever means, criminal or otherwise, that presents itself. It is a simple matter for the nervous "junkers" to place his orders and collect the stuff.

o o o

And in the case of those he is generally in need of it. Financial limitations compel many addicts to operate on a day-to-day schedule of purchasing their drug requirements, this custom has been held by one who has returned up that long and dismal trail. The "shot" is costly, the smaller quantity available selling for $1.25 the small "deck", and often the inveterate user must have this quantity several times a day. If it is broken in a three and one-half grain capsule, but the old "junker" knows that he's getting fairly good stuff if it runs two grains or better of the pure drug; the remainder is sugar of milk or other powdered material. The morphine comes in small cubes.

o o o

The desire for the drug in the habitual addict is a physical craving that becomes indescribable torture without it. And having finally raised the price of a "caper" or a "deck" taking it is one of the simplest problems. "They adjust her his nerves"— the necessary equipment for injecting the drug. First it is "cooked" with a drop or so of water in a spoon with the heat of a match. This rudimentary equipment is unnecessary and seldom used. Then the needle and concentrated syringe by use of an eye dropper. A cigarette paper and will firmly aid the needle to guide the dropper. Most of the "junkers" and "snabblers" taking the stuff directly into the vein of an arm, thus getting almost instantaneous relief. The ordinary hypodermic injection is much slower.

o o o

One of the most tragic horrors of the dope addict comes in the nightmarish ordeals which he endures when he is "kicking the habit." Usually an unwilling denial enforced by prison. Visions which are described as horrible in real, and which no ordinary citizen may ever see. Besides the sufferer. "Delirium tremens" are a cinch compared to these. declares the informant. Too frequently in these dreams the "stuff" will be around him he summons the fiends and without the equipment of any kind with which to take a shot. The most rigorous watchfulness of prison guards has made smuggling of drugs into prison increasingly difficult. Only within recent years have several clever practices been discovered by police authorities. The gummed strip of an envelope will often bring the "stuff" wrapped in a carefully placed cigarette paper between the moistened edges of the gum. The use of heavy linen envelopes in which the fold would carry the drug after it had been expertly creased by a hot iron, escaped detection for a long time. Sending into prison by friends bootpaste containing the drug is another dodge that is now being watched.

MAY-FLIES SHORT-LIVED

Certain species of may-flies are among the shortest-lived creatures on earth. Although they may spend as long as three years in the larval stage, their adult life lasts only a day or two. In fact some, upon reaching maturity, emerge from their flat, nymph-like eggs and die within twelve hours.—Collier's Weekly.

Film Comic Injured

STEPIN FETCHIT—Dancing feet of Stepin Fetchit, droll screen comic, were disabled for a year recently injured in an automobile accident in New York. Fetchit lost control of his car when a tire blew out. The car crashed into an elevated pillar. Fetchit was taken to Harlem Hospital in a critical condition.

DOUBLE DOTS ON SOME STAMPS

Some Three Cent Stamps Have Appearance of Quotation Mark

Montreal, April 30 (CP)—Canada "in parenthesis" is the discovery of Montreal philatelists in the new issue of King George VI three-cent Canadian stamps.

Double dots above the King's portrait in seven stamps on each sheet of the early printings of plates one and two give the appearance of a quotation mark after the word "Canada."

The fault was discovered by William Robertson, Westmount collector, and John F. Proskurin, Montreal. The affected stamps run vertically in the fourth row from the right. Collectors have located 35 sheets of the "imperfects" in Montreal post offices.

Two weeks ago a Montrealer found one stamp in each of the first 100 sheets which showed a white flaw extending from the King's left ear to the border of the stamp. It has been termed the "King's hallmark."

4TH THURLOW

THE Royal Road TO THE CORONATION

Britain's Royal family in a characteristic group picture

Busy though his members are with the many duties their rank and standing impart, Britain's ruling family are often seen together. A home-making queen and a home-loving King head a little family group that has won a niche all its own and apart from the glamor of the throne in Britain's heart.

Today, as their Majesties rush through the final preparations for the glamorous if fatiguing pageant of their coronation, less and less of their time can be devoted to their home and family and the King and Queen will feel the loss. It can be classed, perhaps, as one particularly appealing.

Mrs. Lydia Way spent a couple of days last week with Mrs. Sam Way.

Mr. and Mrs. Latta and Marjorie stayed Tuesday evening with their daughter, Mrs. Harold Yateman, the inclement weather having delayed their visiting.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Cole and children spent Saturday at Stirling.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Yateman and boys took tea Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Sanford Noble, Sidney.

Miss Marion Martin was entertained to tea an evening recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Way.

Bethany Y.P. Union held their meeting Tuesday evening in the church. Mrs. Harold Yateman had charge of the program.

Royal Doulton Tray Presented To Mrs. Robert Hall by Guild

Young Women's Guild of John Street Church Study Attitude of Church to Labor

The Young Women's Guild of John St. Church held their regular April meeting at the home of Mrs. Templeton. The topic for study was a part of report of the Department of Evangelism and Social Service, recommended by the General Council of the United Church, for study throughout the church. The section chosen dealt with the Christian attitude towards industrial relations.

The keynote for the meeting was set in the devotional service, "The Mission of the Master," led by Mrs. Lashbrook who based her meditation on "The Magnificat" and Jesus' own pronouncement in Luke 46:55.

In the discussion ably led by Miss Adams, reference was made to the historical development of trade unionism during the past century. By a study of economic, legal and religious authorities, Christian attitude to labour was sought. Early in the study, it was found that collective bargaining was considered an essential part of trade unionism and necessary for the protection of labour, in the opinion of writers of standard texts on economics. The four types of trade unions were described and the distinction between the horisontal union by crafts and the vertical union by industries made clear. The advantages and disadvantages of international unions were discussed.

The methods of collective bargaining open to labour were discussed with special mention of various aspects of the sit-down strike. Miss Rhoda contributed information regarding the legality of strikes and picketing and explained more recent legislation on the subject, notably the Wagner Act—the American magna charta of labour—and the Nova Scotia Act covering similar points.

The vexing problem of the attitude of the state to industrial dispute was touched upon but it was left to Mrs. Hall to discuss the Church which was of greatest interest to the group. In this connection, Mrs. Hall read extracts from the pronouncements of various religious bodies maintaining it is labour's inalienable right to unite and to bargain collectively through representation, of their own choice. Among those were the pronouncements of The Christian Employers of Britain, 1911; the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States 1919; The Papal Encyclical 1931; the United Church of Canada 1934 and 1936; the Anglo-Catholic Church and the Fellowship for a Christian Social Order of Toronto.

From the earliest history of Christianity to the latest pronouncement of the Canadian Church, she said, it would seem clear that the weight of Christian public opinion must always be on the side of the downtrodden and the weak until the day of brotherhood shall dawn in the Kingdom of God on earth. Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Wishart, Miss West and Mrs. Williams acted as hostesses and contributed materially to the discussion.

During the evening, a presentation of a Royal Doulton buffet tray as a parting gift was made to Mrs. Hall. Fitting expression and deep regret at her departure was voiced by Mrs. Norris.

The most important matter of business was the report by the president, Mrs. Wishart, of the committee appointed to deal with arrangements for the future corporate life of the Guild. The committee reported a most cordial interview with the minister and officials of Tabernacle Church at which a gracious invitation was extended to the Guild to affiliate with that church and to carry on their activities there. This was gratefully accepted by the Guild and a committee appointed to draft any necessary changes in the Constitution.

An invitation to hold the May meeting at the home of Mrs. Bows was accepted and the subject announced for study was "The Christian Attitude to Marriage and Divorce."

The usual social hour was enjoyed by the large number present.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating supper, being lash nite without dumplings, tasting pritty good but nothing special, and I started to wonder whether I'd have room left for dinert if I took a 3rd helping or whether it was some dinert that didn't need much room, and I said, What's for dinert, ma?

Now how many times must I tell you about inquiring about dinert half way through dinner? ma said. You dont hear anybody else doing that she said, and I said. Well O, ma, gosh, pop's not as inirited in dinert as what I am and I bet you know what it is already.

Being a good sport, and ma said, It's a very nice dinert, and let that suffice.

Wah chen I'll leave enough room for it, I said.

Wich I did by not taking a 3rd helping of lam stew, and when the dinert came on what was it but prunes, me saying. Aw heck, good nite, prunes.

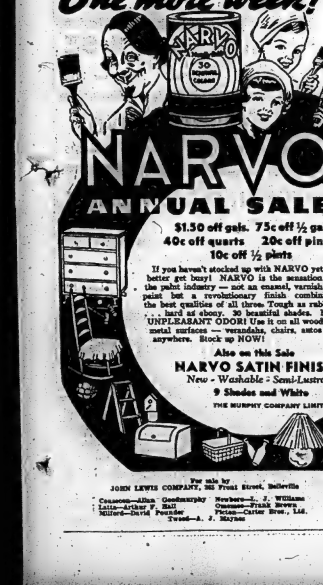
Now that will do, you're at perfect liberty to leave the table if you like, ma said, and I said, But O, ma, gosh, you said it was a very nice dinert.

And I repeat the identical words and they're still true, ma said, and I said, But how can anything that's even bum for break-fast be a very nice dinert?

Wihjun, will you speak to this boy? ma said, and pop said, You don't seem to realize, Benny, that owing to their fibrous nature and their generous supply of mineral salts and vitamins prunes are among the most nourishing and stimulating of foods, so if toast's not a nice dinert, what is?

Lemmon merranga pie or ice cream, I said, and pop said, If you can get along without prunes I'm sure they can get along without you, so you may be excused.

O well, there's no use disappointing them after I've went and left room for them, I said.



And I ate 2 helpings of them to prove I wasn't inditable.

NO DEPRESSION IN HORSE MART

There apparently is no depression on the horse market, at least so thinks James Hart of this city, who, finishing one died a few days ago from colic and whose place he has been trying to fill with a more or less perfect grade of Dobbin, says "I have tried all over," he said, "but so far have had no success. Farmers are asking high prices for any kind of a horse and I am not willing to pay them. Perhaps I will have to go where from seventy-five to one hundred dollars for a nag, which is not worth twenty-five is asked. But then, I suppose, the Spring will be the time to pay have something to do with it."

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

Irene Dunne in "Theodora Goes Wild"

Irene Dunne might be termed a "jill-of-all-types."

She has been a hazil-eyed prima donna in "Irene," "Showboat" and "Sweet Adeline," a skittish ingenue in "Sweethearts," a graduate of dowager in "Cimarron," a dramatic emotional star in "Back Street," "Symphony of Six Million" and "Magnificent Obsession," and in "Theodora Goes Wild," her current starring film at the Capitol until Saturday nite, a light comedienne.

Such a record of versatility is probably unmatched by any other living actor or actress on stage or screen. So complete, as a matter of fact, is her mastery of each type of role that those who have witnessed her debut as a comedy artist in "Theodora Goes Wild" have widely proclaimed that it marks her best effort to date. Considering the wide chasm that separates a portrayal such as that of the blind widow in "Magnificent Obession" and the hilt-tenish, small-town girl who wants to be a sophisticate in "Theodora Goes Wild" the range and intensity of Miss Dunne's art is all the more apparent.

Miss Dunne turned to the stage after completing her education at the exclusive Loretta Academy in her native city of Louisville, Kentucky, a convent in St. Louis, and the Chicago College of Music, wherein her studies included music, voice and languages.

At the suggestion of friends she applied for the leading role in "Irene," under production in New York. She was eminently successful both in getting the job and winning the approval of her voice and ability by press and public. She appeared subsequently in many musical comedies, notably "Sweetheart Time," "Luckee Girl," "Dear Chap," "The Clinging Vine," and Ziegfeld's production of "Showboat."

While appearing in Baltimore, she was "discovered" by a Hollywood producer and immediately wrapped in a contract and mailed special delivery to the fabled film city. Her debut before the camera scored a minor sensation since it was the first time anyone had seen her. Her film was "Symphony of Six Million." More emotional roles followed in "Back Street," "Thirteen Women," "The Magnificent Obsession," then comedy-dramatic parts, ludes in "Sweet Adeline," "Roberta" and the screen version of "Showboat."

"Theodora Goes Wild" is a typically romantic comedy by Mary McCarthy, adapted to the screen by Sidney Buchman. Melvyn Douglas is featured with Miss Dunne.

Auction Nite

Tonight we are holding our regular Friday evening Auction Nite with Tommy Hall as auctioneer. Come and enjoy the fun.

AT THE BELLE
"Wakiki Wedding"

High comedy, music and romance in a tempestuous Wakiki setting are a splendid cast including some of the best known names of the radio and screen, and splendidly received and directed, make "Wakiki Wedding", coming to the Belle for Thursday and Friday, matinee daily, a brilliantly blended thoroughly enjoyable an evening's entertainment as could be hoped for.

The cast is headed by Bing Crosby and includes Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Edythe Fowler, Georgia Hartzer and Leif Erikson in the main roles, and splendidly adds to the atmosphere provided by two hundred and fifty native dancers, drummers and musicians. Among the latter are Mirt Rei, the dancing girl who proved the sensation of the Ziegfeld Follies a few years ago and Kinkid and Malani De Olcru, Honolulu dancing girls.

Crosby a Press Agent

"Wakiki Wedding" is the story of a smart publicity man, played by Crosby, who manages to almost Ask the representative of a pineapple canning company to be content for pineapple recipes, the winner of which is to receive a vacation in glamorous, Wakiki. Miss Rose wins the contest, comes to Wakiki, becomes bored with the place and decides to return home, but the publicity man intervenes.

Much of the rest of the picture is taken up with Crosby's attempts to keep Miss Rose thrilled. He succeeds but falls in love with her. He then learns that he had provided a synthetic Wakiki for her and learns him his love her back by employing the unique methods which many of him the great publicity man he is.

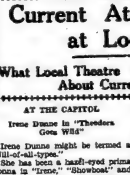
Interwoven in this plot, is the romance of Bob Burns and Martha Raye. It is very much like the romance they had in "Rhythm on the Range," hilarious and robust.

Excellent Performances

Crosby outdoes himself in "Wakiki Wedding." Not only does he sing several charming melodies in his own inimitable manner but he plays the part of the five wire press agent with great verve and humor. Martha Raye, who of course are excellent and Miss Rose takes a step forward as an accomplished actress.

The duo of Crosby and Rainger, responsible for the batch of surefire hits. Notable among these are "Love Me Tonight," "Please Keep Me for You," "In a Little Nuia Hessa" and "Chinatown, My Chinatown." Bob Burns, Bella Nesa of the day, a funny comedian and Leif Erikson are presented on the same program. On Saturday afternoon "Robinson Crusoe on Clipper Island" will be presented.

"Rhythm" Lawday



Sixth and final day at the Belle and still swinging along at top speed is the lovely operetta "Maytime," one of the greatest stars Nelson Eddy, Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy.

"Maytime" is a brilliant picture, and sets a pace that even Hollywood will find it difficult to follow. Two complete shows will be presented tonight at 7.00 and 9.15. Matinee starts at 2.15 and 4.30, and for your perfect enjoyment please see it from the beginning.

Lon Warneke Turns in Second Win For His New Boss

By SID FEDER

Associated Press Sports Writer

Don't look now, but there's something queer going on at the Bronx baseball business—Champ-Damia, Inc., of the Diamond.

The most famous clouting circus of them all, New York's Yankees, isn't getting its specialty, the same wrecking crew, which created about every long distance record in sight last year and averaged better than a homer a game, isn't hitting the ball enough to scream puff, so far as its capacity for such game blows is concerned.

Although they're slapping out plenty of singles, the Yanks' production is far off the pace behind the grand total of one lone home run, recorded so far this season by Tony Lazzeri, and a single triple.

And the queerest thing about the whole business is that they're right on winning ball games. Despite the crimp put in their famous batting punch by Lou Gehrig's ailing hand and the absence of Joe DiMaggio, who's still away, may be the reason for the lack of extra base hitting, there's Joe's stretched their winning streak to the longest of the young season—five straight.

Hurlers Believing

Maybe, and it only being whispered as yet, it's because the lightly-regarded Yankee pitching is fooling the boys. Certainly could as the week spot, the Gehrig and company flingers have been as high in recent days, despite the absence of holdout Charley Ruffing, as they were early-season when they lowed the enemy 17 hits and four runs in 27 innings. Yesterday Monte Pearson turned in a six-hit job, fanning seven batters, to whip Washington's Senators 4-0, the Nats fifth straight setback.

As if this development wasn't bewildering enough to the Bronx baseball faithful, they're in even more of a either bewilder or stupor on their other representative in the diamond wars, the Giants.

Giants Bombard Dodgers

Bill Terry's Terriers yesterday bombarded Brooklyn's Dodgers 9-0, but Freddy Fitzsimmons' knuckleball baffled the Dodgers with five hits, but even more remarkable were the two homers contributed by the big-hitting Burgess Whitehead, and the one walloped by Fat Freddy himself.

The Giants' two chief rivals remained in the thick of things, Pittsburgh's Pirates gave up an early lead and then took advantage of Bill Lee's wildness in the last inning to down Chicago Cubs 6-5. Lon Warneke threw an eight-hitter at his Cardinal mates to whip Cincinnati's disappointing Reds 6-1.

Cleveland's mighty Indians clubbed Detroit 12-3 behind Earl Whitehill's seven-hit hurling. Chicago White Sox pounded out 18 hits at Monte Stratton pitched the American League's first shutout, blanking the Browns 12-0. Boston defeated the Phillies 6-4.

CLARK ONCE A TRACK ATHLETE

Brawny Scot Never Defeated Before Coming to America

George "Dazzler" Clark, the brawny Scot, who will oppose John Kalan in the main bout of the Queensbury wrestling show at the Arena on Tuesday evening, was quite a track and field athlete before coming to America.

The Scottish champion had plenty of competition throughout the British Isles and Europe before, without so much as one defeat on his record before coming to America.

Henry Piers, champion of Holland, who figured in a thrilling draw with Jim Cotfield at the last show, will meet another tough customer when he jangles with Charlie Strack, the bad boy from Boston, who won from Henry Graber, in the last semi-final. They are former Olympic wrestlers and now both are highly rated in pro ranks.

Ted Key, who figured in the last main bout, will make a popular return visit as man who is a newcomer to Belleville, Joe Maynard of Boston.

TROUT ANGLERS READY FOR DAY

Water is High And Roily And Big Creels Not Expected

May Day! Day of open spaces and gurgling roily waters in streams of this and adjacent countries. Day when invigorated and alerted, high-booted and with colorful flies stuck in the bands of ragged hats, sally forth with pole and dip net in search of the wily, elusive, but delicious and palatable aristocrats of the finny tribe.

The tomorrow Saturday the season opens on these fish and Belleville and district fishermen have already made plans to invade their shaded retreats in Hastings and Northumberland county, where swollen streams invite.

But, according to local fishermen who have annually tracked the trout to their watery hiding places, the trouble this year is that the streams are too swollen for successful fishing. Recent rains have rendered in turgid, silt-laden streams being carried off their high banks, thereby adding further to the muddy condition which has been unfavorable to the fishermen. Big creels of catches are anticipated by the majority who have made plans to be first in their field on Saturday morning as the first streaks of dawn creep across the sky.

This year fishermen will not be required to secure files for their angling. Grubs and worms will continue to be the most dependable bait. It is reported, due to the poor visibility in the chickened waters and the fact that the fish have been feeding on surface food carried into the water by the miniature freshets draining from the land.

Baltimore Orioles Bust of The Season With No Victories

By The Associated Press

Almost as amazing as the triumphant march Toronto Maple Leafs are cutting through the International Baseball League is the slump of the Baltimore Orioles.

While the Leafs were almost universally condemned to the second division by the experts in the early season figuring, the Orioles were looked on as the team to beat. With a batting order, that carries dynamite behind the bunts, the Orioles were regarded as a minor league version of the New York Yankees' "murdering row."

So far this season, however, the Orioles have been batting when the pitching was poor and doing just the opposite when the hurling deserved support.

Such was the case yesterday as the Leafs won from the Bears their fifth straight defeat in as many starts, Montreal trimming Baltimore 2-1 as Marvin Duke baldeniffed the Marylanders with six hits.

Silles Blasted Off Mound

Meanwhile the Leafs were continuing on the unbeaten path as they chalked up victory No. seven with a 14-hit bombardment of the 7-4 decision over Jersey's Giants. Syracuse Chiefs, who trimmed the Leafs in the first two innings the Hawthorne-street Bombers Silles off the mound with an eight-hit attack in the third and fourth innings but managed to lose. John Berly had the little Giants at his mercy during the last seven frames, limiting them to four hits and one run.

Newark Bears kept pace ons game behind Toronto as Alby Donald, a Giant rookie from Binghampton, outpitched the veteran Bill (Hard Luck) Harris, to give the Bezza a 3-1 win over Buffalo. A long home run by Ollie Carnegie in the seventh inning scored the Bears' lone run. Syracuse eked out a 4-3 victory over Rochester.

All of which has to do with the fact that the second Yankee invasion ended in practically the same manner as the first one, when Max Baer's dream balloon of English shekels was rudely pricked by the jagging left of Tommy Farr.

The bout, reports state, caused a crowd of 1,000 British patrons to go into paroxysms of laughter . . . And if any of your lovers and gals have ever attended a cricket match or a football game, where the most applause given an appearance on the field is a slight clapping of the hands and a low-throated "Arrr" you can well imagine what happen to cause a crowd of the most stolid spectators on earth to erupt into gales of laughter. . . .

Henri Piret, the Dutch wrestling champion who proved to be such a crowd pleaser here the other night will return to Belleville next week defeated Ed. (Don) Geraghty, Olympic semi-finals in Amsterdam in 1928.

And now another baseball season has climbed over the edge of the horseshide horizon and is threatening to take a peep at the new rookie glory which to date has dropped Bob Feller in a halo of glamor . . . . Likewise a likewise a likewise a starboard-side shucker. Bob Lemon, who came down with slarging consistency in some schmo loop down in the Coastal belt. . . . . Archie Templeton of the same eighteen is the age and Winston-Salem is the zone, where the best-eyes of the big leagues are looking to see what the rookies have through his paces . . . His record today is 28 strikeouts in 22 innings . . . Whooooo . . . that makes Feller look like a second-rater.

The other day a group of the major loop scouts went on a fishing trip, but one scout seemed to be to do say fishing. . . . They all returned up at the hotel where Templeton was slated to pitch.

The young Phenom, obliged the big shots by throwing those fast and fanning fifteen batters IN A ROW . . . . Wow, how those scouts licked in their seats and reached for the telephones . . . . And now comes the mad scramble to get Templeton's name on a contract . . . . The scout thinking that he had the inside dope of 10 G's to put his name on the dotted line . . . . . .

The referees are getting rapidly getting to the point, where he wants to be seen and not heard up in packages of speed, and hockey apparently is the answer to his prayer. . . .

But that fact will not prevent nearly 140,000 Britishers from cramming the ramparts of Wembley Stadium to the doors on Saturday, when Preston North End and Sunderland clash for the English Football Cup. West End Dukes and Darby and Joan shoulders with Covent Garden's "Arry and "Arriet", Sunderland and P.N.E. supporters will jam the stadium wearing the colors of their respective teams.

The Coronation will be temporarily relegated to the limbo of forgotten things as the biggest event in the sports calendar of England gets under way . . . . And the light little lads will await with baited breath the outcome of the struggle, which means fame to his public, than the seventh game of a World's Series hanging game does to the average American fan. . . . . .

CALLING 'EM Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Just how many lacrosse clubs will officially be represented at the Central Ontario Lacrosse Association meeting in Belleville tonight would not wish to gamble with. Unless the Quinte-ville artists stage a right-about-face Peterboro, R. C. A. P., Port Hope-Cobourg (Combines) and Belleville may be doomed to be on hand ready for the fray. Up until a recent date, however, the possibilities of Oshawa and Norwood continuing in the group were anything but encouraging. Up in the Motor City they have sufficient players to make up a good intermediate club, but no sponsor or sugar daddy is in sight. Out in Norwood it is the lack of adequate organization, or perhaps the fact that Peterboro is getting down to serting the ranks of the Norwood-ites and we may see the former behind the goal posts for the "Flyers."

The local lacrosse moniors received by Central Ontario "ers" of their own, install bleachers, and lighting equipment along similar lines of that being introduced in Peterboro. Just how the local lacrosse executive means to finance such a large project, we are at a loss to know, but anybow that's the lay-out. President Mose Morey and Secretary Jack Bocsion of the Belleville lacrosse box field will be at the corner of Mary St. and West Dundas, nearly opposite to the entrance into the Belleville Arena. The location should be ideal, best to bear off a spacious field, erect bleachers and install lighting equipment all in the same breath, really is some underestimated, of course that is their prerogative—shh!.

If the lacrosse moguls can finance nocturnal exhibitions of the puntied-stick pastime there is better than an even chance the game will flourish again in these parts. One of the chief reasons baseball has dropped into practical oblivion is the fact, that games have to be played in the afternoons, when the general run of the townsfolk are employed. Hockey still attracts bumper crowds by even this, and of course if Belleville would get out of the village class and adopt daylight saving, as all other cities have and thriving industrial centres on the continent have, well maybe there would be some salvation for summer sports. Otherwise it's curtains for good.

There is still ample room for junior baseball material in Belleville, Last night, when the initial baseball practice was called at the collegiate grounds, there was a scarcity of youthful baseball material in evidence. Surely Coach Woodley had close 30 or more lusty aged kids out answering the first call of the season, but under the circumstances we firmly believe there should have been at least 50 boys under the 20 year age limit on hand. Believe it or not there were 50 or more juvenile hurlers on hand, including Joe Kelleher, "Lefty" Weeks and Ralph "High-pockets" Carbide. With the juvenile juniors in the South Hastings League, Coach Woodley will need at least five proven pitchers, so there is ample room for some more youthful moondemen on the roster of the local junior club, we would imagine.

After last night's workout, however, we feel assured, that an intensive drive for players will be on ago, will be on hand at the next practice. The present assembly interested and deeply-will carry the good news to the youths and wealth of the community. There are no favorites being shown at the Manager Bill Cook or Coach Woodley, as the batters take to the Fair Grounds next Monday night we look for a bumper crowd, junior baseball practice being called for Monday, Wednesday and Friday from now until the season opens on Victoria Day.

The Kinsmen's motor show culminated in a blaze of glory last night, when many hockey notables of the Belleville and district, including local O.H.A. champions, President Mayor Meredith, Secretary Willis Houlet, of the O.H.A. personally congratulated both the Belleville Redmen and the R.C.A.F. "flyers" upon their achievements, but the feature of the evening came when "Dit" Clapper of the Boston Bruins and Bob Davidson of the Toronto Maple Leafs, appeared in person and answered questions fired by Master-of-ceremonies Lee Pearsall. Each member of the Redmen club and the Flyers received their O. H. A. medal plus an O.H.A. fell-cloth crest, suitably inscribed, both of which will confidently be cherished by Eddie Thomas' charges and the Airmen. It was doubtedly one of the biggest hockey receptions ever from prowess on the ice, ever witnessed locally and was sponsored by the Kinsmen in splendid style.

A few hours prior to the evening's entertainment, "King" Clancy and Sweeney Jackson aided to be examined, both being unable to appear owing to pressing business. Those local hockey celebrities rendered their personal apologies and added that they would be present later. Their inability to be present was unavoidable, President Norm Garbutt assured viewers.

Time and tide await no man, but we have beheld in the questions and answers given in and replied by Bob Davidson, Dit Clapper and Jo-Jo Graboski, who was also an interesting figure in the discussion and in fairness to the Kinsmen Club we would publish these questions, but time and space would not permit it today. In all the Kinsmen's Club report will be a success and included public favor, the crowds topped local capacity who still can stand a little financial assistance for his trip to the fair of Mom, however.

Matchmaker Jack Corcoran has completed his card for next Tuesday night's wrestling show in the Arena, that features George Clark, Scottish Highlander, versus John Kalan, former Canadian champion. This bout marks the first meeting of Clark and Kalan, and should prove a pip-per with the scientific son of Scotland, who has taken to the American style of wrestling, like the proverbial duck to water. A new face was added to the card in Joe Maynard, who meets Ted Key, the California kid, who won many friends at the Arena a fortnight ago.

New York, April 30.—(AP)— Our Jints (National League champions, too) were hitting only (count 20) times in the season when Van Mungo got through with them Wednesday . . . Dodger fans had a good thing chanting: "Swing high, swing low, you can't hit Mungo", as the big fellow breezed his fireball across . . . (Bill Terry made wholesale shifts in his batting order yesterday and the Jints fattened their individual and collective averages at the (Nix) Nole to Red Ruffing) You had better come on home while the coming is good, Red. . . The enemy has averaged only 2 1-2 runs per game off Yankee pitching so far.

Fred Perry, the tennis star, who saw his first baseball game in Washington the other day, still is looking for the pitcher's box . . . When talking about ambitious fight managers, don't overlook Abe Ketcher, pilot of heavyweight Eddie Blunt. Blunt could have had Tony Galento's place on the Max Schmeling card Wednesday night, but Ketcher demanded more money, than the Hipp paid Joe Louis for saying Jorge Brescia. Hey!. The fight biz is booming Hasn't Jack Dempsey been quoted as saying that he will be up on the box of Man o' War. He selected Pompoon, as the horse he would back in the Derby, however.

Willie Saunders of Calgary, winner in 1935, with Canada, and Johnny Gilbert, one of the country's former middle athletes from Pittsburgh Kan., also selected War Admiral.

Although alone in selecting Pompoon, Henry Richards nevertheless was outspoken in favor of the colt he will ride.

"Pompoon was the best two-year old I ever rode and I expect him to go on", said the jockey who won the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap with Rosemond and the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby with Fairy Hill.

JOCKEYS SELECT DERBY FAVORITES

Reaping Reward And Pompoon Picked by The Majority

By EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, April 30.—(AP)—A "jury" of 11 jockeys rode ten today but selected a half-dozen horses as the probable winner of the Kentucky Derby, May 8.

The jockeys cast their ballots for the "Big Three", the E. R. Bradley entry of Brooklyn and Billionaire, Hostilly from the Texas-owned three D's stout farm and Maxwell Howard's Scenesahter.

Reaping Reward, which has yet to face the barrier this year after beating Pompoon in the New England Futurity last fall, received five votes, second picked Admiral, an easy winner of the Chesapeake stakes last Saturday, while the remaining four were scattered among Hostilly, Pompoon, Scenesahter and the Bradley Entry.

Charlie Kurtsinger, who set the pace for Pompoon with Twenty Grand in 1932, naturally voted for War Admiral as he will be up on the Son of Man o' War. He selected Pompoon, as the horse he would back in the Derby, however.

Willie Saunders of Calgary, winner in 1935, with Canada, and Johnny Gilbert, one of the country's former middle athletes from Pittsburgh Kan., also selected War Admiral.

Although alone in selecting Pompoon, Henry Richards nevertheless was outspoken in favor of the colt he will ride.

"Pompoon was the best two-year old I ever rode and I expect him to go on", said the jockey who won the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap with Rosemond and the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby with Fairy Hill.

One night, when she had succeeded in getting a promise from Anne to attend a party with her and David, she dropped by Lotuland at the closing hour and waited in the chattering dressing room from Anne to change. David would be unable to meet them until one thirty so the ed sidewalks to a small white-tiled two girls linked arms and strolled through the crowded, brightly lighted restaurant and Broadway. Presently leaned their elbows on the marble table, looked at the strange pandemerate crowd in the restaurant and streaming past the windows, and streaming past the windows, looked at each other. Irene ordered scrambled eggs and coffee and forced Anne to do the same, stating dryly that she could stand a little weight.

"Golly, I'm almost summer's over," she remarked gustily, once these preliminaries were concluded.

"Yes, it's been awful," Anne agreed on a weary sigh.

"You look tired, honey."

"I am tired." At the note of sympathy Anne was instantly on the verge of tears. Hastily she blinked her eyes and swallowed a mouthful of scalding coffee.

"It does take it out of you," Irene suggested quickly, noting Anne's distress and changing the subject. "I'm sure though that something will turn up for me in a few days and then you can get out of that dump—had no idea till tonight what a dump it was. If I ever saw girls on the make—that crew tonight—well!"

"Some of the girls are all right," Anne put in defensively.

"Those girls must have stayed home tonight," Irene commented coldly. "Never mind, I'm bound to land any minute now. I had two or three good nibbles just this afternoon. By next week maybe you won't have to be mauled by every cheap John that's got a notion you ain't slummy are cut off the same bolt of cloth."

"That's not it," Anne muttered thickly. But when Irene, who had glanced out the window in search of David, asked her what she had said, she only dropped her hot, tear-colored head and answered, "Nothing."

"Meaning Stanley again?"

"I know you're sick to death of hearing about it," Anne said with a gallant, apologetic smile. "But sometimes, Irene," she burst out passionately, "how long does a person feel this way? Isn't there ever any ending?"

"Everything ends, kid."

"Not this." Anne whispered. "You handled it wrong," Irene observed judicially, pretending she had not heard. "If you'd only listened to me—"

"Please, Irene, please don't tell me again what I should have done. There's nothing to do when a man loves another girl." Anne laughed unhappily. "You can't exactly get out an injunction."

"You really think he loves her?" Irene queried, going straight to the point. Anne swallowed, nodded. Then Irene, determined to thresh the matter out once and for all, hardly noticing Anne's distress, began: "Look, kid, you've got to get over it. Stanley Byrne's no good for you. He's married and he's a cad. He didn't know it was her and before I could stop him it popped out. He—" She broke off.

"What else popped out?" Anne's voice was lifeless.

"Well, that Richard was going to marry Nancy, that they are secretly engaged."

"Well, can you beat that!" Irene exclaimed, deliberately. "Can you beat that?" she murmured, aside. "Which one do you suppose she'll eventually settle on?" she demanded ironically, after a space.

"Stanley."

"After she brings her affair with Richard to a successful close, you mean. Well, I'll be damned, she's choke!" Irene said viciously. "Choke to death and be a long time at it."

Anne said nothing at all.

"Personally," Irene ventured, a speculative look directed on her silent roommate, "I'd say that Stanley Byrne figures in this affair in something of a washout. He hands you a lot of dope about how he's worked, and hard and pure and then turns around and swallows Nancy Carr. I'd say it wasn't work, marriage or love with him."

"I don't care what he's worth," Anne said, eyes blurred and she stirred her coffee, stone cold now, stopped a little without noticing. There was another long silence broken when Irene wondered restlessly what was keeping David. Then Irene asked abruptly:

"Where does Ray Ravel come in?"

"Ray?"

"Sure, does Graeme plan to drown her or what?"

"I haven't seen Ray for over a month as I told you. Nothing's happened to her, but I happen to know that Graeme's not going to do the same boat with me."

"Don't you believe her?" Irene observed coldly. "Sometimes you're so innocent, Anne. I'm surprised you're on such good terms with Graeme as you a thing really, but you can bet that Graeme's not going to do you in. Do you imagine that Graeme would have offered to give Ray a Jaguar if Ray hadn't said he'd not had some mighty good hold on him? Do you think for Anne Gray Claus?"

"What hold—" Anne had begun, when she halted, her cheeks red.

"That's it," Irene said. "How to see why Ray might disturb Richard's sleep at nights?"

"I'm sure you're wrong." Anne protested over a conscience-stricken pang. She had not thought of Ray for weeks. Was it possible that Ray in desperate trouble? Poor little Ray had had no chance, had been doomed to misery and heartache from the moment she met Richard Graeme. To be a man like Graeme! Cold and cruel, ruthless and calculating! How could Ray? How could Nancy?

"Wouldn't the Stinson Carrs be delighted to learn that their darling was mixed up in such a mess?" Irene remarked with relish.

Anne sighed, swept together her gloves and pocketbook and rose just as David, profuse and apologetic rushed in the door, saying all at once that he had story had detained him, that he had a taxi waiting, and when would they go, cheerio! When Anne managed to get a word in she asked to be dropped at home.

"Why?" he demanded.

"Not because you're late, David, honestly it's because I'm so tired, so awfully tired."

David's expression changed Irene shot him a warning glance but he ignored it. He continued to look at Anne and steadily the lines grew more hurt and puzzled. His eyes grew bright.

"It that's the way you feel, ok." he said, quietly.

"I don't feel any way, David, really I don't—"

"Don't tell me," the man said roughly. "I know where I stand with this post-mortem at all. If I were Stanley Bye you'd be willing enough."

"Be still, be still this minute!" She was tense and trembling.

"Listen, Anne," he began, gentle once more and pleading. "Get a slant on yourself, get a sense of perspective. Snap out of it. Don't make a tragedy out of something that doesn't exist."

The girl went to pieces.

"A lot you know about it," she cried, "a lot you and Irene know about it. Both of you keep yapping, yapping, yapping at me to get over it, to snap out of it, to quit thinking about Stanley Bye. What do you think love is, something that can be turned on and off like a water faucet? Something you can choose to take or choose not to take? I never left! Well, it's not. Do you think I've no pride, no dignity? Do you imagine I want to be this way, that I want to feel this way, that nothing till I go nearly mad —never mind!"

She made a hopeless little gesture and her head fell on the desk very still facing them, her face ashen, her eyes closed. She fell lightly.

"Come on, let's go," Irene said, embarrassed, rattled, cautious.

Silently David and Anne followed her out to the street.

HE MUST MARRY ME

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

About four o'clock the following afternoon, Anne dropped by Lotuland. In her bag were several spools of thread and a freshly purchased packet of needles; she planned an hour of serious remodelling before meeting Irene for an early dinner that was to wipe out the ugliness of the preceding evening. Her mind on David, she rang the elevator bell. Jeff the brass-buttoned starter, surprised at her presence in the afternoon rallied to speak with his usual hospitable impudence and Anne, as usual, listened not at all.

She alighted at the second floor. Occasionally the orchestra practiced in the afternoon but the dancing ballroom was deserted, strange somehow in its emptiness and unwonted, echoing silence. At the windows paper shades were tightly drawn and against the soiled, pink walls chairs and tables were telescoped together. As always the air smelled stately of cigarettes, cheap perfume, heavily waved floors. The girl viewed the scene with an absent, accustomed eye and turned quickly toward the dressing room. Pondering a torn flounce on the black, she opened the dressing room door.

Someone inside was weeping violently.

Instantly Anne saw the small crumpled figure sprawled suddenly on the divan, abandoned to a passion of grief, the blind, tearing grief of one who weeps in solitude. A moment she hesitated and then she swiftly entered.

"Ray!" she called softly. "Ray". The black untidy bob narrowed deeper and deeper into the dirty cushions. There was no break in the frantic sobs. Anne went to raise a window, came back and sank to the couch. She did not say anything.

"Go away," Ray mumbled.

"It's Anne."

"Leave me alone, leave me alone, I tell you."

"I'd like to help".

"Nobody can help."

Anne did not move. Minutes passed, ten minutes, fifteen. Gradually the sobs diminished to a series of exhausted hiccoughs. There were a few long sighing breaths and then silence. Ray had cried herself out. She kept her head buried and for a long time the two girls went silent in the silent room. At last the younger lifted a blotched, swollen face.

"What do you want?" she asked sullenly.

"Weren't we friends once?"

"What of it?" Ray muttered. She added roughly, "I've not got a friend in the world, what of that? What do I care? I don't give a damn."

"Ray, you've got me. I tried to see you, you know, I tried, but you wouldn't see me. Don't you remember?"

Anne put her hand over the other's hot little fists.

"I don't need your help or anyone else for that matter," Ray said fiercely. "I can take care of myself. I always have. What are you doing here anyhow? Did you come to spy on me, to stick your nose in my business?"

"No," said Anne patiently, trying with everything that was in her to make the other understand. "How would I guess you'd be here? I came to mend a flounce on one of my dresses. I brought along a needle and thread. See!"

She opened her bag. Ray neither looked nor seemed to hear the explanation she had demanded. Her young, hopeless eyes were fastened on the gray sunshaft outside the window. Once she raised her hand to her mouth. Otherwise she sat motionless.

"Would you rather I left?" Anne asked timidly, after a while.

"I came here to see Richard Graeme," Ray said dully, again seeming to miss the girl's words. "I came here to see Richard," she repeated. "He's not here."

"He didn't tell me he'd be here," she went on in a kind of bitter, savage monotone. "He knew I'd be there, that! He won't talk to me on the phone any more, he doesn't write letters without even opening them, he's told the man at his apartment to give me no one of the buildings. I thought he might be here, that's all."

Anne felt descend upon her the helplessness of the underhearted who face another's misery and know there is nothing to say. No use to prattle of pride, of dignity. What did they mean to Ray or to any suffering girl? No use to give her the glib, torturing phrases of newspaper love columns—A dead love is never forgotten, but it may be spared fully as she was, a man wants always to be the pursuer. What solace there?

"Ray," she began, her own eyes brimming. "Ray, does it help to know that, too—that I know how you feel, that I—" Her voice died to a whisper.

"You don't know!" Ray corrected wearily, not turning her head. She continued with a touch of her old haughtiness, "I don't care about how you feel, any more than you care how I do. Why should I? Why should you? Oh God, I can't bear it."

Her shoulders sagged and her dark head dropped in despair to her breast. Anne was utterly unprepared for her sudden fury or for the sudden blasting anger that shot from her eyes. Ray dashed one clenched fist against the wall.

"It can't get away with it!" she cried savagely, her young face hard and ugly. "If he thinks I'll stand for this, he's wrong. I got some rights. . . ."

"What can you do? Anne wondered.

"I'll show Mr. Graeme, what's what," Ray blazed, her wild hurt, her pain, her muddled together. "He can't throw me over for Park Avenue. I guess if Simeon Carr hears about me . . . I'll get to him as sure as my name is Ray Ravel."

"Oh, Ray, Ray!, Anne protested her amazement at the other's hopeless lost fierceness.

"Don't Ray me. Don't talk to me. What do you know about it? What do you care? Do you think I'm going to let Dick marry Nancy Carr and leave me like—like this. He's got to marry me. I've got to get married. Now, do you understand?"

"I loved him," Ray said pitifully in the dead silence. "I love him with my whole soul, to think about—things." She bent her head on her locked hands and began to cry once more. Again Anne extended a fumbling hand, and this time Ray clutched it and pressed it upon her lap. But presently she rose and wandered to the mirror. She scrubbed at her tired, tearful eyes and drenched lashes.

"I guess you think I'm dirt now."

"No, Ray."

"Well, it's all in a lifetime, I guess," said Ray with an attempt at lightness even more terrible and more touching than her former bitterness. "I'm not going to let Richard throw me over now. I can't you see, I can't."

Presently Irene passed the closed door, continued smartly down the corridor, then diminished into nothingness. Both girls recognized Richard's step and both recognized his voice as he hummed a favorite air, which, like the footsteps, swelled and then diminished.

"Goodbye, girls, I'm through. I say goodbye to you.

Much as she hated it Anne met

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

MARKET COMMENT

It would appear that many people with ready cash did not place their orders on Thursday in the hope of obtaining bargains and the rain of 1,600,000 shares.

volume of such orders was sufficient to take care of any marginal selling. The market continued in many quarters in that current condition until it took cheap a few months from now.

Today conditions are entirely different. Business is just beginning to expand, and is on the road to normalcy. Money is plentiful and rates are as low as ever in history. Brokers' loans are negligible compared to the total value of securities listed. More consideration is being given by investors to intrinsic merit.

So far the market continues to retrace the 1926 as well as the "scenic" tendency. It would seem it should be a safe buying month but in the meantime sharp trading profits may be snared—and waves of selling ma yprevent investment opportunities arising, but the most careful may not be able to ignore.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE TRADING

Toronto, April 30.—(CP)—Closing the month with a cheerful note, the Toronto Market exerted a good portion of the losses collected through the early part of the week. Trading was slow in the early hours and prices a bit heavy in spots but confidence developed around noon and bids were raised right along the line. Metals and the Western Oils were prominent in the rise while the Industrials posed some with gains. Gains ranged up to three points among the leading Base Metals, Golds and heavy Industrials.

International Nickel pushed forward to peak its 52 mark for a net gain of better than three points while Smelters added about 4 points. Hudson Bay Mining showed two each and gains of 10 to 25 cents were booked for Sherritt, Coast Copper, Fend Orelle, Sudbury Basin, Walte-Amulet and Aldermac. Ventures and Dominion Steel were a few cents each, Eldorado had a gain of 26 cents and Cadla was steady.

Senior golds were strong from the opening and at the close net advances of 1 to 2 points were showing for Dome, Lake Shore and McIntyre.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Apr. 30 (AP) — The stock market today wiped out a large portion of its recent losses as steels, rails and industrials specialties climbed fractions to six or more points.

While the ticker tape loitered after an opening speed-up, favored issues held around their best prices near the final hour. The sharp upward reversal induced some profit-selling but transactions were restricted for the last hour. Transfers were at the rate of 1,600,000 shares.

TWO DEAD AFTER SHOOTING AFFRAY

Wife Instantly Killed And Husband Died in Hospital

Halifax, April 30.—(CP)—Albert W. Chantard died in hospital early today, bringing to two the deaths from a midnight shooting that took the life of his wife Margaret.

Police pushed a probe into the double shooting, but with only a few hours left of the inquest into the couple's 16-year-old son, Donald, to work on.

Questioning of Donald, after he found the bodies in the basement kitchen of their home, has revealed little to police. He heard no shots or words from his parents, nor did any of the roomers in the three-storey house.

Obituary

FRANKLIN C. McMASTER

A well known and highly respected resident of Belleville in the person of Franklin C. McMaster, grocer, at one Park Street, died suddenly shortly after one o'clock this afternoon at his home after suffering a stroke. He had suffered he a heart attack while he was driving his car on South John Street. Mr. McMaster who owns a farm near Colborne was going after some potatoes on that farm to accompany him to the farm for an afternoon drive. Before reaching the friend's home, he suffered a weak spell, his car finally grazing a post. A member of the family immediately got into the car and with one hand around the patient and the other used for steering, the man was rushed to his home but he succumbed shortly after being rushed inside.

The late Mr. McMaster was born in Campbellford, 64 years ago, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McMaster. In early life he conducted a grocery store at Havelock and Lindsay and later a Hardware store at Brighton.

About two years ago he bought a small parcel of land west of the city and later began erecting the present home on Park street, where he conducted a grocery store. He enjoyed a wide clientele and was highly respected in his community and his demise will be regretted by a wide circle of friends. He was a member of the Board of Management. Fraternally he was a member of the I.O.O.F. in Havelock, Ontario. There are no children nor immediate relatives and plans are varying. Arrangements have not been made for the funeral.

World's Fair Unit Cornerstone is Laid

New York—In a flag bedecked and canopied setting which contrasted with gloomy skies and bleak dreariness of the weather, Grover A. Whalen, president of the New York World's Fair Corporation, assisted by city officials, laid the cornerstone for the administration building, the first structure to be started for the 1939 World's Fair site on the fair.

About 1,000 invited guests occupied the sheltered speaking platform and reviewing stand and units directed in front of the platform. Many uninvited spectators also braved the cold and rain to witness the event. Rain to witness the ceremonies.

The exercises included brief talks by city officials and the filling of a metal box to be sealed within the cornerstone containing mementoes of American life and history. The box, being also a repository for the Central Parkway Extension near the Long Island Railroad right-of-way.

MANY GARDENS

Edmonton (CP)—Garden enthusiasm stormed the Edmonton Horticultural Society offices here as plots on which to grow vegetables and flowers. About 7,000 lots have been leased at nominal cost and the remainder assigned to relief recipients free.

Notify Police of Metal Thefts At Once, Inspector Advises

Wholesale Stripping of Farm Implements Continues

ADVISE FROM POLICE

Co-operation Likely to Result in Early Capture of Culprits

With alarming sequence theft of metal from farm implements continues to be reported throughout this district. Daily we are confronted with angry and irritated farmers who rise in the morning to find their rollers, binders and other farm implements stripped of every piece of metallic substance. There is no doubt a ring is being sold for scrap but unless those to suffer such losses immediately communicate with our office we are helpless in the matter. Lots of scrap metals are being shipped out of Belleville by rail, according to the price of these commodities has advanced," explained Detective Sergeant Gardner of the Ontario Provincial Police today.

Housing Implements

In the majority of cases where farm implements have been stripped of metallic parts, the implements are housed in the big working barner on a back lot, where its parts are exposed to spring work." Inspector Gardner suggested to the Ontario Intelligencer today, that the farm owners of this district would be well advised to house their farm implements for the next few weeks, reiterating the fact that this piece of ice is recognized as a hardship to the farmers under the prevailing conditions of soaring harrowing, rolling and seeding.

Only the Wood Left

Provincial Police yesterday were called to a farm in Tyendinaga where a farmer's roller had been completely stripped of all the wooden shafts and wooden platform being found where the roller had been left for the night. "Of course when the farmers report these robberies we are simply helpless to assist in possible recovery. What should be done is for the farmer on discovering such a theft to immediately contact the Sergeant Thompson or myself we can co-operate with the farmer in conversation with Dr. Doyle, Provincial Police Magistrate, in regards to this lad and he suggests the boy be placed under suspended sentence before Your Worship," informed the Crown Attorney. "The farmer can then be the alleged accomplice of Pickle in Your Worship's presence and the pleaded guilty as charged. Mr. R. D. Arnott, appearing for the lad would then be asked to accept the seed of a suspended sentence in favour of the lads which we have objected, stating the accused had been before the court on several occasions before. "I'll enlarge this matter along with the former, Your Worship," replied His Worship.

Fred W. Day, Belleville, was found guilty of failing to appear and sentenced to serve two months in the county jail. Day's relief officials who were "found in" paid ten dollars and costs, all pleading guilty following the charges of the week in the Day case. The above case was the only one following the organized police raid on the Day Common Council, headed by Sergeant Arthur Harman some time ago. S. L. Howell appeared for the defence.

Three Icebriales and two H.T. A. cases, all minor offences, terminated the court.

Wrestling Best Game For This Fellow

Ed Kennedy, a 450-pound San Francisco youngster, has decided that he can score most heavily as a wrestler, and he's in training there now preparatory on a bout. Kennedy's a little over six feet high—three of four inches over. If many like this chap get into the grunt and groan game it will make it hard on some of the present wrestlers who have visions of winning the championship.

America's Cup Challenger Launched

T. O. M. Sopwith's America's Cup challenger, Endeavour II, takes to the water at Gosport, England. No ceremonies were held, but a full crew captained by George Williams, was on board. Under the America's Cup rules, Endeavour II will cross the Atlantic under her own canvas as much as possible. When sailing is not possible she will be towed by a tug and vessel that will tend her.

DAILY SHORT STORY

The Winnah!

By Donald S. Aitken

Both dinner and surprise were registered on George Harrison's face when he opened the door of his apartment to find Miss Emily standing on the threshold.

If he hadn't known that old lady better he might have thought she'd been imbibing a little too freely. Her bonnet was askew, wisps of grey hair stuck out at odd places. An umbrella in the crook of her arm handle was clutched firmly in her right hand.

"Aunt Emily!"

Aunt Emily marched through into the living room. "Just a little surprise visit, George, my dear," she told the tall broad-shouldered young man. "I was passing through and thought I'd stop over and spend the week-end with you." She gave a deep breath and then let it out with a rush. "Oh dear, oh dear."

"Aunty—what's the matter? You look upset."

"I am upset!" A battle glint lighted up the old lady's eyes as she plunked down the broken umbrella on the living room table. She fingered the strings of her bonnet.

"Oh, my way over from the hotel" she continued, "I glanced in through the window of one of those awful pool rooms. Just inside! two little boys were fighting! Imbs with boxing gloves on. Of course I went in to separate them. A brute of a man tried to stop me. I had to use my umbrella to defend myself. I don't think he'll ever lay hands on a lady again." Aunt Emily would have to arrive at a time like this! Tonight he was scheduled to take part in the third round of an amateur boxing tournament down at the Benton City Athletic club. A win over Dusty Davis tonight would put him in the semi-finals.

Now he would have to forfeit the fight and drop out of the tournament. Aunt Emily was a determined woman—especially at "fisted" of fighting. She particularly objected to pugilism—professional or amateur.

If only he could attend without her knowing! An idea suddenly struck him. He went over to the telephone and dialed a number.

In response to the phone call Norman Green arrived at the apartment shortly before seven o'clock. George had explained everything. He led Norman over to Aunt Emily on the couch.

"Aunty, I want you to meet a very good friend of mine, Norman Green. He has a couple of tickets and has asked me over to take you to a show tonight."

Aunt Emily graciously acknowledged the introduction. Then she peered over the top of her glasses at her nephew and George. "Will you coming?"

"Sorry" George made a grimace. "I wish I could, but I've got studying to do. You see, exams are next week so—"

A smile of approval spread over the old lady's face. "It was nice of you to think of me, George, but I wouldn't dream of going out anywhere without you. I'll sit here on the couch and read while you do your studying. After that dreadful affair on my way over here this afternoon I really need the rest."

George led Norman over into the kitchenette. "It's no good," he groaned. "You'll have to go down and tell them I'm forfeiting the bout to Dusty Davis."

After Norman had gone George arranged his law books on the living room table and maintained a pretense of studying. From time to time Aunt Emily glanced across and beamed benign smiles on her seemingly industrious nephew.

At last thirty Aunt Emily made coffee in the kitchenette. George put away his books and they ate a light supper together. Then George walked back with his aunt to her hotel.

Returning to his apartment he found Norman waiting outside the door. Norman had gone down and slipped him on the back. "Congratulations George! You're fighting next week in the semi-finals."

George stared at his friend blankly. "Have you gone crazy?"

"Dusty nothing—silent! Just before I got down to the club someone called up about Dusty Davis. They said he couldn't fight tonight and was forfeiting the bout to you."

"Davis forfeited to me?"

"Yeah. Seems he was in Hale's pool room this afternoon when an old dame came in and started to separate two kids having a set-to with the gloves. Dusty tried to get the old lady out. She conked him over the coconut with an ivory-handled umbrella and gave him an slight concussion. The doctor wouldn't let him enter the ring tonight!"

MARMORA

Marmora, Apr. 30.—Under auspices of St. Paul's Laymen's Association a three act comedy drama "Clearing Skies" was ably presented at the town hall, Marmora, on Tuesday evening by a cast representing the B.Y.P.U. of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, Belleville. The play was under the direction of Miss Mildred Lloyd and introductory remarks were made by Dural Dean. R. Caldwell and Rev. A. G. Sinclair of Belleville who accompanied the cast. A good sized audience followed the progress of studying. From time to time Aunt Emily glanced across and beamed benign smiles on her seemingly industrious nephew.

Appreciation of the visit of the cast was voiced by W. J. Cotterell, president of the Laymen's Association to which Rev. A. G. Sinclair and Miss Mildred Lloyd paid fitting response.

TARZAN'S QUEST

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Brown turned restlessly, and Sborov froze with terror; then the pilot resumed the regular breathing of sleep. Alexis reached out and seized the ape handle. Fixing his mad eyes on the forehead of the sleeping man, he raised the weapon aloft!

Meanwhile the excited Nkima travelled farther and farther north in pursuit of the fledgling bird, bearing with him the message that would have meant so much to Tarzan. But at length, in a sustained flight, the bird vanished, and Nkima saw it no more.

Then the little monkey noticed the paper in the end of the stick. This recalled Tarzan to his mind, and he determined to return to the ape-man and his Waziri; but at that moment was attracted by two figures on the trail below. He dropped down to investigate.

Never had he seen a white man so strangely arrayed, like a black savage. The man filled him with fear, but his companion was of the gentle mould. Curiously, Nkima followed them—the dainty white lady, who was Annette, and the Negro Kavuru who was her captor.

CANADIAN DEPARTMENT STORES LIMITED

Tweed and District

Tweed.—An interesting program was given on Monday evening by the girls of the C.G.I.T. group under the direction of the leader Miss Bessie Gordon, B.A., and the assistant leader, Miss Reta Pallister, B.A. The entertainment was opened with a selection by the High School Orchestra, under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Stuart, B.A. Those comprising the orchestra were: Marjorie Tummon, piano; Marion Tummon, Marion Tarry, Ruth Nicholson, Myrtle Dark, guitars, Audrey Scott, John Locke, violins, Stan. Luffman, banjo, Jack Tummon, baritone horn, Enid Connor, xylophone.

Miss Gordon gave a brief sketch of the activities of the girls during the winter when music, handicraft, drama and other activities are considered. She also referred to the C.G.I.T. camp at Moira Lake in the summer when some 60 girls gather together for a ten-days' holiday which provides a splendid opportunity for the development of the teen-age girl.

The second play was a scene from Victor Hugo's master work, "Les Miserables". The cast was composed of: Margaret Luffman, Marion Tummon, Ana Thompson, Phyllis Austin and Helen Dier.

Mr. Stan. Luffman rendered a guitar solo in the intermission. Rev. Nicholson complimented the girls on their excellent programme.

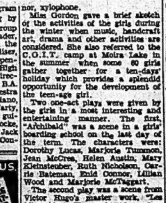
Miss Marine Thompson, daughter of Dr. J. A. Thompson was taken on Sunday to Kingston General Hospital for an appendix operation. She is making favourable progress according to the latest report.

Mr. W. D. Courtney, caretaker of Tweed Consolidated School, was called to Picton on Thursday by the serious illness of a brother.

Kay Connor, eleven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Connor, of Vancouver, and niece of Mrs. S. H. Connor, of Tweed, has been successful for the second successive year in obtaining the highest marks in all Canada in a record examination in violin, conducted by the Trinity College of Music, London, England. Similar successes for the next two years will be rewarded with a scholarship entitling the holder to a year's study in London. Kay and her parents were guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Connor for a short time last August.

On Sunday evening, May 9th, Tweed Citizens' Band will give a band concert in Canadiana Hall at 8.30. Assisting in the programme will be a choir of 70 voices from Tweed Consolidated School, under the direction of Miss Lois Richardson, teacher of music in the school. The children will sing a number of songs composed especially for the Coronation. It is expected that Mr. G. Roy Fenwick, Director of Music for the Department of Education of the Province of Ontario, will present and will act as chairman.

A merry scramble of romance, rhythm, and rousing comedy is "Wakiki Wedding", featuring Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Martha Raye and Shirley Ross, coming to the Rialto Saturday and Monday.



NEW REFEREE FOR GAME REQUESTED

Windsor Fords Not Satisfied With Officials in Basketball Series

Vancouver, April 30.—(CP)—Decision on Windsor Fords' request that a change in referees be made for remaining games of the Windsor-University of Detroit series in Canadian Men's Basketball final here, was in the hands of the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association Executive today.

Walter Hardwick, Vancouver, President of the C.A.B.A., said last night he had wired executives for a vote on suggested importation of a Canadian official to team with Henry Viney of Lethbridge, Alta., in handling remaining games of the best-of-five series.

After the collegians won their second straight victory Wednesday night, Coach Eddie Dawson of Fords charged referee-inconsistency and asked a change of officials for tonight's third game and others if played.
